TRIBUNE PLANT A MECHANICAL WONDERLAND!

Composing Room World's Largest.

Seventy-one years ago this week The Tribune's plant and equipment were destroyed in the great fire of 1871. In a matter of hours, The Tribune was publishing again. Its steady rise to leadership in its field has been a story of epochal achievements in the graphic arts and newspaper production. This article is the first of a series that will take the reader behind the scene and explore for him the mechanical wonders of The World's Greatest Newspaper.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Off a marble corridor on the third floor of Tribune tower, glass paneled doors open into a realm as bewildering to the layman as it is satisfying to the newspaper technician.

This is the composing room where are set the millions of lines of type that go into editions of the daily and Sunday TRIBUNES. It is here that these lines of type are assembled into pages of type and are sped to the waiting stereotypers and pressmen.

It probably is the world's largest mechanical department maintained by a standard sized newspaper. It fills the entire third floor of the tower and spreads back thru the vast plant that adjoins the tower at the rear. It covers all the third floor space between Michigan avenue on the west and St. Clair street on the east.

Use 91 Typesetting Machines.

And none of the thousands of feet of floor space is wasted. Set in close array are 91 tall linotype machines and hundreds of rolling steel tables, called " turtles," on which made up pages of type are moved to the stereotypers. There are long steel topped counters, called banks, on which the news pages and display advertisments are made up, and scores of cases containing large type to be set by hand for headlines and advertisments.

In addition, there are four automatic casting machines that work 24 hours a day turning out leads to be inserted between individual lines of type, metal rules to be placed between columns of type, and much other material necessary to the art of newspaper makeup. Two other automatic machines turn out headline and advertisment type, up to 72 point, so that THE TRIBUNE always is set with new type that presents clearcut, black outlines to the reader.

Experts Keep Wheels Turning.

There are numerous proof presses upon which impressions of freshly set type are taken for the long line of proofreaders and their assistants who safeguard the newspaper against typographical errors. There are machine shops with their busy crews who solve mechanical difficulties on the fly and keep the wheels turning under the pressure of approaching deadlines.

Peopling this mechanical wonderland are 300 technicians gathered from all parts of the country and each is an expert in his field. Indeed, not a few of them are geniuses, as is attested by the inventions whose patents are held by THE TRIBUNE and its employés; inventions that have speeded and simplified newspaper production and which now are employed in hundreds of plants the country over.

These 300 are regular employés. Up to 100 extra men are employed to set and assemble this newspaper as seasonal loads demand.

There are 100 linotype operators with quick eyes and flying fingers, 20 machinists to keep the linotypes producing; 80 men who work with machinelike precision, setting type by hand for advertisments; 32 makeup men whose knowledge of printing from the ground up is their fortune, and 40 proofreaders and copyholders.

No One Quits—Except for War!

When the bombs fell on Pearl Harbor THE TRIBUNE had 11 apprentices. Now it has four. And there are indications these will be gone soon. On the vast board where names of employes and extras are posted, many names now appear on red, white, and blue cardboard strips that

2. Prohibited increases in salaries of $5,000 or more a year except where the individual has been assigned to more responsible work.

3. Prohibited individual net salaries in excess of $25,000 a year.

HENDERSON.

1. Established 60 day emergency price ceilings on eggs, chickens, butter, cheese, potatoes, and flour. Ceilings, effective Monday, set prices at highest levels charged by the individual dealer between Sept. 28 and Oct. 2.

2. Announced plans to issue rent control regulations soon for the entire nation. This affects dwellings only, not rented land.

BYRNES CHOSEN TO HALT RISING COST OF LIVING

Henderson Removed as Price Boss.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3.—In a swift succession of orders and directives President Roosevelt today established and set in motion machinery calculated to halt the soaring spiral of inflation, under the broad powers voted him yesterday by congress.

Within 18 hours after he got the power he demanded of congress by Oct. 1, in his special Labor day message, Mr. Roosevelt:

1. Named Associate Justice James F. Byrnes director of economic stabilization, a new office charged with full control over the anti-inflation program.

2. Stabilized wages, salaries, profits and farm prices; ordered rent ceilings extended thruout the nation, and called for ceilings on prices of virtually all food items.

Byrnes Quits Supreme Court.

The chief executive accepted Byrnes' resignation from the high court shortly before naming him head of the new Office of Economic Stabilization. Byrnes conferred with the President immediately on receiving the appointment.

Smiling as he left the conference, Byrnes said his office would be in the new "left wing" of the White House, but laughingly added that this had "no political or economic significance."

"The President conferred upon me power to determine a policy to bring about the accomplishment of the objectives of this legislation," he said.

"The power to determine that policy doesn't mean I am called upon to administer that policy.

Plans to Harmonize Policy.

"One objective will be to harmonize that policy. The control of prices necessarily involves many departments and necessarily conflicts arise. My duty would be to hear and resolve those conflicts and relieve the President of that determination, and also many administrative burdens that will arise by reason of the executive order."

The order creating the new office also provided for the appointment of a board to work with Byrnes. It is composed of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Marriner Eccles, Budget Director Harold Smith, Price Administrator Leon Henderson, William H. Davis, head of the War Labor board, and two representatives each of labor, management, and agriculture.

Follows Familiar Pattern.

In naming former Sen. Byrnes economic czar, Mr. Roosevelt followed a familiar pattern. He set up new machinery and placed the old federal unit charged wtih performing the

Akron, O., Oct. 3 (AP).—A medium army bomber crashed near Akron airport tonight. Airport officials said all seven occupants were killed.

Guards at the Goodyear Aircraft corporation plant reported one of the ship's motors failed immediately after a take-off.

Guard Henry Betz said he saw the plane's right wing dip, throwing the craft over on its back on a small knoll. It burst into flames immediately.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 3 (AP).—Three Will Rogers' air base flyers were killed today in the crash of their medium bomber in a field three miles north of the airbase. The pilot and co-pilot parachuted to safety.

GAY N. Y. THRONGS SPEND ON SPORT, FORGET THE WAR

New York, Oct. 3 [Special].—With major sports attractions as a background, New York today presented a picture of gay oblivion to the fact the country is at war. The spirit of hilarity was reminiscent of the pre-depression days.

The attendance of New Yorkers, who trail behind in war bond purchases, at the world series ball game between the Yankees and the Cardinals, broke the record for the fall classic. The figure was 69,123.

Crowd of 31,805 poured $1,790,807 thru the mutuel machines at Belmont park to see Whirlaway turn the tables on Alsab. Another sporting event was the Columbia-Maine football game which drew 12,000 customers.

Tonight crowds milled in Times Square and thousands of pleasure seekers thronged Broadway. Cafés and bars were jammed to their doors. Hotel rooms were at a premium. Many of the taller buildings showed gleaming lights in violation of dim-out regulations.

Stalin Quits as War Head; Job to Army Man

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 4.—In a significant move to halt the German war machine, Premier Josef Stalin late this afternoon relinquished his post of peoples commissar for defense and nominal commander in chief of the Russian armies to his military advisor, Marshal Boris Mikhailovitch Shaposhnikov, chief of the general staff since November, 1941. He simultaneously named Shaposhnikov commander in chief of the Red army and air force and accorded him a seat on the central committee of the Communist party.

[The Russians early today said counterdrives had retaken positions inside Stalingrad and to the south and northwest of the city, but admitted a German advance in the north. Story on page 9.]

Announced in Communique.

This unification of command of all sectors in the hands of a professional soldier instead of a politician was announced in a special Tass [official Russian news agency] communique which was broadcast up to midnight only in Russian at dictation speed.

The announcement said:

"The marshal of the Soviet union, Comrade Boris Mikhailovitch Shaposhnikov, active organizer of national resistance and the glorious chief of staff of the Red army, was named today to the post of commissar of the people for defense and a member of the central committee of the Communist party. Shaposhnikov, henceforth, will be the commander in chief of the Red army and the Red air force and all questions of defense will depend on him."

His Drive Saved Moscow.

Shaposhnikov has been behind several of Russia's miraculous recoveries since early last winter. Three weeks after his appointment as chief of staff the central armies launched their December drive which saved Moscow.

Prior to his plan of campaign which saved the capital he was credited with the organization of the "strategical disintegration" of the Leningrad lines.

TROOPS LANDED IN STORM; BUILD AIRBASE IN 10 DAYS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—American army forces in the Aleutian Islands have advanced 250 nautical miles nearer Japanese bases, the navy announced today, have established a new air base and already have undertaken strong aerial operations against the enemy from their new positions with B-17 Flying Fortresses and Consolidated B-24 bombers.

The advance—first in the North Pacific area since the Japanese occupied islands in the westernmost Aleutians in June—was covered and supported by naval units and accomplished without enemy opposition.

It carried American forces a long stride west of Dutch Harbor, heretofore the main United States base for operations against the Japanese held islands of Kiska, Attu, and Agattu.

The new islands occupied, not identified specifically, are in the Andreanof group, mountainous segment of the Aleutians stretching about 240 miles between Seguam pass on the east and Amchitka pass on the west.

Cuts Bombing Time.

The effect of the advance will be to cut valuable hours of flying time off the round trip bombing expeditions against the main Japanese base at Kiska, which army planes have been pounding steadily for many weeks. This reduction in time means the planes can carry greater bomb loads and operate with better fighting protection.

Whether, beyond that advantage, the new advance positions may be used as jumping off points for an amphibious invasion of the Japanese held Aleutians was a possibility on which the navy offered no comment.

It was obvious, however, that the Japs are now in a more precarious position in the Aleutians, with American planes able to make heavier and more frequent attacks on them, and with the onset of bitter winter weather at hand.

Attacks Ships at Kiska.

The Japanese already have lost heavily in ships in their efforts to keep their Aleutian bases supplied and protected against attack. Today's navy communique which reported the American advance also said that on Sept. 30, the army's four engined Consolidated Liberator bombers had attacked ships in the harbor at Kiska and that an enemy transport was set afire by two direct hits.

The camp area also was bombed and several fires resulted, the mission being carried out without the loss of an American plane.

The successful attack on the transport raised the number of ships which the Japanese have had sunk or damaged in the Aleutians to 38.

The communique also said an enemy cargo ship which had been attacked northwest of Kiska on Sept. 28 was again bombed and strafed by army aircraft on the 29th and appeared to have been abandoned.

BY WILLIAM WORDEN.

AN ARMY BASE IN THE ALEUTIAN ISLANDS, Sept. 9 [Delayed]—(AP).—The United States army has commenced a campaign to oust Japanese troops from the western Aleutian Islands by occupying this vacant island within fighting plane range of Japanese occupied Kiska.

The occupation was made without opposition by a force fully equipped to withstand aerial, land, or naval attack, and was completed without the loss of a man thru enemy action.

Probably the largest convoy of American ships ever to sail the north Pacific made a secret rendezvous at sea and proceeded hundreds of miles west of Dutch Harbor without sighting an enemy plane or submarine.

The convoy, which included heavy naval craft, destroyers, small fighting boats, several large transports loaded to the gunwales with troops and supplies, and a strange collection of power barges, tugs, converted yachts, and even one four masted codfish schooner carrying troops, proceeded at a snail's pace, and offered a splendid target for the Japanese, who apparently either were afraid to tackle the naval escort or were unaware of it.

This serious challenge to their occupation of Kiska, Attu, and Agattu was being made slightly less than three months after the invaders seized the undefended islands.

Land in a Storm.

The convoy arrived in a driving rain and unloaded troops and equipment by means of tank and jeep lighters and landing boats. The landing was made on a vacant beach which previously had been searched for enemy scouts or defending forces by our own guerrilla type units especially organized to operate in Alaska.

The troops came ashore with full equipment and ready to fight, but found the Aleutian weather their chief obstacle. The weather suddenly turned bad just as the convoy was reaching the bay, and banged the landing boats against the sides of vessels as they were lowered into the water.

The heavy surf made moving troops down the rope landing ladders from the transports a dangerous operation, and made getting ashore impossible without a thoro wetting in the icy seas.

The landing boats often were unable to clear the beach once they struck it. Nevertheless, troops immediately began forging inland on the treeless, grass covered island, where growth always was knee deep and sometimes shoulder high.

Weather Keeps Japs Away.

Units were directed to prepare for immediate attack and set up coastal defense and anti-aircraft guns to supplement the guns of the fleet which guarded the bay. The naval flying boats were the only aircraft to venture up into the treacherous winds that first day.

But the weather smiled on the Americans. Altho the seas made landing difficult, the clouds made Japanese aerial observation hopeless. No Japanese appeared that day or for 10 days afterward. By that time the landing operation was completed.

The occupation force included a mixture of troops which had been seasoned by months at Alaskan outposts, and others who were fresh from the United States. The officers, however, were veterans. Most of them had been in Alaska more than a year planning just such a move as this.

The operation was a joint army and navy affair which, like other operations in this area, remained under naval leadership until the men set ashore and then became strictly an army problem.

Troops Dig Dugouts.

Naval surface and aircraft provided the chief means of defense for the landing force during the first critical days when men and equipment on the beaches themselves were almost defenseless. Navy flying boats were particularly valuable as they maintained a daily reconnaissance.

The soldiers, many engaging in landing operations for the first time, demonstrated their ability to fit themselves to unusual conditions by digging in in all manner of shelters and temporary defenses. Some used short handled shovels and completed habitable dugouts the first day, in a driving, horizontal rain.

The first groups ashore had to

GIVE NEW CARRIER A FAMOUS NAME: U.S.S. YORKTOWN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—The navy announced today that an aircraft carrier under construction at Newport News, Va., would be named Yorktown to perpetuate the name of the carrier lost during the battle of Midway.

CULTISTS CHARGE SUPREME COURT BANS 4 FREEDOMS

Quote Bible, Ask License Ruling Be Reversed.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3.—The United States Supreme court is expected to decide early next month, it was learned today, whether it will grant a rehearing in a series of cases in which it ruled that license taxes can be imposed upon vendors of religious books and pamphlets, notwithstanding the constitutional guarantees of freedom of religion, freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

Regarded as of far reaching importance in determining the future trend of the court's policies toward the fundamental rights of Americans, the cases have attracted wide interest.

Publishers Attack Ruling.

A number of intervening petitions have been filed in support of the motion for a rehearing. Among these is a brief by the American Newspaper Publishers' association asserting that the court's previous decisions has jeopardized freedom of the press and if allowed to stand will mean that the struggle for adoption of the Bill of Rights was in vain.

All the cases involve the Jehovah's Witnesses, religious cult. On June 8 the court held in a 5 to 4 decision that members of the cult distributing religious tracts on street corners and from door to door may be licensed and taxed by local communities.

Cultists Quote Bible.

In its own petition for a rehearing, the Jehovah's Witnesses have drawn one of the most unique documents ever filed by a litigant in this country, it was said. The petitioners lean heavily upon scripture and also dwell upon the rights of minorities as set forth in the "four freedoms" of the Atlantic Charter.

"It is exceedingly difficult to comprehend how the war being waged to preserve the four freedoms can have full support of the common people; or succeed when, from within, the nation's highest court publicly decrees that the individual's right to exercise such freedoms is by sufferance of state officials," the petition declares. "And that such rights can be limited thru taxation, thus destroying most of said freedoms.

"Battle Against God."

"When the final history is written concerning the battle now being waged for the four freedoms by the democracies, the people of this land and those who govern will suddenly realize that, tho unpopular, despised, and hated, Jehovah's Witnesses have done more than any one else to resist the 'total war' now being waged on the home fronts against the liberties of all people. In time all such opposers will realized that they not only have battled against Jehovah's Witnesses but against Almight God.

Comparing themselves with the American forefathers who fled as refugees to this continent, the petition took its text from Exodus 22:21: "Thou shall neither vex a stranger nor oppose him; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt."

Intolerable Conditions Ahead.

Upholding the license taxes will return the people to the intolerable conditions, from which the founding fathers fled, the brief continues, resulting in complete nullification of President Roosevelt's four freedoms.

The petition urged the court to remember it is dealing with the clergy, asserting that the course taken by Gamaliel [Acts 5:34-39] is appropos: 'Refrain from these men and let them alone. . . . lest haply ye be found even to fight against God."

Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone, in one of the most vehement dissenting opinions in the court's history, warned that approval of imposts upon vendors of the tracts means that "a way has been found for the effective suppression of speech and press and religion." He was joined by Justices Hugo Black, William O. Douglas, and Frank Murphy.

The majority opinion was delivered by Justice Stanley F. Reed, with Justices Owen Roberts, Felix Frankfurter, Robert Jackson, and James Byrnes concurring. These members held that there was no objection to the size of the fees charged for the licenses because of their size. "Consequently," the majority opinion added, "there is not before us the question of the power to lay fees, objectionable in their effect because of their size, upon the constitutionally protected rights of free speech, press, or the exercise of religion."

The plaintiffs recalled that the majority opinion stated that if the literature had been given away, the ordinances could not have been applied. They asked whether this is to be interpreted to mean that freedom of the press is to be limited to those able to distribute gratuitously.

Cites Paine's Campaign.

"There may be others with messages more vital and purses less full who seek some reimbursement for their outlay or forego passing on their ideas," the petition stated. "The pamphlets of Paine were not distributed gratuitously. This court rules in effect that the press now remains the agent only for those who can afford to purchase the right of publication.

"Historically, freedom of the press means freedom from burdensome taxation in any form, large or small. Taxation of the press is equally as objectionable as censorship."

Comparing the license ordinances directed against the cult with the Stamp Tax, which was one of the contributory causes of the American Revolution, the brief traced the history of attempts by despots and monarchs to control the press, first thru royal decree and later thru taxation.

Tool for Boss Control.

"Suppose the unscrupulous bosses of various American cities received word that the press was about to expose graft and mismanagement in city affairs. Such bosses or their political stooges could speedily require the distributors of newspapers to pay a peddler's license or be prosecuted, thus curtailing or stopping distribution. This application of such an ordinance encourages the press to suppress vital news or print it and be driven out of business by extortion of the license for its newsboys or thru payment of fines for refusal.

"This license hampers freedom of conscience. It chokes discussion and circulation of opinion. This presages the passing of free expression and discussion—essential light of liberty—and paves the way to put the people under a cloud of ignorance like the pall that hangs over those now ruled by axis despots."

IMPOSSIBLE? AEF ORDNANCE CREWS DO IT EVERY DAY

British Amazed by Yank Repair Units' Speed.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON [By Air Mail].—The feats of American army ordnance regiments in speeding up repairs and movement of the instruments of war are a continual source of amazement to the British. Every day the British see examples of our efficiency methods, based on ingenuity, assembly line technique and maximum use of machine tools.

I have just returned from a visit to one of the largest ordnance shops in England. It has been taken over by American troops and is being stocked completely with American equipment.

Lombard Man in Charge.

Coördinator for the shop is Maj. Luther G. Smoak, 44 years old, of 59 North Columbiana avenue, Lombard, Ill. His executive officer is Capt. Charles J. Trees, 27, of Indianapolis, Ind., who graduated from Purdue university in 1937 and is a nephew of Merle Trees, Chicago civic leader and vice president of the Chicago Bridge and Iron Works. Lieut. Col. John F. Downing of Boston, Mass., the garrison post commander, referred to Smoak and Trees as "a couple of crackerjacks who can fix anything."

Maj. Smoak, who has been in the automobile service business around Chicago since 1925, said the British appreciate American production and maintenance methods and are introducing many into their own ordnance.

The major told of the recent occasion when four big anti-aircraft guns were brought to the shop for cleaning and inspecting.

Yanks Show 'Em How.

"The British ordnance men looked at the guns," Maj. Smoak said, "and declared the job couldn't be done in a day—what was more the guns couldn't even be gotten into the shop in that time. We put some of our lads to work. We got the guns inside. Four more guns arrived and we got them in. By nightfall the entire job was done and those eight guns were on their way out to shoot the hell out of some more of the axis planes."

"And there was the time," chimed in Capt. Trees, "when we had to take two tanks off flat cars at the unloading platform. The English station master said it couldn't be done until a locomotive was brought from four miles away to hold the cars steady when the tanks were moved.

"While he was telephoning for the locomotive we had some of our men bring up another tank. We hooked this tank in turn to those on the cars and pulled off the latter without any trouble. It was done in 15 minutes. When the station master came back to report the locomotive was on the way, the tanks were already bouncing along to the shops."

The British were able to overhaul 25 artillery guns a month in the gun shop. In a 10 day period, American ordnance has overhauled more than a 100, Maj. Smoak said.

They Think It's Fun.

One incident in the shop was akin to Tom Sawyer's achievement in getting the other boys to paint the fence by selling them the idea it was a privilege.

A British squad was ordered to rip up a concrete floor, and set about the job with pickaxes.

Maj. Smoak thought the work could be hurried up by using a pneumatic hammer and air compression device. He sent over some of his men with that equipment.

"I walked by later," the major recalled with a chuckle, "and there were the Americans sitting around having cigarets while the British wielded the new equipment. My boys had given the British the notion that it was great fun and a rare opportunity to do the job that way."

The loss of 33 tires and 15 inner tubes valued at $809 from the stockroom of the Hartshorne Motors, Inc., 930 North Clark street was reported to police yesterday.

FATEFUL RULING ON TRACTION TO BE ISSUED SOON

Board's Decision to Affect Millions.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

A momentous decision that will affect the comfort and convenience of every street car and elevated road rider, and the financial status of the thousands of persons owning securities of the two traction companies, is soon to be made by the Illinois commerce commission.

At hearings now in progress the commission staff is probing, possibly more thoroly than any other official body has yet done, the claims that have been made in favor of the unification of the two passenger carrying agencies. The federal court has approved a proposed plan for one great local transportation system. The city has embodied the plan in an ordinance that was approved by a referendum in June.

Commission Consent Necessary.

But to get a unified system set up, the consent of the five man commerce commission is necessary. It has the power to approve or to block what has been described as a $179,000,000 deal; a larger total is justified if the paper figures represent real money.

In brief, the proposal is that a new unified company be formed; that it give the owners of surface lines securities $136,000,000 of the new company securities and the owners of elevated lines securities $43,000,000 of new bonds and stocks; that the company be operated as a single unit, including the elevated and surface lines and the subway in which the government has sunk $23,000,000 and the city about $40,000,000.

Further, the plan contemplates the spending of $102,000,000 in the rehabilitation of the system within eight years. It promises the extension of lines wherever needed, faster service, the purchase of 950 new streamlined street cars, 1,000 all metal elevated cars, and 1,850 additional vehicles, either buses or street cars.

The new concern, known as the Chicago Transit company, would be granted a terminable franchise that would be perpetual so long as the company complied with the ordinance.

The control of this huge company would be vested in a "home rule board" of three men appointed by the mayor of Chicago. The board would exercise all the powers over rates and service now possessed by the Illinois Commerce commission. And the rule would be over a big homeland, extending 30 miles beyond the city limits in every direction, and over every commuter in the suburban area. Many villages and towns, recently made aware of this, are fighting the setting up of the company because it would be dominated by whatever political organization is in control of the city hall.

The Public Interest.

The ICC is being asked: [1] to hold that the public interest requires that one company rather than several operate local traction service [the bus lines might be taken in under the ordinance but there has been no move to do so]; [2] to hold that the issuance of the $179,000,000 of securities to the present investors is a fair deal for all of them; [3] that the whole of the proposed company's financial structure is sound and that the management would be able to borrow needed money at a reasonable rate of interest; [4] to agree that it would benefit the car rider and the investor to have a city board rather than ICC as regulator; [5] and that a "reasonable rate of fare" would support the company.

If the commerce commission is convinced these contentions are correct it would issue a certificate of convenience and necessity, set the rate of fare for the unified company and withdraw its own powers over the local transportation of about 5,000,000 people.

Probe Compelled By Law.

Under the law the commission is compelled to make its own investigation of all such questions. The commissioners have indicated they are keenly aware of the importance of their decision and have refused to be unduly hurried, even tho great pressure has been exerted by federal and city officials as well as some newspapers.

The commission is composed of John D. Biggs, former county judge of Bond county; Val J. Washington, Frank Peska, William Parrillo, and Edwin A. Rosenstone. All are appointees of Gov. Green. About two months ago Mayor Kelly asserted that the commission should be able to make a decision in two weeks, and that further delay would be due to political reasons. The city council voted a resolution of censure.

Commissioner Washington replied that the body was only doing its duty and should not be asked to "rubber stamp" something that the city had been working on for 15 years.

Condition of Securities.

Other members pointed to the fact that the law specifically charged them with the duty of seeing that securities of transportation companies are reasonably sound, and that their decisions of this kind are reviewable by the courts and by the Securities and Exchange commission. Chairman Biggs said it was mandatory to make a complete investigation and that the matter was being speeded up as much as possible.

Grave doubts have been expressed as to the ability of the unified company to borrow at reasonable rates of interest. Last spring Prof. Harry G. Guthmann of the school of finance at Northwestern university, filed with the commission a statement in which he said the borrowing of the $102,000,000 for improvements would be "virtually impossible."

The plan, Prof. Guthmann held, was financially unsound because "it offers no hope of providing the funds required to carry out the program . . . except at the price of burdensome fare increases at the expense of the riders of the Chicago Surface lines."

What Opponents Claim.

Opponents of unification have made much of the point that the surface riders and investors are being badly treated as compared with those of the elevated. The surface lines, which carry 78 per cent of the riders, are in much better condition financially than the elevated. In recent years it paid the city large sums that went into the "traction fund" and paid interest on its principal obligations. Meanwhile, the elevated has had an operating deficit and it piled up an unpaid tax bill of nearly five million dollars.

Frank J. Durham, insurance dealer at 231 South La Salle street, secretary of the Citizens Transportation association, which he said represented the holders of $6,000,000 of surface lines bonds, asserted yesterday that to create a sound unified company minimum fares on the "L" would have to be 12 cents and the surface lines fare 10 cents.

"Staggering" Burden.

"I'm not sure that would do it," he added. "This plan would throw a staggering burden on the surface lines riders to benefit the small percentage of those who ride the other lines."

Durham said that his group plans to present evidence to the ICC to show unfairness as well as unsoundness in the plan; that the surface lines by themselves could finance their own improvements and a better plan than unification would be to modernize the elevated separately.

This view is, of course, directly opposed by the proponents of unification. Engineers and others appearing at the ICC hearings have maintained there will be important savings in operating costs under unity as well as better service, and that capitalization well beyond $200,000,000 could be supported by the riding public—and with a reasonable fare.

Deficit in New York.

These rival claims are among those which, must be winnowed for truth by the ICC. The history of other cities indicates that profitable operation of rapid transit lines may not be possible. New York has a nickel fare and the cost per passenger is 14 cents—so the city pays a deficit of $30,000,000 a year. The Chicago Surface lines are regarded as almost unique in having a substantial surplus of earnings.

Proposals for unification have been made over the years in Chicago, but the only one that reached a really advanced point is the present one. Its start was in late 1937, when the federal court appointed a committee to draft a unification plan. The next year W. A. Shaw, transit attorney for the court, presented a plan. Somewhat modified, it is the plan today.

It was agreed on, tentatively, last February in the federal court of Judge Michael L. Igoe, by representatives of elevated and surface lines investors. Actually the owners have never had any offer for their securities; they have been told that an offer of a certain type will be made to them by the new company. Their acceptance would be based, normally, on the worth of the paper offered in exchange. Theoretically the security owners and the court would have the right to evaluate the worth of these certificates. One Chicagoan who has had wide experience in traction said he would advise his friends holding surface lines bonds to trade if the new paper "looked good."

Types of Securities.

The proposal is that surface lines investors get $72,718,000 of 1st mortgage 5 per cent bonds and "L" investors $7,002,000 of the same kind of security. The surface line folk are to have $62,000,000 of preferred stock and elevated $35,000,000. Common stock is also to be issued—$789,000 to the surface security holders and $552,000 [$1 par] to the elevated owners.

The dominant groups are first mortgage holders. Certain classes of investors will be wiped out in the reorganization.

When the government made its financial grant to the city for the subway [1939] the city agreed to unify transportation and adopt the subway as part of it. The ordinance and the plan followed, with the city trying to carry out its pledge. The Federal Works administration has informed the ICC that it desires unification at once.

Committee Appointed.

Judge Igoe, in pursuance of his formal order, named a committee of five attorneys to present the evidence for unification before the commission and the city has constantly kept a member of its legal staff at the hearings, which will continue this week.

Representatives of several towns in the suburban area, including Maywood, Oak Park, and Evanston, are to meet tomorrow and lay plans to present their protests, particularly against the new Chicago regulatory board, before the commission.

Chicago Motor Coach company claims of saving a total of 2,742,000 miles of driving in the first eight months of this year compared to the corresponding period of 1941, were disputed yesterday by Michael Mulcahy, OPA director for the Chicago area, in a letter to Benjamin Weintraub, president of the bus company.

Mulcahy said data supplied him by the company indicate a mileage for the first eight months of 1941 of 10,354,197, while in the same period of this year company buses traveled 10,985,045 miles.

Attempt to Silence Paper in 1920 Reviewed.

In reviewing the effort of the city of Chicago in 1920 to reintroduce the law of libel upon government by suing THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for 10 million dollars, Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, last night cited the decision of the Supreme court of Illinois which ended: "This action is out of tune with the American spirit and has no place in American jurisprudence."

Col. McCormick spoke on the season's first Chicago Theater of the Air operetta program, broadcast by W-G-N and the Mutual network.

The attempt of the 1920 city administration to silence THE TRIBUNE was described as "ingenious" by Col. McCormick, who pointed out that the law of libel upon government had disappeared from American jurisprudence in 1798 and from England's in 1852.

TEXT OF ADDRESS

The text of Col. McCormick's address follows:

"Last week, you may remember, I told you of the efforts of the state of Minnesota to reintroduce the licensing of the press and of the defeat of that effort by the Supreme court of the United States.

"Tonight I will tell you of the ingenious effort of the city of Chicago to reintroduce the law of libel upon government which had disappeared from our jurisprudence in 1798 and from England's in 1852.

"The crafty theory was devised that a municipal corporation could sue for libel as if it were a commercial corporation.

Springs from Feudal System.

"Our civilization springs from the Middle Ages—from the feudal system, with the kings at the top and serfs at the bottom. They had to do with government, war, agriculture, and milling. Trade was a thing apart, privileged as necessary, reviled as irreligious, and plundered when convenient. In time merchants came to be looked upon as the middle class, standing half way between the nobility and the serfs. Serfs who could escape to the city became free men.

"Cities were given charters, allowing them to conduct business according to their own laws and customs, and their governmental powers were in the nature of corporation by-laws to enable them to carry on their business. The seas were infested with pirates and the roads with robbers, and all commerce was an adventure and needed armed protection.

Companies Could Wage War.

"After the world was opened by the voyages of Columbus and Vasco da Gama, companies were organized to exploit different parts of the world and were authorized to make war and raise armies and navies, but these powers were incidental to commercial motives.

"The companies developed in a variety of ways. The India company conquered India. The Virginia company and the Massachusetts company and other companies in North America became actual governments and finally independent states. The Hudson's Bay company, which at one time dominated the northern part of our continent, has shrunk to the status of a chain store.

"Few companies or corporations today have any pretense to governmental power. In England most municipal corporations are extremely old and have been made into counties, with county governments.

Functions Governmental Only.

"In this country, municipal corporation acts were enacted—probably in all of the states—so that wherever immigrants happened to settle down, they could elect a local government to provide police and fire protection, water supply, etc. Their functions were strictly governmental, with the sole exception that these governments could be sued.

"City governments operate alongside county governments and where the city and country are of approximately the same size, the city governments have the greater powers and the larger budgets. They are, of course, not operated for profit—are on the contrary supported by taxes. Their administrations are, I am sorry to say, notoriously corrupt and are the occasion for continuous reform movements.

"In the year 1920 the then city of Chicago administration, in combating a move for reform, attempted to silence THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE by suing it for 10 million dollars for alleged libel of the city of Chicago. The trial court dismissed the suit, whereupon the city appealed to the Supreme court of Illinois.

Supreme Court's Opinion.

In delivering the unanimous opinion of the court, Chief Justice Thompson said, and I quote:

"'The struggle for freedom of speech has marched hand in hand in the advance of civilization with the struggle for other great human liberties. History teaches that human liberty cannot be secured unless there is freedom to express grievances. As civilization advanced and as the means for expressing grievances multiplied, the struggle between the people and their despotic rulers became more bitter. With the opening of the 17th century the people began to publish newspapers, and history begins to record unspeakable prosecution of the editors.

"'There were few prosecutions for libel of government in the American colonies, and no court of last resort in this country has ever held, or even suggested, that prosecutions for libel on government have any place in the American system of jurisprudence. The right of the government to prosecute its accusers was founded on the theory that the king could do no wrong. He was an hereditary monarch and was not responsible to the people. When the people became sovereign, as they did when our government was established under our Constitution and the ministers became servants of the people, the right to discuss government followed as a natural sequence.

* *

"'The fundamental right of freedom of speech is involved in this litigation and not merely the right of liberty of the press. If this action can be maintained against a newspaper it can be maintained against every private citizen who ventures to criticize the ministers who are temporarily conducting the affairs of his government. Where any person by speech or writing seeks to persuade others to violate existing law or to overthrow by force or other unlawful means the existing government, he may be punished, but all other utterances or publications against the government must be considered absolutely privileged.

* *

"'While in the early history of the struggle for freedom of speech the restrictions were enforced by criminal prosecutions, it is clear that civil action is as great, if not greater, a restriction than a criminal prosecution. If the right to criticize the government is a privilege which, with the exceptions above enumerated, cannot be restricted, then all civil as well as criminal actions are forbidden. A despotic or corrupt government can more easily stifle opposition by a series of civil actions than by criminal prosecution.

"'All organized governments own and operate more or less property, and certain proprietary rights have long been recognized as necessary for the welfare of the inhabitants of the municipality. Municipal corporations, however, exist primarily for governmental purposes, and they are permitted to enter the commercial field solely for the purpose of subserving the interests of the public which they represent. A city is no less a government because it owns and operates its own waterway, its own gas and electric system, and its own transportation system.

"'For the same reason that members of the legislature, judges of the courts, and other persons engaged in certain fields of the public service or in the administration of justice are absolutely immune from actions, civil or criminal, for libel for words published in the discharge of such public duties, the individual citizen must be given a like privilege when he is acting in his sovereign capacity. This action is out of tune with the American spirit and has no place in American jurisprudence.'"

THEATER OF THE AIR WILL DEVOTE MORE TIME TO OPERETTAS

In speaking last night on the season's opening of the Chicago Theater of the Air program, broadcast by W-G-N and the Mutual network, Col. Robert R. McCormick said:

"This year, again, we are presenting a full season of operettas. I suppose I should say that what was begun as an experiment has become an institution. But I'm not going to say it. This year, as in previous years, we are continuing to bring you familiar music and familiar stories, in an effort to entertain the world's greatest radio audience, which is the American public.

"We've changed our form of presentation somewhat—changed it in accordance with your own expressed wishes to hear more of the music which is the real basis for the tremendous popularity of operettas. In the season's play bill of 24 productions, we're including nine operattas not heard in previous years.

"We shall go on giving you operettas as long as you ask for them. We shall not forget that you are the public. We are your public servants."

THEATER OF AIR BEGINS ITS THIRD TUNEFUL SEASON

Presents 'The New Moon' in Glowing Style.

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

The Chicago Theater of the Air sailed melodiously into its third season over W-G-N and the Mutual network last night with a silkily streamlined version of Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "The New Moon," starring Marion Claire and Thomas L. Thomas with the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber. The performance was supervised by Kenneth MacGregor, chief of W-G-N production, and was introduced by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, who spoke from New York.

By special request of the radio audience, this third season of operetta will telescope dramatic action in order to feature a maximum of each score. This was particularly effective last night when "The New Moon" emerged with all the best of its music intact, and with a skeleton story told in narrative form, and given some warm flesh for its better bones by a cast of radio actors who know how to make a few words count.

New York Revival Cited.

Just how little was lost by condensing that libretto was recently exhibited in New York when a revival of "The New Moon" was a flat failure. The dull story bogged down the full throated music.

Last night the story was crisp and the music had a warm glow timed to the split second of an expert's stop watch. Miss Claire looked like Primavera—it would need television in technicolor to put that on the air—and her cajoling soprano curved persuasively thru a score which will not be forgotten while sopranos can sing "Lover Come Back to Me" and baritones can echo them with "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise."

For echo, last night's performance was particularly lucky in the matter of baritones. Mr. Thomas owns one of the best, a full, rich voice which would be velvet except that it has the sturdier nap to give character to such a rousing ditty as "Stouthearted Men."

Hair-Trigger Timing.

Under the crackling direction of Henry Weber, both the chorus and the orchestra poured in and out of the performance with satiny smoothness, as if hair-trigger timing were the simplest thing in the world. Being more accustomed to theater and concert than to studio performance, I found this timing spectacularly good. I also was diverted by sound effects, an active gentleman indeed, and by Mr. MacGregor, who wore headphones like giant earmuffs. Those headphones heard something very nice indeed when Michael Wilkomirski played that violin obligato to Miss Claire's soprano.

Next Saturday night—"The Chocolate Soldier," starring Miss Claire and Felix Knight.

AUTO INJURIES PROVE FATAL.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 3 [Special].—Harold A. Butler, 25 years old, Inkster, Mich., died today in a hospital here of a fractured skull suffered last night when his car crashed into a guard rail on U. S. highway 12 east of here.

Air Recruits

Chicago's army aviation cadet board broke its own national record for cadet enlistments in a single month by accepting 1,166 future army flyers in September, Maj. Floyd M. Showalter, president of the board, reported yesterday. The board had recruited 1,089 cadets in August to establish the previous record.

Since the drive started Sept. 1, 1941, the Chicago board has accepted 10,917 cadets. Thirty were approved in the 24 hours ended at noon yesterday.

George Goodwin Dewey, 69, of 1446 North Dearborn parkway, the admiral's son, told the new recruits to "fire when ready, gentlemen, and make every shot count."

The coast guard announced 966 enlistments during September, making the Chicago total 7,037 since Pearl Harbor, or more than the national total of 6,557 during the entire World war.

MORE PART TIME AIDS ARE SOUGHT BY COAST GUARD

Civilian specialists in 10 occupations are eligible for voluntary service in the coast guard's new temporary reserve, Lieut. Comm. Paul Date of the coast guard reserves, head of the new service here, announced yesterday at coast guard headquarters. Altho men experienced in boat handling are wanted primarily, he explained, the temporary reserve is not limited to yachtsmen.

The new branch of the coast guard reserve will help to man stations, patrol boats, and other facilities around Lake Michigan.

Fishermen, electricians, painters, maintenance men, cabinet makers, gasoline motor mechanics, engineers, typists, radiomen, and men familiar with the operation of small arms are wanted, Commander Date said.

Temporary reservists include ranks and ratings as well as authority on the same basis as coast guard reserve personnel when on duty. Members serve without pay, however, and are not exempted from the draft. Uniforms are provided. Preference is being given to men over 40, men with two or more dependents, with minor physical defects, or otherwise unlikely to be called for military service.

BLOW IN QUARREL FATAL.

'MERCY SERVICE' BY SWEDEN GETS FOOD TO GREECE

Hear 5 Ships with Wheat Arrive from Canada.

BY A. C. SEDGWICK.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

HAIFA, Palestine, Oct. 2 [Delayed].—Vessels of the Swedish Red Cross have been carrying out a "mercy service" in taking wheat from Canada to Greece, according to information obtained here today. Three ships were said to have arrived at Piraeus in mid-August and two others in mid-September. How much wheat they carried was not indicated. The vessels now are bound for Canada and are expected to return to Piraeus soon with more wheat.

[Recent announcements have placed Canadian grain shipments to Greece at 15,000 tons a month. Three ships were said to have arrived at Piraeus with five more en route.]

Amount Not Enough.

This food now getting into Greece is by no means enough, it was said. According to informants here a select committee of Greek economists and humanitarians recently drew up a report in which it was asserted that a minimum of 38,000 tons of varied foods must be imported by the stricken country to avert "hundreds of thousands" of deaths from starvation.

Disease, it is believed, will take a greater toll of lives this winter, the second in which Greece has been occupied by the axis, than previous winters. The country has virtually no fuel, it was reported.

Some Suffer Less.

During the summer the scant allowance of bread per capita was supplemented by fresh fruit and vegetables, but in winter bread is the only food available to the masses. Most of the facilities for preserving foods by canning are lacking because of the shortage of metals. Most of the olive oil, always the main Greek food staple, has been carted off to Germany. No meat is available, the Germans and Italians having commandeered the herds long ago.

Some persons are suffering less than others. These include the handful of industrialists and remnants of the old Constantinist Germanophile bloc willing to collaborate with the occupying forces. Others resort to the black market, which was said to be based on graft and manipulated thru the connivance of occupying officials.

Location of the Andreanof Islands, where a new air base has been established to operate against the Japs in the westernmost Aleutians (in circle).

U. S. ESTABLISHES NEW AIR BASE IN ALEUTIAN ISLES

make their way miles inland over tufted tundra, on which there were no paths. Some men, dressed for dry hiking, found themselves wading streams. Others pitched in as beach crews and waded in waist deep surf to haul rations, guns and ammunition off the landing boats.

An Airfield in Ten Days.

Oddly enough, improvement in the weather after the second day made the general staff of the landing force very unhappy. Most of the officers were thoroly convinced Japanese bombers would be over any minute. They were puzzled when the enemy failed to appear, and some called the operation at that stage Japan's greatest missed opportunity in the North Pacific war.

In 10 days the landing force was established, field kitchens were operating, and the men were on regular rations.

The chief immediate purpose of the landing force was to establish an air field from which land based American fighting planes would be able to protect our bombers while the latter pounded Kiska and other Jap occupied islands. This landing field started to take shape on the third day of the landing operation.

One plane landed on the fourth day in a test. At the end of 10 days the officers in charge said it could be used immediately by fighters and by transports.

Transports Are Crowded.

The entire landing operation was planned with greatest secrecy. The ships were loaded at various Pacific coast and Alaskan ports, and moved without fanfare to the rendezvous, some loaded so heavily the men had to eat and sleep in relays.

The ships moved west in a constant state of alert. Tension reached its pitch when intelligence reported that Japanese planes were sighed over an island east of the one to which the convoy was headed.

On the day of landing, breakfast was served at 3:15 a. m. Shortly after daylight, the transports dropped anchor and troops began going overboard 30 to a boat.

The rain pounded the faces of the troops. As they climbed the ridges toward the fog bound mountains in the interior.

Caterpillars and half tracks were among the first equipment brought ashore. Colonels and privates alike stumbled thru the sand and over the muskeg for the first several days.

Campfires a Real Job.

The island's treelessness made building campfires a test of ingenuity. On the first night, most of the men had no fires at all, altho a few managed to make wet driftwood and smashed crates into blazes. They used oars from beached landing boats as tent stakes.

Roads were constructed by running a tractor-scraper across the terrain, and cutting away the top layer of muskeg. The sand below made a fairly good surface. In some places, however, the going was so bad that even caterpillars bogged down hopelessly.

In the harbor, work never stopped. Ship winches worked night and day. Barges moved as fast as possible between ship and shore, and civilian and soldier longshoremen thought nothing of loading six or eight ton tractors over the side of a ship to a barge in total darkness.

Everything Carried.

On shore nearly everything except tractors had to be carried from the barges to the beach on some one's shoulders. Men worked four hours at a time in the water, then took most of an eight hour free period trying to get warm and dry.

By the end of a week the beach was clear of stacked ammunition, rations and equipment which previously had made such a lovely target.

Most of the naval vessels had departed, leaving protection of the thousands of men to shore batteries. The next day, however, new fleet freighters with escort arrived and the second phase of unloading began. At the end of the 11th day there still was no sign of the enemy and the crisis was over.

U. S. BOMBERS IN INDIA BLAST JAP AIR BASE FROM 100 FT. IN CHINA

NEW DELHI, India, Oct. 3 (AP).—The United States army air forces said in a communique today:

"On Sept. 27 a medium bomber based in India attacked buildings on the Tingka [Yunnan] air base with fragmentation and demolition bombs.

"Bombing from 30 feet altitude, a building was destroyed by a direct hit. Continuing to Lowing field, also in Yunnan, natives and soldiers working on runways were dispersed and a direct hit and near misses were scored on airport buildings. Flying home, tractors parked along railroad tracks near Katha were bombed from 100 feet.

"On Sept. 28 Washawng and two adjoining villages in the Myitkyina area were strafed by fighters. Incendiary and fragmentation bombs were dropped and villages were left in flames. We sustained no losses in any of these operations."

A British communique said military targets in central Burma were successfully attacked by RAF bombers.

BRITISH MENACE RAIL TERMINAL IN MADAGASCAR

VICHY, France, Oct. 3 (AP).—British capture of Antsirabe, a railway terminal tapping the interior of southern Madagascar, appeared imminent tonight as the French acknowledged loss of Sambaina, last big post blocking the rail and road approaches to the town.

The colonial office said preparations already had been made for a British advance southward from Antsirabe and that native partisans were being armed to ambush a South African column along the 150 mile trail around Mount Bity to Fianarantsoa, capital of the south country.

They may enlist in the quartermaster corps, ordnance department, chemical warfare service, medical department, and corps of military police. Formerly they were limited to the air forces, infantry, cavalry, coast artillery, field artillery, armored force, engineers, and signal corps.

Yank Soldiers Raise Fund for University of Iceland

LONDON, Oct. 3 (AP).—United States soldiers stationed in Iceland helped raise $15,500 for a new dormitory at the University of Iceland by performing in a student fair for a week, AEF headquarters announced today. AUSSIES PUSH ON, CLIMB 1,200 FOOT RIDGE IN GUINEA

Advance Six Miles; Near Gap Entrance.

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Oct. 4 [Sunday]—(AP).—Pursuing the Japanese along the upward trail of the Owen Stanley range, Australian soldiers scored a six mile advance up a precipitous 1,200 foot ridge and have reached Efogi, only seven miles from the entrance to the gap thru the mountain backbone, it was announced today.

The communique did not make clear whether Efogi actually had been captured. It said forward elements had pushed that far and had captured some enemy ordnance stores and equipment.

Efogi, like the other jungle villages which Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops have occupied in their week long offensive up the southern side of the great island mountain range, had previously been in the hands of the Japanese.

The taking of Efogi opened up the way to control of the Myola lakes. Isuraya, generally described as the entrance to the gap to Kokoda and Buna, Japanese base on the New Guinea north coast, is seven miles beyond Efogi.

Menari, heavily strafed by allied fighters and bombers for several days, was taken without opposition, much to the surprise of the Australians.

The mystery of the enemy's whereabouts, as well as his lack of air support, increased as the Australians advanced unchallenged. Observers believed, however, that the Japanese, who encountered growing supply difficulties as they advanced, may be waiting for these problems to be equalized before making a stand.

Three Cruisers Bombed.

The headquarters communique indicated that ground troops were active not alone in the Owen Stanley area. It told also of a raid on Mubo, 12 miles south of Salamaua on the enemy held northern coast of New Guinea. At least 25 Japanese were killed or wounded.

In another phase of the campaign allied torpedo planes were said to have attacked enemy shipping in the Solomon Islands and were believed to have scored hits on three light cruisers and two merchant vessels.

The torpedo plane raid was made at dawn at Buin on the southwest tip of Bougainville Island, the communique said.

Allied fighters and bombers pounded hard up and down the Buna-Efogi track, strafing a warehouse at Buna, the Japanese base on the coast, again blasting the tottering Wairopi bridge, the Japanese supply bottleneck, with three bombs, and coöperating with the advancing ground forces by strafing areas north of Efogi and about the Myola lakes.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—The violence of Nazi efforts to cut the British-American supply route to Murmansk, Russia, was indicated today in navy publication of a commendation for the captain of an American gun crew aboard a merchant vessel bound for the Russian port. The officer commended was Ensign Howell Sherer Murray, 24 years old, of 31 North Linden avenue, Highland Park, Ill. He received this navy department citation:

"The navy department has been informed of your gallant action as captain of the gun crew of a merchant vessel during a voyage to Murmansk. It is evident that this vessel underwent almost continuous submarine and air attack for five days, during which time you inspired your men to combat the enemy and you defended the ship vigorously until she arrived safely at her destination. For the endurance, courage, and devotion to duty shown during these engagements with the enemy, you are hereby commended."

A similar citation was given to Lieut [jg] John Gellert Grotenrath, 28 years old, of Grand Rapids, Mich. He had charge of the gun crew of a merchantman which was attacked for three days on the Murmansk route.

BANDITS BEAT, ROB YOUTH.

Two armed men beat into unconsciousness George Peterson, 17 years old, and robbed him of $55 and 10 cartons of cigarets in a filling station in which he is an attendant at 7600 South Chicago avenue yesterday.

U. S. AND BRITISH MARINES END 5 DAY MOCK FIGHT

LONDON, Oct. 3.—United States and British marines have just completed somewhere in England, a five day battle exercise. Col. W. I. Jordan, senior United States marine corps officer on the scene, declared that "after this a lot of battles are going to seem easy."

It was the first time joint maneuvers were held by marines of the two countries. The climax of the "battle" was witnessed by Lord Mountbatten, commando chief, and Gen. Sir Alan Bourne, adjutant general of the royal marines. Both praised the performance of the Americans and Britishers alike. Infantry, artillery, tanks, planes and motorized units participated in the games.

The operations included landing exercises, long marches by day and night—including one lasting 29 hours in a driving rain—the use of live ammunition and a "fight with the enemy" over mountainous terrain.

FEW AXIS TROOPS FIGHT IN AFRICA, ROMMEL CLAIMS

[By Wireless to The New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 3.—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, who has been consulting Fuehrer Hitler in Berlin, told newspaper men today that the war in North Africa was being fought by Germany and Italy under trying conditions. Despite their inferiority in numbers the axis forces, he said, have captured important positions that had been held by the British in the Mediterranean.

"When the history of the North African fighting comes to be written, the world will be astonished to learn with what comparatively small forces we succeeded in driving the British back into Egypt." Rommel said.

The axis forces, he added, are only 62 miles from Alexandria and Cairo and command the gates to Egypt, continuing: "We did not advance into Egypt merely to be thrown out again. We proposed to hold what we have."

FREIGHT BRAKEMAN KILLED.

WAR IN PACIFIC
has stopped all shipments of cultured pearls from the Orient.

Our last advice from the South Sea Islands is that the fisheries have been destroypd and it will be several years before any more cultured pearls can be supplied from there as it takes from four to seven years for the clams to finish pearls. This means that the present supply will have to last for at least five to seven years.

SOLOMONS SEEN AS CENTER OF BIG DECISIVE BATTLE

Writer Says Islands Are Vital to Japs.

BY F. TILLMAN DURDIN.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

GUADALCANAL, Solomon Islands, Sept. 21 [Delayed.—It is becoming increasingly evident that the war is being brought to a focus in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area of the Solomons. From here the Japanese attack on Port Moresby seems designed only to forestall offensive moves by Gen. Douglas MacArthur while the major Japanese efforts are devoted to counter-offensive action in the Solomons.

Japanese task forces and the biggist Japanese aerial thrusts have all been toward Guadalcanal and Tulagi. Answering Japanese threats, American naval strength has remained pointed toward the Solomons. A convoy of reinforcements and supplies, escorted by allied warships, put in here. Henderson field is receiving steady reinforcements of planes and men.

American occupation of the small Guadalcanal-Tulagi radius has marked this area as a point of conflict. We must keep it—with its flat plain covered delta lands ideal for airdromes around Lunga point on Guadalcanal and its deep broad ship anchorages around Tulagi—as an attack base against the whole Japanese position in the southwest Pacific.

May See Decisive Battle.

The Japanese want the area desperately to frustrate allied intentions and to utilize for advances they would like to make against New Caledonia, Fiji, and New Zealand.

It is not at all improbable that the Solomons area will see the decisive battle of the Pacific; certainly engagements tht will determine the immedite future of the war in the South Pacific will take place. All roads lead to the Solomons in the South Pacific.

It seems certain that the Japanese have not conceded Guadalcanal and Tulagi to the allies and will make another attack. Whether the Japanese will pursue the policy which has failed heretofore, of building up a striking forces of troops on Guadalcanal by nightly landings of small forces by small boats and destroyers, or whether they will venture a swift major stroke with a big naval task force supporting transports bringing in troops and equipment, remains to be seen. Certainly the later move would risk disaster from bombers and fighters based on Guadalcanal and other allied bases.

May Try Task Force.

Apparently the Japanese have hoped to sneak such a task force supported convoy into Guadalcanal waters without being detected. Such might have been the intention of the force which recently was spotted, bombed and dispersed by Flying Fortresses. It is likely that if the force hadn't been discovered it would have carried on to Guadalcanal. Apparently once spotted, the Japanese choose to withdraw these counterinvasion convoys. They have done this on a number of occasions.

Meanwhile, the Japanese may be working their own air and ship bases nearer Guadalcanal, such as Gizo, a small island off the north end of New Georgia, less than 300 miles from Guadalcanal, and Rekata bay on the northeast coast of Santa Ysabel, less than 200 miles from Guadalcanal. Here American scout bombers have discovered and bombed moored seaplanes, supply dumps, and small buildings. The Americans met scattered anti-aircraft fire.

Both Gizo and Rekata present possibilities of being turned into important air bases and ship anchorages and may play significant rôles in the struggle for the Solomons.

CHICAGOAN HELPS LIFT BOMBER OFF A GUINEA BEACH

Take 17 Days to Build a Runway.

BY E. R. NODERER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, Oct. 3.—New Guinea social notes:

Lieut. Jack Ryan.

Lieut. Jack Ryan, 4643 South Drake avenue, Chicago, returned to town today after spending 17 days as a castaway on a New Guinea beach.

Ryan, co-pilot of the bomber, and the crew took up temporary residence on the beach when the B-17 made a forced landing while returning from a raid on Rabaul. Today, Pilot Raymond E. Holsey, Altus, Okla., ran the ship down a 900 foot runway which had been constructed with the aid of 600 natives, and hopefully lifted it into the air.

Stripped of Its Guns.

As the giant plane left the beach it settled into the water while the wheels were being drawn up, but after a few unnerving splashes thru the tops of the waves, took to the air and came safely home.

The crew spent its time after the forced landing stripping the ship of everything that would come out, including the heavy guns, in order to lighten it for the takeoff.

Steel matting for a runway and food were dropped to them from the air after they had radioed their position. Lieut. Lisle Johnson of the Australian army, a former New Guinea rubber planter who happened to be in the area, rounded up 600 blacks, who picked up the tail of the giant fortress, which had sunk 2 feet into the sand, turned it around and hauled it to the end of a straight section of the beach.

Then they smoothed out the beach and put down the matting. Beyond the 700 feet of matting was about 200 feet of usable sand runway, making a total of 900 feet.

A thousand fuzzy haired native women with children clinging to their grass skirts watched the hazardous takeoff. Johnson rode out as a passenger and two members of the crew in addition to Holsey and Ryan were aboard. They were Lieut. J. A. Crocket, Stevens, Ark., and a Texas sergeant, J. B. Young. Aside from badly needing shaves, none seemed the worse for wear.

Last night, members of the Jungle King volley ball team loaded their piano into a truck and drove thru the bush to the camp of the Antiaircraft New Guinea Angels team, where hot music subsequently shook the dust from the trees.

Corp. Ernest Ross, 25, Denver, Col., a piano player, delivered such numbers as "Chattanooga Choo-choo," "Star Dust," "Blue Indigo," and other tunes warming the hearts of boys 12,000 miles from home. Corp. Horace Boyer, Portland, Ore., accompanied him on the accordion, and the singing was loud and long.

It's Not for Sale.

Having purchased it for 15 pounds [about $60] in Australia, the unit has been offered fabulous sums for the piano by envious outfits, but it definitely is not for sale. With a few strings and a dustingoff, the piano really played.

Corp. Ross, who played in the Denver university band and at Denver's Cosmopolitan hotel, tore off a few numbers for American correspondents today. Naked from his waist up, his tapping heel raised clouds of dust as the forest resounded to "12th Street Rag" and "Daddy, Daddy."

Capt. Carl Hustad, Minneapolis, Minn., came back from a visit to the Japanese at Rabaul with a piece of shrapnel in his rubber heel. Shrapnel had cut an inch thick bunch of cables in his Flying Fortress, preventing him from opening his bomb bay doors. He had to bring back five bombs, which made him pretty mad.

RED DRIVES WIN BACK POSITIONS AT STALINGRAD

Clear Out More Streets; Gain in Northwest.

MOSCOW, Oct. 4 [Sunday] (AP).—Resurgent soviet counterdrives inside Stalingrad and to the northwest and south of the Volga city broke German offensive power and regained position after position, the soviet information bureau announced today, but in one sector north of the city the Nazis hammered their way into a populated place.

In the vast and confused battle, now in its 41st day, in which cannon bellowed on all sides of the city and bombs crashed among the stones of its shattered masonry, German and Russian salients were interlaced until it seemed impossible to paint a clear picture of the situation from official dispatches.

[The Germans said that strong Russian relief actions north and south of Stalingrad failed after heavy fighting and that all objectives set for Friday in the northern part of the city were achieved. Far to the north in the Lake Ladoga region, the German communique claimed the destruction of seven encircled divisions and the capture of 12,370 prisoners and quantities of booty. No gains were claimed in the Caucasus.]

Occupy Valuable Positions.

The midnight communique said, however, that to the northwest the soviet counteroffensive, which has been gaining power now for several days, succeeded in "overcoming the enemy's resistance, forged ahead and occupied some valuable positions."

In the city itself, among the broad, shattered boulevards and apartment blocks, the Russians said they "cleared the Germans from several streets and part of the workers' settlement."

To the south, they repulsed several German attacks and then charged and succeeded in retaking positions which they had lost the previous day. In this battle, a three day engagement, 25 German tanks were destroyed and a battalion of enemy infantry wiped out, the Russians said, while 10 guns and other booty were captured.

Thus it appeared that the Russians were grasping desperately, and in some places successfully, for the initiative in the great battle.

Menace Nazis' Lines.

Their offensive northwest of the steel city on the broad 40 mile front between the Don and the Volga rivers appeared to be definitely menacing the German fingers thrust into Stalingrad.

The defenders were winning back the city, street by street, where the Germans had gained a foothold, and were slicing away at the German salients which menaced the city from the south.

But somewhere to the north—the city stretches for 15 miles north and south along the west bank of the Volga in a comparatively narrow band—the Germans were able to summon sufficient power in one sector to drive thru to one settlement, perhaps one of the industrial suburbs.

Illustrative of the fluid nature of the Stalingrad battle, the Russians said the Germans attempted a tank raid south of the city, but Russian artillery boxed in the tanks, cut them off from their supporting infantry, and forced them to withdraw in disorder. A soviet guards unit then took up the pursuit and killed 200 of the enemy.

Nazis Lose 800 Men.

Details of the fighting northwest of the city said seven German tanks were put out of commission, along the two batteries of artillery and that enemy ammunition dumps were demolished and a company of infantry wiped out.

The Germans lost 800 men in making their advance to the north of the city, the communique said.

In the Caucasus, however, where the Germans are reaching for the Grozny oil fields, the invaders succeeded in breaking into the outskirts of a populated place in the Mozdok area. The Russians did not give up the settlement and the fight continued.

Action also was reported from west of Moscow where a German regiment attacked several times. The Russians said they destroyed 16 tanks and killed 600 of the enemy.

PAY, FOOD, RENT CEILINGS FIXED BY ROOSEVELT

Justice Byrnes Appointed Economic Czar.

Price Administrator Henderson was relegated by today's order to membership on Byrnes' advisory board. To ease the blow for Henderson, who was pushed well into the background, Mr. Roosevelt sent him a letter calling on him to impose rent and food price ceilings. Henderson's office will serve as a unit of the new office and the former price czar will take his orders from the new economic czar, it was said.

Byrnes' appointment was a blow to New Dealers who had been touting Associate Justice William O. Douglas for the job. New Dealers did not consider Byrnes leftist enough for the post. The appointment was also a surprise to labor, particularly to the leftist CIO.

Opposed Wage-Hour Law.

In his service in the senate Byrnes had introduced legislation to curb sitdown strikes and opposed wage and hour legislation. He was considered a member of the farm bloc. For this reason the President was seen as making an effort to conciliate agriculture in naming Byrnes. He was also seen as moving to utilize Byrnes' facility for making friends to bring together various conflicting groups effected by anti-inflation legislation.

In announcing the Byrnes appointment, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Justice Byrnes is one of the foremost authorities in governmental administration in the United States. He knows the economic problems of this country whether they concern labor, the farmer, the consumer, the small retail store, or the manufacturer. I would never have asked him to resign from the Supreme court were it not for the fact that this job is one of the most important positions in this country. I know the American people can be sure that in keeping down the cost of living he will be fair to every one.

Need Judicial Consideration.

"This position calls primarily for judicial consideration. The organization will therefore be small because the administrative action will be carried out by the existing agencies.

"Justice Brynes' patriotic action in accepting this appointment deserves the praise and commendation of all our citizens."

At the same time in a statement on his moves under the inflation bill which congress passed the day after the deadline he had set Labor day, Mr. Roosevelt said that he was convinced his program will help win the war and expressed the hope that it would meet with the approval of all classes of citizens.

"The congress has done its part in helping substantially to stabilize the cost of living," he said. "The new legislation removes the exemption of certain foods, agricultural commodities and related products from the price controls of the emergency price control act, with the result that I have today taken action to stabilize 90 per cent of the country's food bill. It leaves the parity principal unimpaired. It reaffirms the powers of the executive over wages and salaries. It establishes a floor for wages and for farm prices.

"I am certain that from now on this substantial stabilization of the cost of living will assist greatly in bringing the war to a successful conclusion, will make the transition to peace conditions easier after the war, and will receive the wholehearted approval of farmers, workers and housewives in every part of the country."

In the portion of the executive order dealing with the establishment of the Office of Economic Stabilization and the Economic Stabilization board Mr. Roosevelt provided that Director Byrnes shall formulate and develop a comprehensive national policy relating to the control of civilian purchasing power, prices, rents, wages, salaries, profits, rationing, subsidies, and all related matters for the purpose of preventing avoidable increases in the cost of living, holding down unnecessary migration of labor, and facilitating the prosecution of the war in accordance with the legislation passed by congress.

Wages Decreases Curbed.

In setting forth a wage and salary stabilization policy the chief executive provided that there by no decreases for any particular work below the highest wages paid between Jan. 1 and Sept. 15 unless to correct inequalities.

In connection with the $25,000 limitation on salaries, a White House secretary said that the President's salary will undoubtedly be adjusted to conform with the limitation he ordered enforced. When the question of such a limitation was raised in congress Mrs. Roosevelt proposed that it be invoked against all salaries except the chief executive's.

Under the agricultural title of the order, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Price Administrator Henderson were directed to stabilize farm prices as the basis of the levels of Sept. 15, with additional instructions to make appropriate deductions from parity price or comparable price for payments made under the AAA and government subsidies.

Can Curb War Profits.

Under the order Director Byrnes is empowered, according to financial experts, to prevent accumulation of unreasonable war and other profits by imposing such price ceilings in such a manner as to hold down profits. To this end he is empowered to direct any federal agency to use what powers it has to curb profits. Exercise of this portion of the order may constitute the most complex and intricate portion of the duties of the new office, according to financial experts.

This section of the order put additional teeth in the administration's efforts to halt a rise of war profits. While excess profits tax legislation holds realization of profits down, there is nothing to stop individuals or corporations from making huge profits and paying taxes on them against the time when taxes may be lowered, or for other reasons.

In his letter to Henderson calling for ceilings on food products not previously covered and for extension of rent control, Mr. Roosevelt wrote:

"I wish you would consult with the secretary of agriculture and immediately establish ceiling prices for eggs, chickens, butter, cheese, potatoes, flour and such other foods as can be controled under existing laws.

Government 'Determined.'

"This government is determined at all costs to use all of its powers to prevent any avoidable rise in the cost of living.

"That part of the nation which has not yet been designated within defense rental areas should now be so treated.

"I wish you would immediately issue appropriate orders to prevent rent increases on urban and rural dwellings. In such areas as you deem appropriate to reduce current rents, I am sure you will proceed to take such action as may be necessary."

Shortly after receiving the letter Henderson established the 60 day emergency price ceiling, which increase from approximately 60 per cent to 90 per cent the number of food items of the average family covered by price control.

After Monday, OPA reported, the only important items exempt from price control will be fresh fruits and vegetables — exécept potatoes, dry onions and citrus fruits—and fresh fish and peanuts.

HIGH JINKS TOO LOW; BOMBING PILOTS CHIDED

Chicagoans with cricks in their necks and jitters from watching two twin motored army bombers skim their roofs yesterday may be interested in knowing that the pilots have been taken to the army's woodshed and given what's good for them. Capt. Clarence Dittman, commander of the pilots' flying unit at Chicago airport, said he had disciplined them.

R. B. White, manager of a loan office at 4704 Irving Park road, reported that the big bombers were flying so low that every one thought they would crack up. Many residents of the vicinity of Irving Park road and Cicero avenue complained that the planes were much too near their rooftops.

When Capt. Dittman learned of the low level high jinks, he began an investigation. It wasn't long until he reported that he'd found the culprits and punished them.

"The only place we want our men playing tag on the roofs," he said, "is Tokio."

JIMMY BYRNES: AN ALGER NOVEL COME TO LIFE!

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3.—The life of James Francis Byrnes, the newly appointed director of the newly created Office of Economic Stabilization, reads like a Horatio Alger novel.

From humble beginnings and an early life of privation, he forged ahead by industry and perseverance to high offices and recognition as an able public servant.

Slightly built and of magnetic manner, Byrnes is popular in all sections of the capital. At times he has opposed the chief executive and has still held the President's friendship—an accomplishment few men have equaled.

Unlike some of his New Deal colleagues, he showed in the senate that he was not wholly subservient to the orders of the executive branch of the government, but believed in maintaining the balance of government envisioned by the framers of constitution in setting up three independent branches of government—congress, the judiciary, and the executive.

Mother Forced to Work.

Shortly before Byrnes was born in Charleston, S. C., May 2, 1879, his father died and his mother worked as a dressmaker and choir leader to keep the family together. The family numbered besides James, his mother, and his sister, a sister of Mrs. Byrnes and her son, Frank Hogan, now a leading Washington lawyer and former president of the American Bar association.

In his early years James was an altar boy in the Roman Catholic church in which his mother was choir leader. Before his marriage he joined the Episcopal church of which his wife, the former Maude Busch of Aiken, S. C., is a member.

Quit School at 14.

"Jimmy," as he is known thruout the capital, quit school at the age of 14, but studied stenography to become a court reporter. He held this job eight years, studying law on the side, and was admitted to the bar in 1903. Instead of practicing law, however, he borrowed $4,500 and with $500 he had saved bought the Aiken Journal and Review which he edited until 1907. He married in 1906.

In 1908 he was elected prosecutor of the 2d South Carolina judicial circuit in which he had formerly been reporter. In 1910 he was elected to the house by the narrow margin of 57 votes. In 1930 he ran for the senate and was successful. He was reelected in 1936.

Master Minded F. D. R. "Draft."

His friendship with the President began in the last war when Mr. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy. He supported Mr. Roosevelt in all three of the latter's Presidential campaigns and with Harry Hopkins master minded the third term "draft" at the Chicago convention in 1940.

Altho he was the White House liaison man with congress, Byrnes showed marked independence at times in opposing legislation sought by the President. He opposed the wage and hour legislation, some relief measures, and worked to pass the soldier's bonus legislation over Presidential veto.

In June, 1941, Byrnes was named to the Supreme court. He remained the President's legislative adviser, however. Since the war Mr. Roosevelt leaned on him more heavily than before.

VILLAGE MOURNS 29 KILLED WHEN BOMB HIT SCHOOL

A VILLAGE IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, Oct. 3 (AP).—Almost every inhabitant of this bereaved countryside was present to mourn today as the headmaster of a boys' school and the 28 pupils who were killed with him by a German raider Tuesday were buried in a communal grave.

The bishop of Chichester conducted the services in the little parish church, there neighbors and civil defense and military units joined in a solemn procession to the grave yard.

The headmaster died trying to protect his boys. Some still are alive because he shielded them under a desk with his body when a bomb struck their schoolhouse.

AXIS PLANES DROP BOMBS CLOSE TO ALEXANDRIA

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 3 (AP).—A communique today said a few bombs dropped harmlessly in the Alexandria area during a brief air raid yesterday.

While the Egyptian land front was quiet yesterday, six enemy planes were reported shot down. On Thursday night, a communique revealed, allied bombers attacked enemy shipping near Derna and started fires at the axis airfield at Sidi Haneish.

Nine Planes Downed, Says Italy.

2,000,000 London Women Sign Up for Fire Watching

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 3—Two million London women today registered for the fire watch. Simultaneously thruout Britain, women born in 1897 registered for war work, so many London women had to register twice. Special booths were set up in town halls, air raid patrol offices, public halls, baths, and school in the London area to cope with the unusually large number.

GIVE COURT POST TO MIDWESTERN MAN, WILEY ASKS

Senators Say Biddle May Get Job.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3.—Rep. Alexander Wiley [R., Wis.] tonight urged appointment of a midwesterner to the United States Supreme court to succeed Justice James F. Byrnes, who resigned to become spearhead of the anti-inflation drive. Meanwhile, most congressional guesses pointed to Attorney General Francis Biddle for the job.

"The court will, I fear, be packed with men from one or two sections of the country" Wiey said. "I think that the President might well pick a midwesterner in order to assure the people of that region recognition for their war efforts."

Biddle Post a Stepping Stone.

At least a dozen senators expected the appointment to go to Biddle because the attorney generalship is the logical stepping stone to the high court.

Biddle is a Pennsylvanian, as is Justice Owen J. Roberts. His appointment would add another easterner to a bench already numbering five easterners.

The midwest is represented by Justice Frank Murphy, who is in the army. The south has two members, Justice Hugh Black and Justice Reed.

Ellender Backs Biddle.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender [D., Ala.] declared himself a Biddle supporter. Other senators who said they believed Biddle would get the court seat refused to authorize use of their names as suggesting the appointment.

"There's no telling what the President is apt to say back to us if we so much as suggest anybody at all," said one senator. "Whoever it is, the senate very likely will confirm his appointment immediately for fear of what the consequences might be if we don't."

Names other than Biddle's mentioned as possibilities for the post were Charles Fahy, solicitor general; Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of anti-trust law enforcement; Samuel Rosenman, New York Supreme court justice and close adviser of the President, and Sen. Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.], the majority leader.

ECONOMIC CZAR GETS POWER TO ENFORCE ORDER

Board of 15 Created; Must Formulate Policies.

"Providing for the stabilizing of the national economy."

"By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes, and particularly by the act of Oct. 2, 1942, entitled "An act to amend the emergency price control act of 1942 to aid in preventing inflation and for other purposes," as President of the United States and commander in chief of the army and navy, and in order to control so far as possible the inflationary tendencies and the vast dislocations attendant thereon which threaten our military effort and our domestic economic structure, and for the more effective prosecution of the war, it is hereby ordered as follows:

TITLE I.

"Establishment of an Office of Economic Stabilization."

"1. There is established in the Office of Emergency Management of the executive office of the President an Office of Economic Stabilization at the head of which shall be an economic stabilization director [hereinafter referred to as the director].

"2. There is established in the Office of Economic Stabilization an economic stabilization board with which the director shall advise and consult. The board shall consist of the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, the secretary of commerce, the secretary of labor, the chairman of the board of governors of the federal reserve system, the director of the bureau of the budget, the price administrator, the chairman of the National War Labor board, and two representatives each of labor, management, and farmers to be appointed by the President. The director may invite for consultation the head of any other department or agency. The director shall serve as chairman of the board.

"3. The director, with the approval of the President, shall formulate and develop a comprehensive national economic policy relating to the control of civilian purchasing power, prices, rents, wages, salaries, profits, rationing, subsidies, and all related matters—all for the purpose of preventing avoidable increases in the cost of living, coöperating in minimizing the unnecessary migration of labor from one business, industry, or region to another, and facilitating the prosecution of the war.

Power Delegated.

"To give effect to this comprehensive national economic policy the director shall have power to issue directives on policy to the federal departments and agencies concerned.

"4. The guiding policy of the director and of all departments and agencies of the government shall be to stabilize the cost of living in accordance with the act of Oct. 2, 1942; and it shall be the duty and responsibility of the director and of all departments and agencies of the government to coöperate in the execution of such administrative programs and in the development of such legislative programs as may be necessary to that end. The administration of activities related to the national economic policy shall remain with the departments and agencies now responsible for such activities, but such administration shall conform to the directives on policy issued by the director.

TITLE II.

"Wage and Salary Stabilization Policy."

"1. No increases in wage rates, granted as a result of voluntary agreement, collective bargaining, conciliation, arbitration, or otherwise, and no decreases in wage rates, shall be authorized unless notice of such increases or decreases shall have been filed with the National War Labor board, and unless the National War Labor board has approved such increases or decreases.

"2. The National War Labor board shall not approve any increase in the wage rates prevailing on Sept. 15, 1942, unless such increase is necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities, to eliminate substandards of living, to correct gross inequities, or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

"Provided, however, that where the National War Labor board or the price administrator shall have reason to believe that a proposed wage increase will require a change in the price ceiling of the commodity or service involved, such proposed increase, if approved by the National War Labor board, shall become effective only if also approved by the director.

Wage Decreases Banned.

"3. The National War Labor board shall not approve a decrease in the wages for any particular work below the highest wages paid therefore between Jan. 1, 1942, and Sept. 15, 1942, unless to correct gross inequalities and to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

"4. The National War Labor board shall, by general regulation, make such exemptions from the provisions of this title in the case of small total wage increases or decreases as it deems necessary for the effective administration of this order.

"5. No increases in salaries now in excess of $5,000 per year [except in instances in which an individual has been assigned to more difficult or responsible work], shall be granted until otherwise determined by the director.

"6. No decreases shall be made in the salary for any particular work below the highest salary paid therefore between Jan. 1, 1942 and Sept. 15, 1942 unless to correct gross inequities and to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

"7. In order to correct gross inequities and to provide for greater equality in contributing to the war effort, the director is authorized to take the necessary action, and to issue the appropriate regulations, so that, insofar as practicable, no salary shall be authorized under title III, section 4 to the extent that it exceeds $25,000 after the payment of taxes allocable to the sum in excess of $25,000. Provided, however, that such regulations shall make due allowance for the payment of life insurance premiums on policies heretofore issued, and required payments on fixed obligations heretofore incurred, and shall make provision to prevent undue hardship.

"8. The policy of the federal government, as established in executive order No. 9017 of Jan. 12, 1942, to encourage free collective bargaining between employers and employés is reaffirmed and continued.

"9. Insofar as the provision of clause [1] of section 302 [C] of the emergency price control act of 1942 are inconsistent with this order, they are hereby suspended.

TITLE III.

Administration of Wage and Salary Policy.

"1. Except as modified by this order, the national War Labor board shall continue to perform the powers, functions, and duties conferred upon it by executive order No. 9017, and the functions of said board are hereby extended to cover all industries and all employés. The national War Labor board shall continue to follow the procedures specified in said executive order.

"2. The national War Labor board shall constitute the agency of the federal government authorized to carry out the wage policies stated in this order, or the directives on policy issued by the director under this order. The national War Labor board is further authorized to issue such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the speedy determination of the propriety of any wage increases or decreases in accordance with this order, and to avail itself of the services and facilities of such state and federal departments and agencies as, in the discretion of the national War Labor board, may be of assistance to the board.

"3. No provision with respect to wages contained in any labor agreement between employers and employés [including the shipbuilding stabilization agreements as amended on May 16, 1942, and the wage stabilization agreement of the building construction industry arrived at May 22, 1942] which is inconsistent with the policy herein enunciated or hereafter formulated by the director shall be enforced except with the approval of the national War Labor board within the provisions of this order.

"The national War Labor board shall permit the shipbuilding stabilization committee and the Wage Adjustment board for the building construction industry, both of which are provided for in the foregoing agreements, to continue to perform their functions therein set forth, except insofar as any of them is inconsistent with the terms of this order.

"4. In order to effectuate the purposes and provisions of this order and the act of Oct. 2, 1942, any wage or salary payment made in contravention thereof shall be disregarded by the executive departments and other governmental agencies in determining the costs or expenses of any employer for the purpose of any law or regulation, including the emergency price control act of 1942 or any maximum price regulation thereof, or for the purpose of calculating deductions under the revenue laws of the United States or for the purpose of determining costs or expenses under any contract made by or on behalf of the government of the United States.

TITLE IV.

"Prices of Agricultural Commodities."

"1. The prices of agricultural commodities and of commodities manufactured or processed in whole or in substantial part from any agricultural commodity shall be stabilized, so far as practicable, on the basis of levels which existed on Sept. 15, 1942 and in compliance with the act of October 2, 1942.

"2. In establishing, maintaining or adjusting maximum prices for agricultural commodities or for commodities processed or manufactured in whole or in substantial part from any agricultural commodity, appropriate deductions shall be made from parity price or comparable price for payments made under the soil conservation and domestic allotment act, as amended, parity payments made under the agricultural adjustment act of 1938, as amended, and governmental subsidies.

Settlement of Disputes.

"3. Subject to the directives on policy of the director, the price of agricultural commodities shall be established or maintained or adjusted jointly by the secretary of agriculture and the price administrator; and any disagreement between them shall be resolved by the director. The price of any commodity manufactured or processed in whole or in substantial part from an agricultural commodity shall be established or maintained or adjusted by the price administrator, in the same administrative manner provided for under the emergency price control act of 1942.

"4. The provisions of sections 3[A] and 3[C] of the emergency price control act of 1942 are hereby suspended to the extent that such provisions are inconsistent with any or all prices established under this order for agricultural commodities, or commodities manufactured or processed in whole or in substantial part from an agricultural commodity.

TITLE V.

"Profits and Subsidies."

"1. The price administrator in fixing, reducing, or increasing prices, shall determine price ceilings in such a manner that profits are prevented which in his judgment are unreasonable or exorbitant.

"2. The director may direct any federal department or agency including, but not limited to, the department of agriculture [including the Commodity Credit corporation and the Surplus Marketing administration], the department of commerce, the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and other corporations organized pursuant to section 5D of the Reconstruction Finance corporation act, as amended, to use its authority to subsidize and to purchase for resale, if such measures are necessary to insure the maximum necessary production and distribution of any commodity, or to maintain ceiling prices, or to prevent a price rise inconsistent with the purposes of this order.

TITLE VI.

General Provisions.

"1. Nothing in this order shall be construed as affecting the present operation of the fair labor standards act, the national labor relations act, the Walsh-Healey act, the Davis-Bacon act, or the adjustment procedure of the railway labor act.

"2. Salaries and wages under this order shall include all forms of direct or indirect remuneration to an employé or officer for work or personal services performed for an employer or corporation, including but not limited to bonuses, additional compensation, gifts, commission, fees, and any other remuneration in any form or medium whatsoever [excluding insurance and pension benefits in a reasonable amount as determined by the director]; but for the purpose of determining wages or salaries for any period prior to Sept. 16, 1942, such additional compensation shall be taken into account only in cases where it has been customarily paid by employers to their employés. "Salaries" as used in this order means remuneration for personal services regularly paid on a weekly, monthly, or annual basis.

"3. The director shall, so far as possible, utilize the information, data, and staff services of other federal departments and agencies which have activities or functions related to national economic policy. All such federal departments and agencies shall supply available information, data, and services required by the director in discharging his responsibilities.

Notice of Changes.

"4. The director shall be the agency to receive notice of any increase in the rates or charges of common carriers or other public utilities as provided in the aforesaid act of October 2, 1942.

"5. The director may perform the functions and duties, and exercise the powers, authority, and discretion conferred upon him by this order thru such officials or agencies, and in such manner, as he may determine. The decision of the director as to such delegation and the manner of exercise thereof shall be final.

"6. The director, if he deems it necessary, may direct that any policy formulated under this order shall be enforced by any other department or agency under any other power or authority which may be provided by any of the laws of the United States.

"7. The director, who shall be appointed by the President, shall receive such compensation as the President shall provide, and within the limits of funds which may be made available, may employ necessary personnel and make provision for supplies, facilities and services necessary to discharge his responsibilities."

N. U. TEACHER CALLS WAGE STABILIZATION ACTION 'TOOTHLESS'

Regarding President Roosevelt's action yesterday in stabilizing wages, salaries, profits and farm prices at Sept. 15 levels, Herbert D. Simpson, professor of public finance at Northwestern university, said: "It establishes floors much more effectively than ceilings. With regard to the latter, the discretion permitted the President is so wide that he can make any exception he may wish to.

"Farm prices are not to be raised unless 'to correct maladjustments' or 'to aid in prosecution of the war.' There isn't a wage situation in the United States which couldn't be brought under one or the other of these exceptions. It is toothless legislation unless the President decides to put teeth into it."

Highest Chicago wholesale market prices of farm commodities included in the President's order yesterday fixing price ceilings on food items at the highest levels in the period from Sept. 28 to Oct. 2 are:

Chickens, hens, 23 cents per pound; springers, 22½ cents per pound. Eggs, 42 cents per dozen. Cheese, 23¼ cents per pound. Butter, 45¾ cents per pound. Idaho potatoes, $3 per 100 pound sack. Flour, $6.45 per barrel.

Because of the variance of retail food prices in localities and stores, it is difficult to estimate an average high price for the period.

WILLKIE PLEADS FOR OFFENSIVES ON EVERY FRONT

CHUNGKING, China, Oct. 3 (AP).—Wendell Willkie told a distinguished Chinese audience today that he regards bold, offensive action in Asiatic battle zones as important as the opening of a second front, which he urged while in Moscow.

The "common citizen" of Africa, Europe, Asia, and America is far ahead of his leaders and much more eager to get on with the war, Willkie said at a banquet given in his honor by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He pleaded for a "great unison of effort on the part of the united nations to take the offensive everywhere."

This common man, he asserted, is annoyed by delays, no longer fears the myth that Germany and Japan are invincible, and demands action now.

Sees Government Chiefs.

Willkie's address followed conferences with Chiang Kai-shek and other governmental and military leaders including Lin Sen, president of the Nationalist government; H. H. Kung, minister of finance, and Ho Ying-chin, chief of the general staff of the Chinese army.

Willkie praised Chiang as a man of aggressive spirit "who believes in his heart that freedom and security are possible of achievement not only for China but for the whole world.

"I came to China not thru what used to be called the treaty port, but thru great, wealthy provinces to the west of here," he observed. "I've worked and lived in the west of America and I know from experience the kind of aggressive self-confidence which is developed in pioneer regions by men who are not afraid to take chances — sometimes very grave chances—in pursuit of something in which they believe.

He Bets on China.

"Prediction is not my business, but I would be prepared to make a substantial bet that the confident and aggressive spirit I've seen in Sinkiang, in Kansu, and Szechwan is not likely to be stopped by floods, earthquakes, or by the Japanese."

The Chinese, overlooking nothing to make their visitor comfortable, even demolished a squatters' settlement which could have been seen from a window of his palatial guest house—"so that it might not offend his eye."

EX-SPEED TRAP FIGURE IS BACK ON STATE POLICE

Lieut. Bernard Clayton Hamlin, former police chief of Lake Villa, who resigned last year as head of the Elgin district of the Illinois state police, was reappointed in a surprise order issued from Springfield yesterday.

Hamlin, also a former Lake county deputy sheriff and state's attorney's investigator, gained considerable notoriety in 1926 when he was one of the first officials convicted following grand jury action in an anti-speed trap drive. Hamlin, charged with malfeasance, was fined and compelled to resign after he had fired upon and beaten a motorist who mistook him for a bandit.

The Elgin district, comprising six counties, had been in charge of Sergt. Phil Guinto.

Brands Him Ignorant of Military Principles.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3.—The Army and Navy journal today denounced Wendell Willkie as completely ignorant of fundamental military principles for his advocacy of the immediate opening of a second front after visiting Josef Stalin in Moscow.

The quasi-official military publication anticipated by some hours that the 1940 Republican candidate for President would utter some embarrassing promises of a second front in Asia on reaching Chungking, China, on his tour of united nations capitals, which is being made with the approval of President Roosevelt.

As the journal reached the hands of army and navy subscribers, Willkie spoke in Chungking at a dinner given in his honor by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and said the common citizen of the united nations is far ahead of his leaders and much more eager to get on with the war. He urged action by the united nations to take the offensive everywhere.

White House Dodges Query.

This latest assumption of military spokesmanship by Willkie came as the White House and state department sidestepped an inquiry why Willkie is being permitted to collect cash profits on a trip which has some official status. The question was raised by the fact that Willkie, who has been carried in army planes in delivering personal messages to the heads of various governments from the President, has written a magazine article on his interview with Stalin.

On Capitol hill members of congress remarked that the publication of the magazine article marked his complete adoption of the New Deal foreign policy, which he campaigned against in 1940. It was said that by selling the magazine article, he emulated Harry Hopkins, White House intimate, who in 1941 sold a magazine article on his visit to Stalin on an official mission.

Hopkins refused to grant interviews to American reporters here to make his article, for which he was paid handsomely, the more valuable to the magazine which bought it. He was condemned in the press and in congress, along with other New Dealers, for selling for profit information reaching him by virtue of his official position.

Merely Visitor, Says Journal.

"It is fortunate for the war effort of the united nations that Willkie has ceased to be the 'personal representative' of the President and in Chungking will be merely a 'visitor,' else he might be demanding with some semblance of authority that a second front be established immediately in the proximity of Japan, as he desires to be done in Europe within fighting distance of Germany," the journal said.

"Doubtless carried away by the persuasive arguments of Premier Stalin, the former Republican standard bearer suggested that public opinion prod our military and naval leaders in order that the march on Berlin might immediately begin," the journal continued. "Clearly he proposed to participate in the creation of that public opinion, first by his statement and then by speeches on his return to the United States."

The journal recalled that Willkie's statement in Russia was repudiated inferentially by Winston Churchill, British premier, and directly by Sen. Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.], the President's spokesman in the senate. Both made statements after Willkie's plea saying the decision on the second front must be made by military leaders, not politicians. United nations military leaders are making plans in the light of the lessons learned at Dieppe, where half the total forces and two-thirds of the Canadian forces were lost in a Commando raid.

"Public opinion in the past has compelled activities which were doomed to failure, and cost heavily in life and equipment," the journal said. "Mr. Willkie, who is in complete ignorance of fundamental military principles and of the lessons of the current war, has attempted to force the high command to move before it is ready.

"That the American people will listen to him when they know that the lives of their sons are at stake is to be doubted. They will prefer to place their trust in leaders who are informed, and upon whom will be the responsibility for victory or defeat. Possibly Mr. Willkie may make promises at Chungking which will be embarrassing. If so, they will be without basis of authority."

Identify Midwest Airmen Who Flew in Big Attack.

LONDON, Oct. 3 (AP).—The United States army air force in Britain today announced the names of the American flyers who took part in yesterday's Flying Fortress raid on northern France. Among them were nine from Illinois and four from Indiana, as well as many others from other midwestern states. The Illinoisans included two from Chicago and one each from Wilmette and Forest Park.

[Another dispatch listed a third Chicago flyer among the raiders. He was identified as Sergt. Mitchell Small of 1117 Lill avenue, who was credited with downing a Nazi fighter plane.]

The Chicagoans on the raid, described here as one of the greatest allied air offensives of the war, were Lieut. John A. Dymek Jr. of 1420 West 73d place, and Sergt. Lee Wong Gem of 221 West Cermak road. The Wilmette flyer is Lieut. William L. Condy of 1001 Oakwood drive, while the Forest Park participant in the raid was Sergt. Frank J. Conlon Jr. of 923 South Harlem avenue.

Other Illinoisans who took part were Lieut. Leland S. Rolf, Virginia, and Sergeants George R. Kelly, Vandalia; William L. Hayes, Franklin; Eldon L. Kimmel, Gilman, and Harold D. Croon, Nokomis. The Indiana raiders were Sergeants James R. Agree, Nebraska; Walter L. Dove, Attica; Adrian O. Weddle, Indianapolis, and Willard N. Durbin, Waldron.

Midwesterners Who Hit at Nazis.

Other midwesterners in the raid, by states, were:

WISCONSIN—Lieuts. Malcolm K. Andreson, Hixton; William E. Loewecke, Merrill, and Clifford J. Voith, Junction City; Sergts. Vern F. Fuka, Prairie du Chien; Bernard L. Juza, Haugen, and Robert C. Dobson, Dane.

CHICAGOLAND RAIDERS.

Listed as one of the American flyers who participated in the Flying Fortress raid, Lieut. Condy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Condy, Wilmette. He was a former student at De Paul and Northwestern universities. Last February, when he was a cadet, he married Mercedes Sadler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Sadler, 7348 Ridge avenue, in Phoenix, Ariz.

Tech. Sergt. Conlon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Conlon, Forest Park. A graduate of Proviso Township High school, now 26 years old, he joined the army air force more than a year ago.

Lieut. Dymek is 22 years old, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Dymek of Chicago. He attended St. Viator's college at Bourbonnais and Loyola university.

Sergt. Small is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lane, 1117 Lill avenue, with whom he formerly lived. Sergt. Small was born and educated in Chicago. He will be 21 years old Nov. 11. After completing school he moved to San Francisco, Cal., with his mother, Mrs. Lillian Pappas.

MANAGER DIES IN CLEANER SHOP.

Henry Besser, 50 years old, 1641 East 78th street, manager of the Checker Cleaners company, 1179 East 55th street, died at his work yesterday, apparently of a heart attack.

Take Part in Raid

4 CHICAGOANS COMPLETE ARMY MEDICAL COURSE

Carlisle Barracks, Pa., Oct. 3 [Special].—Four Chicagoans were among 54 officers of the army medical department who were graduated here today from a one month training course of the Medical Field Service school and left immediately to take posts in new units being organized.

They are Maj. Thomas G. Prempas, 4513 Monroe street; Capt. Caesar Sweitzer, 6345 Magnolia avenue; Capt. Samson D. Entin, 3059 Ainslie street, and First Lieut. Myron J. Levin, 2337 East 72d street.

The graduates completed training for assignments in the medical battalions of five new infantry divisions now being activated.

REVEAL NAMES OF AIR HEROES, ENGLAND URGED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Following yesterday's Flying Fortress raid over France, in connection with which the names of the successful American pilots were revealed, the Evening News Diarist today inquired: "Will the American practice of naming pilots who have achieved success spread to the air ministry, whose love of anonymity has caused periodical criticism in parliament?"

After recalling the air ministry's regulations, which say no names must be mentioned unless for a special reason, the Diarist said: "So literally was this interpreted at the beginning of the war that the only occasion upon which a name was issued was when it appeared for an award or casualty list."

The air ministry, he continued, eventually relaxed its rules a bit. The Diarist added: "Names now are allowed to appear in the air ministry's news service accounts of operations, but we have yet to see the air ministry give a bunch of names of successful pilots after a large scale operation."

1 Indiana Flyer Dead, 1 Missing, Canada Discloses

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 3 (AP).—The names of two Americans were on the royal Canadian air force's 386th casualty list, issued today: Sergt. Victor Howard Miller, son of Howard Miller, R. R. No. 2, Richmond, Ind., listed as missing after air operations overseas, and Aircraftman Jacob Birky, son of Mrs. J. Z. Birky of Valparaiso, Ind., dead of injuries sustained on active service.

● E. J. Davis, who led the successful citizens' fight for the retirement of Robert E. Crowe from the State's Attorneyship, has opened offices at 537 S. Dearborn St., as Chairman of the Committee of Volunteers, to help elect Senator Brooks, Congressman Stephen A. Day; Wm. Busse, as President of the County Board; Chas. Rundall, as County Judge, and their fellow-candidates for county, state and Congressional offices on the Republican ticket.

● Davis felt outraged but not surprised to learn that the Democrats had slated Crowe on their ticket for Judge of the Superior Court. He also felt outraged but not surprised to learn that 500 members of an outstanding civic agency were not qualified to vote through neglect to register, although the agency has led many campaigns for civic decency.

● The deadline for registering in the Clerks' offices is 9 p. m. Monday, Oct. 5th, and in the precincts Tuesday, Oct. 6th. The Committee believes that the best informed public opinion is unanimously agreed that a change of party in Cook County Nov. 3, through the election of Mr. Busse, Mr. Rundall, et al., will result in more honest elections, will guarantee the perpetuity of the two-party system in this county, and will save the taxpayers millions that can be used in helping Congress and the President win the war.

HERRIOT SEIZED BECAUSE OF HIS 'ATTITUDE': VICHY

Finally Admits Ex-Premier Is Confined to Home.

VICHY, France, Oct. 3 (AP).—Belatedly breaking its silence after the news had been published abroad, Vichy announced today that Edouard Herriot, former French premier and a potent figure of the republic, had been placed under residential surveillance by national police because the government did not like his "attitude."

An official statement said the reports abroad that Herriot had been "arrested" were inexact. It explained that he simply had been "invited to reside on his property in the country because of his attitude and the political agitation in which he engaged."

Urged Friendship with Allies.

The detention of Herriot, who once conducted a one man fight for paying the French war debt to the United States and who since the 1940 armistice has outspokenly favored continued friendship with Britain and America, leaves at large only two leading political figures of the last days of the Third Republic.

They are Jules Jeanneney, president of the former French senate, and Albert Lebrun, former president of the republic. Herriot, thrice premier of France, was president of the chamber of deputies when it voted to give dictatorial powers to Marshal Henri Petain, now chief of state, after the 1940 armistice.

HERRIOT PUT IN CAMP—NAZIS.

The Berlin radio in a broadcast heard in London said Herriot had been removed from his home and placed in a concentration camp at Val-les-Bains.

Herriot and Jeanneney were reported last month to have written a letter to Marshal Petain passionately protesting collaboration with the axis and any move to draw France into war against her former allies. For this they drew warm praise from American Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The letter writing episode was followed by Herriot's resignation from the French Legion of Honor in protest over the posthumous bestowal of this decoration upon two Frenchmen killed while fighting with the Germans in Russia.

CAMDEN TO SHIFT 1,500 CIVILIANS IN EVACUATION TEST

Camden, N. J., Oct. 3 (AP).—A mass evacuation of 1,500 civilians across the Delaware river from Camden to Philadelphia, Pa., called the largest drill of its kind in the nation—will be carried out Oct. 18 by the coast guard and civilian defense groups.

Willard Shriver of the Camden defense council said wardens will tap pedestrians at random and order them out of the city as "casualties." The test is expected to require five hours.

Coast guard auxiliary boats and other vessels will speed the civilians across the river from several embarkation points.

Illinois Reserve Militia to Train in Park Today

Today will be no day of rest for 1,000 members of the 2d Infantry, Illinois reserve militia, who will participate in a seven hour training course in Garfield park, Col. Robert Wigglesworth, commanding officer, said yesterday. A recruiting campaign will be started in connection with today's program.

MANILA INTERNEE GROUP SETS UP OWN COMMUNITY

Midwesterners Take Part in 'Ruling.'

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—A self-governing community, complete with police, fire and health services, has been established by nearly 3,000 American civilians interned by the Japanese at Manila, the Office of War Information said today.

One general rule is applied in the internment camp on the campus of Santo Tomas university—every one must work. As a result, OWI said, all but infants, the aged and the sick are participating in the community life.

Improve Living Conditions.

Santo Tomas—oldest college in the Orient—wasn't equipped to care for the large groups of interned men and women. Men went to work on construction and electrical installation to improve living conditions. Women opened sewing rooms. Now the campus boasts a laundry, tailor shop, shoe store, carpenter shop, plumbing, paint and metal work shops.

OWI said the internees had organized committees and offices to govern their community within Santo Tomas university.

List of Offices.

Executive, advisory, educational, religion, library, indigent relief, youth advisors, lost and found, discipline, census, public relations, vegetable garden, roll call, treasurer, sanitation and health, electrical, fire prevention, monitors, and internews [camp newspaper] officials were named.

Midwesterners in the "government" include: F. N. Berry, son-in-law of L. A. Leadbetter of Rhinelander, Wis., on the advisory committee; N. H. Duckworth, brother of Herbert Duckworth of East St. Louis, Ill., also on the advisory committee; Mrs. K. B. Day, mother of Miss Agnes Day of Ann Arbor, Mich., on the youth advisors' committee; and Don Kneedler, brother of Harold M. Kneedler of Barrington, Ill., on the fire prevention committee.

EX-CONVICT ARRESTED.

Robert Bock, an ex-convict and the brother-in-law of Danny Stanton, one-time Capone gangster, was arrested yesterday for investigation. He is 28 years old and said he lives at 7100 Ridgeland avenue.

HEAR NAZIS KILL 217 CROATS FOR 1 GERMAN DEATH

Report 12 Czechs, 4 Dutch Also Executed.

LONDON, Oct. 3 (AP).—Two hundred and seventeen Croats were reported today by Reuters to have been executed for the death of a German shot during a parade of the German minority of a Croatian village. Croatia is an axis puppet state, a part of Jugo-Slavia.

[A Zagreb, Croatia, dispatch received in Switzerland said five more Croats were put before a firing squad for "Communist activity," according to Vichy reports.]

German firing squads have put to death 12 more Czechs and 4 Netherlanders for continued defiance of Nazi rule, and hostages are being rounded up from the ranks of Belgium's native law enforcement agencies as a precaution against violence and sabatage, continental advices said.

Accused of Treason.

The Czecho-Slovak government-in-exile received word that the Czechs were executed in Prague Thursday. Ten of the victims, between 30 and 50 years old, were accused of "high treason against the reich and favoring the enemy." The others were charged with "accusing innocent people of approving of the assassination of Reinhard Heydrich."

The Czech announcement said that in September the Germans shot 79 persons in the former republic.

The German radio broadcast a DNB dispatch saying the four Dutchmen were put to death for "inciting the people of the Netherlands against the occupying power" and for Communist activity, the latter a favorite catch-all accusation by the Nazis.

The official Belgian news agency said that in Belgium the Germans have started picking hostages from among gendarmerie and the police forces.

Pick Own Hostages.

"Gendarmerie and police must themselves eliminate from their ranks those who will not submit to the occupying power," the news agency quoted a notice posted by the German military commander in Belgium.

"The hostages will pay with their lives for any act committed by members of the gendarmerie or police force against the security of the German army."

[A Hungarian newspaper was quoted in Swiss dispatches as saying 100 Belgians had been deported for sabotage to factories and telephone facilities at Brussels, Liege, and Mons where several persons were said to have been killed in incidents, Vichy dispatches said.]

DAVIS ENVISIONS POST-WAR WORLD TIEUP FOR PEACE

Holds Air Advances Force Move.

New York, Oct. 3 [Special].—The United States government's present policy foresees "the necessity of some kind of organization of collective security" after the war, in which the united nations must stand together to guard the new peace, Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, said today.

The white haired news chief told the Foreign Policy association that the Wright brothers and their successors "made the world so unsafe that at last everybody had to get together, whether they liked it or not."

Sees Scant Safety in Distance.

Mr. Davis asserted that "if aviation makes as much progress in the next few decades as it has in the past, there will be no place at all that is out of reach of the enemy.

"The degree of security that some small nations still enjoy, thanks to remoteness from stronger neighbors, will not endure for long, as the range and size of war planes increase."

Predicting that some kind of international organization would have to be evolved, Davis said that even a powerful United States could not guarantee safety by its own efforts alone.

A combination of other powers or a surprise attack could cripple the most powerful country, he said, adding that there were far more American planes at Pearl Harbor than in the force that attacked there.

Lord Halifax Speaks.

The association opened its fall season with the theme "United today for tomorrow." Other speakers included Lord Halifax, the British ambassador; Dr. Victor Hoo, former Chinese minister to Switzerland, and Luis Quintanilla, Mexican minister in Washington, D. C.

Sen. Warren R. Austin [R., Vt.] and Rep. Joseph Clark Baldwin [R., N. Y.] spoke at a luncheon session.

The British ambassador predicted that Germany must choose in the spring of 1943 to sacrifice her industrial effort in order to maintain her military effort at high peak. He added that "we can feel sure that our joint production will be rising when hers begins to sag. The race is still on, and the finish is a long way off, but Germany has lost her start."

President Roosevelt, in a letter to Gen. Frank R. McCoy, U. S. A., retired, president of the association, asserted that the nation's foreign policy can be only "what we as a people want it to be," adding that it was his conviction that the country "will not shrink from" the task of destroying totalitarianism.

WANTED OCT. 12th AND 26th
12 YOUNG WOMEN
PERMANENT CAREER IN AVIATION
PRECISION WORK • RESPONSIBLE POSITIONS

Now, for the first time, young women have the same high pay opportunities in Aviation that heretofore have been open only to men.

Airlines, Army Air Bases, the Civil Service Commission and Instrument Manufacturers want women trained to do aircraft instrument overhaul and maintenance work. One of the best paid fields of specialized aviation work, the aircraft instrument technician has ideal working conditions. Because of the delicate precision work involved, shops and laboratories are light, clean and airy. These positions pay salaries ranging from a minimum of $160.00 a month to as much as $300.00 a month.

Chicago School of Aircraft Instruments has been asked to open its aircraft instrument classes to women for training in this vital field . . . so important to the war-effort.

Chicago School of Aircraft Instruments is probably the best equipped school of its kind in the world . . . approved by the U. S. A. Civil Aeronautics Administration as a certified repair base (No. 1357) and registered by the Illinois Department of Registration and Education. Many graduates of other aircraft schools attend C. S. A. I. for advanced training on gyroscopic instruments. The U. S. Army has commissioned the school to train enlisted men as Aircraft Instrument Technicians.

Write Dept. F-10 for full information, tuition rates and length of training period, or phone Longbeach 6100. Since there are openings for only 12 girls in classes beginning Oct. 5 and 12, be sure to get complete details now.

GODLESS COMMUNISM.

It is a key theory of communism that religion is the opium of the people and that the rôle of the churches is to deliver the masses to their exploiters. The Marxist attack on property and its possessors in Russia was accompanied by the attack on religion, the churches, the clergy, and the devout. Church edifices were destroyed or desecrated and taken for party uses. The Society of the Godless was organized to promote irreligion. Clergymen were driven underground.

The Russians are a tenacious people and altho they were terrorized they clung to the forbidden faith. They risked their lives as men of faith have done before to obtain the satisfaction of their religious needs and the godless dictators found that they were dealing with an indomitable spirit of resistance. Gradually the faith of the devout forced a modification of the edicts of the irreligious and a form of worship was permitted under conditions which would be regarded as intolerable in any land in which liberty of conscience was even a restricted privilege.

In the most humiliating conditions which could be devised the churches were allowed to minister to such communicants as had the courage to face the enmity of the commissars and the activities of the secret police. Altho the godless were permitted to spread their doctrines and campaign politically for recruits, the churches were forbidden any evangelical activities and all that was allowed was service divested of rites sacred to the congregation and limited almost to a mockery of divine worship.

In spite of the concessions which the people's tenacity forced out of their heathen dictators, religion and the churches were outlaws. The Russian has not yet won the right freely to proclaim his religious belief, celebrate its rites, and receive its sacraments as a person fully entitled to the blessings of even a moderately free civilization. The church is humiliated and religion is officially held in obloquy. So far as dictatorship can obliterate the religious impulses of people, it has done so.

The dogma of the Communist cult still asserts that religion is the opiate of the people. It still holds in its tenets that the church and worship should be abolished. These are the doctrines of the Communist party in Russia and that is the parent organization which gives the party line to its followers everywhere.

The American Communist party takes its cues from the Moscow comintern, which in these days of stress has been retired to the background in Russia itself but is the international and revolutionary organization. The American Communist party is directly related not to the Russian people who are putting up this heroic struggle, but to the international intriguers which seek to establish abroad the worst features of the vindictive and destructive cult.

The true character of communism is not to be disguised by the heroism of the Russian people, despite the efforts of the American Communists to use that heroism as protective coloration. Neither are the stubborn piety of the Russian people, and the concessions to religion that that tenacity has forced from the ruling party, to be taken as any indication of a changed attitude of communism and Communists toward religion, altho the Communists and their apologists in this country have practiced that deception, too.

The Communists are pledged to the destruction of religion wherever they can accomplish it. They cannot accomplish that, or anything else, in this country of their own strength. It is only by working thru the New Deal that they have made themselves a force to be reckoned with in American politics. That is something to be remembered by voters when they find the names of New Deal rubber stamps on the ballot.

TOO MUCH TALK.

In view of the welter of orders, rulings, pronouncements, interpretations, exhortations, and threats that have been emanating from selective service headquarters lately, it is gross understatement to say that Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the director, is talking too much. The draft is something that touches every American family. The people want order and clarity in the method of conducting the draft. Sons and husbands want to know with reasonable certainty what arrangements they must make for the future. Instead of calm and explicit direction they are getting the worst sort of badgering.

For Gen. Hershey not only talks too much, but he talks badly. His latest pronunciamento is that school children may have to work "four or five hours a day at farm work or something else useful." Because of limitations on draft age the general can't send them on a children's crusade, but he wants them to know he's around, ready to pop out of a convenient closet. The general is also disgusted with the people. "The civilian population has not gone to war yet," he grumbles impatiently. The general has gone to war—no mistake about that. He'll be rattling his sword at old ladies next.

Just before this outburst Gen. Hershey came out with a proposal that men on the farms be ordered to "till the soil or fight." If a farmer leaves for a higher paid city job, the general expresses himself as "perfectly willing" to draft him. He then turns around and says, "Nobody should assume that all agriculture is essential. We're going to ask: 'What is a man raising on his farm?'" The answer to that one is simple, as the department of agriculture could tell the general. The farmer generally is raising just what the department of agriculture tells him to raise.

It was not so long ago, either, that Gen. Hershey issued an order so unfortunately phrased that it could be interpreted as implying that the draft is to be made a weapon of political compulsion. It read: "Whenever the director of selective service advises a local board that a deferred registrant or a group of deferred registrants is not supporting or is adversely affecting the war effort or the national health, safety, or interest, the local board shall terminate the deferment and consider anew the classification of such registrant or registrants."

Just what is meant by "supporting the war effort"? Was the draft director referring to strikers in war production? He didn't say. Is a person who gives umbrage to the Washington administration by criticizing the conduct of the war guilty of "adversely affecting" the war effort? If so, it will be the first time that anybody in this country has been proscribed for exercising the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech. Does the general imply that all anti-New Dealers are to be drafted? If he does it will be the first time that an opposition has been liquidated by putting it under army discipline.

It would be charitable to say that the confusion caused by the general's indiscriminate utterances is merely a reflection of his own confusion, and that the confusion of the general is part of a larger confusion engendered because the war administration doesn't know exactly what it is trying to do or where it is going. But there are too many people in Washington talking the same way. The suspicion cannot be dismissed that those who sound hardly less tyrannous than Hitler, now that they have had a taste of power, are developing a larger appetite to rule other people's lives.

THEY WERE EXPENDED.

The story of America's Dunkirk has been told to W. L. White by the four young officers of motor torpedo squadron 3, who were all of the original squadron that sailed across the Pacific last summer to come out of the Philippines and home to America. The story is appropriately titled "They Were Expendable." The fighting men who opposed Japs in the Philippines were left there without hope of reënforcement or victory. They were left there to be used up, and to use up time and the Japs. They fought, as Gen. MacArthur said, "to the end of their flickering, forlorn hope."

It is a tragic and a sorry story of how the nation was taken toward war with a total disregard for the preparations necessary if the men who were to fight the war in the Philippines were to stand a chance. When war came, says the squadron leader, Lieut. John Bulkeley, it would have taken 60 more days to put the islands in shape for decent defense. Planes and tanks were needed. At least half the Filipino army had never had on a uniform until a few weeks before fighting started. "Washington knew this."

The front line fighters on Bataan consisted only of 2,000 seasoned American troops and 1,200 Filipino scouts, equally good. There were 27,000 Filipino trainees, youngsters who would compare with newly inducted American selectees—in other words, "not worth a damn." The Filipino politicians had hamstrung MacArthur by hardly giving him a dime to train and equip an army. "It was all window dressing."

The air force consisted of 150 planes, most of them fighters, at Clark and Nichols fields and at Iba. It was practically annihilated in the first Jap raid. Six P-40's were left. Seven of the navy's 14 PBY's were clipped off at the start when they landed to gas. The disaster was attributed to defective listening devices, which picked Jap planes up 100 miles to sea, but lost them within 15 miles of the coast, causing the impression they had passed by. Instead, they came right over the airfield, perched in a cloud, and blasted the American planes around "like popcorn in a skillet" as soon as they landed.

The old 3 inch anti-aircraft guns lacked range. Their shells burst 5,000 to 10,000 feet below Jap bombing formations. There was nothing to stop the Japs from bombing without opposition, blasting the Cavite naval base to destruction, cutting infantry to ribbons by strafing, and covering dozens of landings. With Cavite gone, and without air cover, the American Asiatic fleet had to flee south. The Philippines "navy" was reduced to Bulkeley's six plywood torpedo boats. They did great destruction, but there weren't enough torpedoes and gasoline stores to get the most out of them. Saboteurs had dissolved wax in the gasoline so their motors were continually fouled.

After the bombing of Cavite there were no spare parts, not even a gasket, for the little boats.

Food was short, and there was no variety. Bulkeley's men discovered that tomcat tasted something like the dark meat of a duck. Quinine to combat malaria ran out. Sick and dizzy soldiers trying to save Bataan had none. There was just enough to give the worst malaria cases a light slug lasting only a short time. There were shortages of ammunition. A trickle of 3 inch shells for the army's tank and barge busting guns came in by submarine. The Japs kept landing tanks and "a hell of a lot of automatic weapons which were just what we need and haven't got."

"We are a democracy running a war," White says of the whole sad story. "If our mistakes are concealed from us, they can never be corrected. The Japanese knew just how inadequate our equipment was, because they destroyed or captured practically all of it."

That's what we had to fight the war in the Philippines, after the New Deal from 1933 to 1940 had spent 6½ billion dollars on national defense. In the same period 22 billion was spent for alleged recovery and relief, while of an additional 18 billion to be expended solely at the President's discretion, 636 million was spent for defense. At the last, no other choice was presented to the defenders of the Philippines than to be expended themselves.

Editorial of the Day

A FANTASTIC SITUATION.

[Washington Spokesman-Review.]

The War Labor board, considering a panel report recommending $1 a day increase in pay for miners in nonferrous metal mines, heard testimony telling of the serious shortage of mine workers caused by so many miners being attracted to war construction by the "fantastic wages" paid for such jobs.

This problem has been a matter of increasing concern in the copper, zinc, and lead mining districts since war work started and is now becoming acute because of its effect on production of vital metals.

The same cause and effect are also threatening the nation's food production next year. That is one reason why the farm bloc in congress is insisting on a parity formula that will provide for increased farm wages on the theory that by such means the heavy drain of farm labor into war work may be stopped.

These are but two aspects of the disruption of the country's economy caused by the unreasonable wage scales set in war construction work by the labor department. These rates, all out of line with going wages in this country, are demoralizing essential production and represent active encouragement by the government to regard the war effort as a bonanza rather than a desperate life and death struggle to save the nation.

These rates are promising to blast the War Labor board's wage formula to bits, for the board is now arguing that other wages must be brought up to a comparable level to keep essential production going. This is a situation created by government which is adding billions of dollars to the cost of prosecuting the war and multiplying the dangerous inflationary pressures against living costs.

Uncle Sam can't lose. He's hitched his wagon to two stars—the ones that appear on each wing tip of his warplanes.—Rockford [Ill.] Register-Republic.

STRAWS IN THE POLITICAL WINDS

BY ARTHUR CAPPER.

[United States senator from Kansas.]

What is behind the purges, or rather, since they have mostly failed, the attempted purges of certain members in both of the old parties? What motivated Republicans and Democrats alike to seek the defeat of their own members who before Pearl Harbor thought it possible and tried to keep this country out of war? It cannot be seriously contended that these people are unpatriotic or that they are unfit for public office because they were the only ones who did not foresee the turn of events, altho that is alleged as the reason for the purge. The President himself, according to his precampaign statements, felt we could and should remain at peace. "We can keep out of war," he said on one occasion, "if those who watch and decide have a sufficiently detailed understanding of international affairs to make certain that the small decisions of each day do not lead toward war and if at the same time they possess the courage to say 'no' to those who selfishly or unwisely would let us go to war."

Yet the President's supporters do not criticize him for lack of vision and foresight. Why, then, the bitter opposition to those who are called pre-Pearl Harbor isolationists?

My opinion is, this is a foreshadowing of the struggle to come between two distinct schools of thought in this country when the war is ended, and foreign and domestic policies must be decided upon. We are all, both anti-interventionists and interventionists, united in winning the war, of that there can be no doubt. But there our unity ends. For it is apparent that after the war there will be a difference as wide as the ocean between these two schools of thought.

It evidences itself by various actions and expressions on the part of our leaders—in the alarm felt lest the establishment of factories for synthetic rubber production should become permanent and we should no longer have to import rubber; in the speeches of Mr. Wallace and others who hoped our beet sugar industry would not be permitted to expand.

* * *

The followers of this cult believe we should destroy certain of our American industries in order that we may promote what has been euphoniously called the "good neighbor policy" by buying from foreign countries. They believe, furthermore, that we should not live on a higher standard than the rest of the world, and for the purpose of leveling down the differences we should lower our tariff walls and should permit all peoples to have access to raw materials on the same footing; that we should lower our immigration barriers and become a haven of refuge for the oppressed of all countries. [It is, however, a strange commentary on human nature that when the oppressed of other countries reach this shore many of them immediately begin trying to make this country a replica of the one they left.]

It seems incredible that it should be seriously proposed to put this country in a position where we would be dependent upon vital supplies from other countries in case of a war which might mean life or death to us. Yet that is what is seriously advocated by certain administration leaders.

When it was proposed to build factories for the production of synthetic rubber the first question asked was, but how shall we get rid of them after the war? Shall we not create a new American industry which will then call for a protective tariff in order to exist?

We could lose this war thru lack of sufficient rubber. It would seem the danger we are now in should create a unanimous desire to so develop our own resources that we would never again be placed in the position in which we now find ourselves.

There are some things for which we shall always be dependent upon foreign countries—coffee, tea, spices, tin, and other things. But in so far as we can, it would seem to me the part of wisdom to make ourselves self-sufficient. It might mean the difference between defeat and victory. Utopia will not come after the war, even tho the united nations win. And our existence as a nation is more important than the questionable benefits to be derived from the good neighbor policy. We must not sacrifice security on the altar of neighborliness.

Along with the international pattern above outlined is another philosophy of government widely practiced by foreign governments and which is sought to be established here—concentration of power in the hands of the central authority. While war necessarily calls for certain concentration of power, a vast amount of it was delegated to the President, in the name of efficiency, long before the war.

We were rapidly moving in the direction of a government of men and not laws. Vast bureaus were created which had the power to issue regulations having the force and effect of law. Congress stripped itself of many of its constitutional powers and passed them on to the executive because of some "emergency."

Tied in with this movement and for the purpose apparently of accelerating it were the various smear campaigns against members of congress.

Now, congress is not immune to criticism and should not be. But there has been a well organized and a well executed campaign to discredit not the individual members of congress but the institution of congress itself. Which all fits in very nicely with the plans of those who would increase the powers of the executive and make this in fact, if not in name, an autocracy.

We must sacrifice everything to win this war. I am 100 per cent for that program. But we must also preserve for ourselves those things which we are trying to give to other people. One of those things is representative government in which is bound up the two party system. We must save as much of our system of free enterprise as possible, including small business men and independent farm owners. By the time the war ends government will be so strongly entrenched in control of all business, our life will be so regimented and controled that only a strong congress, backed by a resolute and determined people, can save the American way of life.

It would be tragic indeed if we sacrificed millions of men and hundreds of billions of dollars in treasure and materials to carry freedom to all the world and then lost that freedom at home thru substituting a one party system of government, for that will end representative government, and when that goes our dream of democracy will go. It will be only a dream without substance. Regardless of the party that may be in control, congress must function as a free and untrammeled legislative body, representing the will of the people.

Two different philosophies of government will contend for supremacy in controling our policies when the war is over. The attempted purges were for the purpose of eliminating from influence those who were not in accord with the internationalistic view. The assertion that they were not qualified to be public servants because of their pre-Pearl Harbor views is a subterfuge. The attempted purges were made because of the fight to come which already casts its shadow before. That is the real issue.

ALWAYS TIRED? FIND THE ANSWER.

MANY physicians can orate fluently on the subject of chronic exhaustion. They speak from experience. And most of them realize full well that no one can do his best unless opportunities are provided for the rebuilding of vitality.

What do we mean by fatigue? The condition has been described as a reduced capacity for work. In extreme cases the victim may exclaim, "I am all in—ready to drop."

How often will a progressive ailment be responsible? It is a matter of common knowledge that illness accelerates weakness. Every one who complains of persistent lassitude should be given a thoro check to determine a possible organic cause. Occasionally the trouble will lie in a heart that is not functioning at par; in slowly advancing hardening of the arteries; in a deficient output on the part of the kidneys, or in a simple digestive failure such as the absence of hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice.

Some years ago no one could explain the collapse which occurred among artisans exposed to high temperatures. Under certain conditions, picked crews were obliged to shift every 30 minutes. Then came the discovery that loss of minerals via perspiration was the difficulty. Salts were being drained out of the circulation with the sweat. As soon as glucose, common salt, or salted gruel were administered, all was well.

We must realize that the body needs to be in perfect balance. Many a sufferer with a lazy thyroid gland will be perpetually sluggish. And what spectacular relief comes about when a small dose of thyroid extract is prescribed. But there are other glandular deficiencies and it may be advisable to study the entire gamut of the endocrines.

Strange to relate, the "all gone" state may present numerous aspects. For example, women particularly are likely to suffer from migraine, sleeplessness, or indigestion. Sometimes a poor diet will be the culprit. Vitamin deficiencies can occur especially with the one who indulges in hurried, out of balance meals. The B fraction may be quite too low.

Some industrialists who have analyzed the phenomenon feel that monotony—the performance of the same operation over and over again—may be a factor. But there are two sides to the question. Many factory hands contend that procedures which require little thought can be executed for long periods without the slightest consciousness of tire. Apparently the result depends upon the temperament of the individual. The one who possesses a nervous, alert personality will usually demand frequent change in order to maintain a sustained interest in the task at hand.

We must not forget that the human body should have a large element of reserve. Men and women will continue to labor at a furious pace, going "on their nerve," which means that they are emptying the last storehouses of internal energy. Illustrations of extraordinary effort are legion. I once witnessed a group of workmen struggling heroically in an attempt to release a comrade caught in a cave-in. All were weary after a hard day's grind, but they met the emergency with reborn vigor. This may be likened to the valor of our troops under stress.

EDUCATIONAL BOONDOGGLING.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—I have a very vivid acquaintance with the changes in the Chicago public school system under the present management, for I went thru them. At the very first teachers' meeting, after a new school board president took office, we were told there would be changes and we all would have to get in line, or else—which meant we would have to ask for a transfer.

The first order was that every room must have a project, and a teacher was imported from another school who was expected to be the last word in modern education. We of the horse and buggy era were open minded, for there was much propaganda that in these modern times there must be new methods of education. For the project in one second grade room, about a dray load of orange boxes were installed. These were made into booths by the little folks themselves. Such a hammering and pounding was never heard in a school before. Some painting had to be done, too. A little boy running thru the hall with a pail of paint fell down and painted a picture on the floor. One booth was designed for millinery, another for a grocery store, another a butcher shop, and I remember one little fellow drew a hat shop, but wanted to be a policeman.

Heretofore, primary charts were used as a basis for the first reader. Now all these charts were eliminated, as also were the readers, and the teacher had to make charts which involved interesting experiences in the everyday life of the child. Can you imagine the work involved, and also the materials used at the expense of the taxpayer? So, as I said, every room had a project. Cotton fields were grown over night. Projects ranged from igloos of the far north to Indian villages, with sidelines in silk growing and girls dressed in native costumes to tell the story to visiting guests.

Programs and courses of study were cast aside. Nearly every day was open house, and disorder began to prevail, for we were told not to control freedom of action. What of the academic work meanwhile? Were we of the old school all wrong when we thought knowledge could be obtained by concentration on book learning? It hardly seemed so, for after the abandonment of readers and charts, children reaching third grade could not even read in the first readers.

MASCULINITY AT THE MICROPHONE.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—I am one of the many, I hope, who did not go away on vacation, but have the satisfaction of looking at a couple of extra war bonds. I have rested, read, and listened with increasing disgust to the radio advertising plugs, i.e., "Use Swish, the super gentle blah blah soap suds — the soap which makes your husband say, 'Why, darling,' " etc., etc. If only a Wallace Beery voice would say, "Why the heck don't you buy so and so?" MRS. P.

HORSING AROUND.

Geneva, Ill., Sept. 27.—Chas. L. Wallace of Joliet is correct in stating [Sept. 25] that the driver should sit on the right side to have his whip hand free, but seems to be confused as to the "nigh" and "off" horses; at least he gives them in reverse positions.

A driver in a carriage always sat at the right side to have his whip hand free. This was carried over to the horseless carriage, even tho the driver had neither whip nor whip socket on the dash. But a teamster driving a team pulling on a chain, as distinguished from a tongue, invariably walks to the left. A mounted driver, as in the horse artillery, always rides the left horse and a rider mounts from the left.

Thus the left hand animal is the "nigh" or near one [see Webster], and it follows the other or farther one is the off ox or horse, as the case may be. In matching teams it is common practice to put the larger or taller animal on the off side.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—When Chas. L. Wallace gets his team hitched up he might name the nigh horse Vice and the off horse Versa, but he'd better hang onto the lines if he hollers gee and haw at 'em. FRANK BUTZOW.

A LITH, NOT A POLE.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Lloyd Wendt in his article on the Polish underground in the Graphic section refers to Tadeusz Kosciuszko as the "Polish hero of the American revolution." Tadas Kasciuska not only was a Lithuanian by birth, race, and spirit, but also by his own proclamation. His birth records state: "Gardinas district, son of Lithuanian nobleman." Kasciuska was one of the seven Lithuanian cadets sent to the Lunneville military academy in France and resided in Salle des Lithuaniens. In modern times this Lunneville castle has been transformed into a historical museum, but in the wall still remains a plaque with the names of the Lith cadets, including Kasciuska.

Since Kasciuska began in America to fight for freedom, instead of in Lithuania or Poland, he perhaps should be considered an American as a soldier. A. D. YUKNIS.

BUROCRATS AND FOOD.

Naples, Ill., Sept. 28.—I note our secretary of agriculture states it will soon be necessary to ration meat. I have on hand on my farm 3,600 to 4,000 bushels of wheat, which is under bond to the department of agriculture, and which I cannot sell or feed because I grew more wheat on my own farm than I was instructed to do by our planners and burocrats in the agricultural department.

This wheat is being eaten up by weevils and will shortly be a total loss, not only to me, but to the world food supply, even tho I have repeatedly treated this wheat for weevil infestation. This amount of wheat would furnish a large number of hogs for market, and thus help relieve the meat shortage. But it seems our great planners are willing that this wheat be destroyed and lost as feed to produce beef or pork, while they calmly announce there is to be a meat shortage.

This is precisely the kind of business that has been going on in our government for several years, and in my opinion it will bring a food shortage before it is over. H. G. PINE.

THEORY CONCERNING COLDS.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—I think that the onslaught of autumn colds is caused to a great extent by the spreading of dust that has accumulated in radiators during the summer. If radiators and heat dispensers of all types are thoroly cleaned and sprayed before heat is turned on for the winter, I'm sure it would do a lot to prevent the spread of one of our worst enemies, the common cold. ELLA M. BRUNS.

"IT'S A PEOPLE'S WAR."

Chicago, Sept. 28.—If there's going to be a draft for war industry, instead of drafting mothers and forcing them to leave their children in some one else's care, why not put all the maids, cooks, nursemaids, and other domestic help in the defense factories, and let the society women scrub their own floors and care for their own children? WAR BONDS.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am buying war bonds and have named my three small grandchildren as beneficiaries. Will you tell me what would occur in the event of my death while the children are still minors? The children's parents are living. J. M.

The regulations provide as follows: "Sec. 315.26. Payment to minors. . . . If the treasury department, division of loans and currency, has not received proper notice that a guardian or similar representative of the estate of a minor has been appointed or is otherwise duly qualified, payment will be made direct to such minor, provided he is, at the time payment is requested, of sufficient competency and understanding to sign his name to the request and to comprehend the nature of such act. In general the fact that the request for payment has been signed by a minor and duly certified in accordance with Subpart H hereof will be accepted as sufficient proof of such competency and understanding.

"Sec. 315.27. Payment to parents of minors. . . . If the treasury department has not been properly notified that a guardian or similar legal representative of the estate of a minor owner of a savings bond has been appointed or is otherwise legally qualified, and if such minor owner is not of sufficient competency and understanding to execute the request for payment, payment will be made to either parent of the minor with whom he resides, or if the minor does not reside with either parent, then to the person who furnishes his chief support. The parent or such other person should sign the request for payment in his own name, on behalf of the minor, in the form 'Mrs. Mary Jones, on behalf of John C. Jones,' and should sign a certificate, in substantially the following form, which may be typed on the back of the bond:

'I certify that I am the ——— [relationship] of John C. Jones and the person with whom he resides. He is —— years of age and is not of sufficient competency and understanding to sign this request.'

"If a person other than a parent signs the request on behalf of the minor he should also certify that the minor does not reside with either parent and that he furnishes his chief support. The treasury department may in any particular case require further proof that the minor is not of sufficient competency and understanding to execute the request for payment and of the right of the person executing the request to act on behalf of the minor." TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DIVORCE DECREE.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My daughter was supposed to pay a lawyer so much for a divorce which she did. Now the lawyer tells her she will have to pay more.

1. She married again without getting her divorce papers.

2. Her lawyer says she is not legally married.

3. The marriage has not turned out so good and she would like to quit, being in poor health and having no money to hire another lawyer.

4. She never signed divorce papers but [5] the judge granted her divorce.

6. Is it legal or not, and is the second marriage legal? J. M.

1. If the decree was signed by the judge, then the mere fact that your daughter does not have a copy is immaterial.

2. If she doubts this, she can check up at the office of the clerk of the court.

3. If she was not divorced from her first husband, then the new marriage was invalid.

4. Her signature would not be necessary.

5. If you mean that he signed a decree this would be enough.

6. Depends on facts that you have not stated. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONTRACT BY MINOR.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am 16½ years of age and I have decided to begin a beauty culture school. I have signed the contract and it was said that the lady at the head of the school would also sign it.

1. Does my father have to sign also?

2. He says yes, because I am under age and it would not be legal.

3. Would it be legal without my father's signature? D. H.

1. This is for the other party to say. If the other party is satisfied without your father's signature, that is enough.

2. There is no such rule of law, if the other party is satisfied.

3. It isn't legal, in the sense that your minority entitles you to repudiate the contract. It is legal in the sense that you can enforce the contract.

12TH COMMUNITY FUND NEEDS ARE BOOSTED BY WAR

Goal Set at $3,750,000; $551,346 Pledged.

War conditions have increased the demands on the Community Fund despite increased employment and higher wages, Charles Y. Freeman, chairman of the Commonwealth Edison company and general chairman of Chicago's 12th annual and last Community Fund drive for the duration of the war, said yesterday.

The drive was opened with a dinner at the Palmer House Friday night, attended by more than 2,000 campaign leaders, representing 50,000 volunteer workers. Pledges of $551,346 from corporations and individuals were announced as a starter toward the goal of $3,750,000. The Community Fund will join with other local charities and approved wartime agencies except the American Red Cross in a united drive for funds next year to be known as the War Chest.

Report Each Thursday.

A report meeting on the progress of the campaign will be held at 12:30 p. m. on Thursday, Oct. 15, in the Palmer House and other report meetings will be held each Thursday thereafter.

"More than four-fifths of the work done by the 187 private agencies aided by the Community Fund is service," Freeman said, "and this type of help is needed this year more than ever before."

More than 10,000 dependent children receive the aid of the Community Fund annually, Freeman said, and the Fund helps to maintain more than 50 settlements, social centers, and youth organizations.

"This work stands as a great bulwark against juvenile delinquency," Freeman said. "This becomes an increasingly important problem in wartime. In England juvenile delinquency has increased 40 per cent since the start of the war."

Food and Other Costs Up.

Many more children will be cared for in day nurseries this year because their mothers, as well as their fathers, are working in war industries. Food costs and other costs involved in maintaining nurseries, children's homes, hospitals, clinics, and homes for the aged have risen, Freeman pointed out.

Social welfare agencies constitute one of the lowest paid fields of work, and increases in salaries must be made, Freeman said. Even a slight increase will total a substantial sum.

Large corporations, in particular, should realize their obligations to the Community Fund this year, Freeman said.

TRIBUNE PRINTED IN MECHANICAL WONDERLANDS!

Composing Room Probably World's Largest.

But when they return, their jobs will be waiting for them—as in World War I. And when they get back, there is no doubt that they will return to THE TRIBUNE, says Roy Keeler, mechanical superintendent. "No one ever quits this department," he adds.

And there is an excellent reason why. Employés of THE TRIBUNE composing room are union men who work under a contract negotiated by this newspaper and the union, thru the Chicago Publishers' association. But these men also are members of THE TRIBUNE family and receive benefits in excess of those provided by their contracts.

The contract covers paid vacations, but THE TRIBUNE gave vacations many years before the union began demanding them.

These men have shared in the Christmas bonus under which they are paid from 3 to 10 per cent of their year's earnings, depending upon the length of service. Some of these checks have run into hundreds of dollars.

The men are covered by THE TRIBUNE'S sick benefit plan, which pays their salaries during illnesses and disability. They have access to the Medill Building and Loan association, which has enabled many employés to build or buy their own homes. All employés are eligible to membership in the Dearborn Mutual Benefit association, which pays death benefits and serves as a credit union, making small loans.

All are eligible also to coverage by the group insurance plan operated by THE TRIBUNE, the size of policies being determined by the amount of compensation. Premiums are nominal—a fraction of regular rates. In addition, THE TRIBUNE provides periodic dental examinations. A registered nurse visits those who are ill and makes certain the care they are receiving is of the best.

Finally, there is the pension retirement plan for older employés. At present there are approximately 30 pensioners on the composing room's rolls; men whose periods of service range from 30 to 45 years. The service record of those still on the job is equally impressive. A recent survey —when 316 were on the composing room pay roll—produced this showing:

Ten, or 3.2 per cent, had been there more than 35 years; 30, or 9.5 per cent had served 25 to 35 years; 32, about 10 per cent, 20 to 25 years, and 141, or 45 per cent, from 10 to 20 years. This is a total of 213 or 67.7 per cent with 10 years or more of service in the composing room.

This then is the technical staff headed by Roy Keeler, himself a veteran of 33 years' employment here and whose father, the late Conrad Keeler, put in 45 years at THE TRIBUNE before being pensioned at the age of 70 in 1929. Two of Keeler's predecessors, Thomas Sullivan and Leo Loewenberg, were foremen of the composing room 39 and 33 years respectively, a total of 72 years.

Thomas Sullivan was employed by THE TRIBUNE 67 years. A bronze plaque in the third floor corridor of Tribune tower commemorates this service record. If Thomas Sullivan could stand beside Roy Keeler's desk today and watch the eternal drama of a great newspaper in the making, he would recognize the same smooth, hasteless speed which put THE TRIBUNE head and shoulders above other Chicago newspapers in his day.

But he would admit, too, that mechanical equipment has attained a perfection unknown in his day. Suppose we take chairs beside Keeler's desk, overlooking the long alley of linotypes, the twin makeup banks with the ponderous steam tables of the stereotypers at their far end, and the spike studded desk of the copy cutter—the composing room's nerve center.

It is 2:30 p. m. Fluorescent lights are flashing on thruout the vast room which until now has been shadowy and silent except for the faraway clicking of six linotype machines whose operators are setting early classified advertising copy. Now 20 fresh operators take places at the keyboards of the typesetting machines and the clatter grows in volume.

Baskets Pour Out "Copy."

From the copy baskets, which operate like tiny elevators between the composing room and the news room one floor above, a stream of copy is moving to the copy cutter's desk. The five great horseshoe desks in the editorial room have been manned and the news is coming down.

Telegraph, cable and sports copy, news of the world; financial and Chicago news; it has been gathered, written, edited, and headlined. And now it's coming down in a flow that will slacken but will not stop until the sun is high tomorrow morning.

At 3:30 and again at 4:30 p. m. fresh contingents of linotype operators move in and take their quotas of copy from the jammed spikes on the copy cutter's desk. He has cut the typewritten manuscript into convenient lengths called "takes," and with a blue pencil has labeled and numbered each take according to a system all his own.

It looks like a hopeless jumble to the layman. But every news story with its headline is in the proper column of the designated page in an amazingly short time. It has to be. The deadline now is only a little more than an hour away.

Advertisments Go In First.

Seventy linotypers now are at their machines. Twenty makeup men have taken their places at the long banks upon which rest the chases—rectangular steel frames the size of a TRIBUNE page, into which the type now in production will be placed. But first come the advertisments.

From the ad alleys, about half a block to the west of the makeup banks, the ads are coming over to be slid into the chases, according to directions penciled upon small facsimiles of TRIBUNE pages. These charts are called "dummies" and are used also by the makeup editor in the news room to designate positions, according to their importance, of the night's stories.

It is interesting to note that THE TRIBUNE is the only large newspaper in the country whose advertisments are allotted position in the paper by the superintendent of the composing room. THE TRIBUNE regards the practice as excellent, since it takes decisions on position out of the hands of advertising men and makes for impartiality.

Copy Readers Aid Printers.

With the ads placed in the chases, the news room "dummies" come streaming down, followed at 5:15 p. m. by the makeup editor. At 5:30 p. m. the copy readers from the cable, telegraph, night city, financial, sports, and feature desks—from 20 to 25 of them—pour into the composing room and range themselves along the banks opposite the makeup men.

This is another practice developed by THE TRIBUNE. Its purpose is to speed makeup and reduce the interval between the editorial room deadline and the composing room deadline. Here is how it works: Often a story in type is too long to fit the space into which it has been "dummied" in the page. This can occur one or more times in every news page of the paper.

With the copy desk force at hand the stories can be trimmed quickly and the pages sent on to the stereotypers. Further, the copy reader, who has edited a given story is in much better position to trim it intelligently and avoid destroying its continuity than is a makeup editor who never has seen the item.

From 5:30 until 6 p. m. when the last page to be locked up—usually page one—is rolled away, the composing room presents an amazing spectacle to the outsider. Above the general din is the high clatter of 70 linotype machines and the thump of the proof presses. Wheels rumble against the flooring as the pages on their massive turtles are trundled down the long aisle.

Sharp blows crash thru the other sounds; these are mallets striking wooden blocks whose smooth bottoms force down to a uniform height all the type lines and letters in a page. And finally there are the voices: "Come and get it; take it away"—when a page has been locked up. Calls to the copy readers when a story needs a trim: "Cable copy reader," "local copy reader," "telegraph!"—or as the Glasgow Scotsman shouts it in a penetrating voice: "Telly-grawph!"

The visitor, viewing it for the first time, beholds, what appears to him, a scene of utter confusion performed in a din and hullabaloo that seemingly make thought impossible, and against a time limit that must have been fixed either by a tyrant or a madman.

And as he watches, shaking his head, there suddenly is a last and louder burst of sound: Page one rumbles off down the aisle—and it's all over, usually with minutes to spare. It has been a complicated, exacting, and an enormous accomplishment. But it happens several times every 24 hours, 365 days of the year.

And there have been times in Tribune history when the feat of getting to press with important news in the face of a maze of difficulties has made American newspaper history.

Beat World on Dewey Victory.

The news of Dewey's victory at Manila bay—with which THE TRIBUNE scooped the world—came in at 3 a. m. May 1, 1898, when most of the night run was off the presses. Circulation men galloped their horses to newsstands and distribution centers and pulled back the papers they had just delivered. Meanwhile, doors to the composing room were locked. The men stayed on the job until the historic story was set and the papers were flowing from the pressroom.

Between 8 and 9 a. m. of July 24, 1915, the steamer Eastland turned over in the Chicago river with a loss of more than 800 lives. Tribune compositors flocked to the office and worked 24 hours until the story and the names of the victims were all in type.

Only last Dec. 7 another voluntary convergence upon the office of Tribune compositors followed the radio announcement of the bombing of Pearl Harbor. But the typographical feat of which THE TRIBUNE is proudest occurred May 20, 1887, when the great revision of the New Testament, translated from the Greek, was made public.

Set by Hand in 12 Hours.

Under Thomas Sullivan's direction, 97 printers—and this was in the day of handset type—worked 12 hours without a break to get it ready. On Sunday morning, May 21, the Testament, filling a 20 page section, was presented to Tribune readers. And this was in addition to the regular news section. It was another world scoop.

One man in The Tribune composing room has watched a half century of accomplishments such as this and has marked the revolutionary improvements and achievements that have come about, many of them thru the genius of Tribune men. He is George E. Nells, dean of the proofroom and the oldest in service of all the composing room's 300 technicians.

He was alone in the proofroom in the early hours of Feb. 16, 1898, when the news of the blowing up of the U. S. S. Maine in Havana harbor was received. Less than three months later he was the only man on duty in the proofroom when news of Dewey's victory came in. Those were the days of real news scoops, Nells comments.

Mechanical Revolution Is Told.

Nells recalls the changeover from hand typesetting to linotype machines in 1895 and the bitter fight the printers and their union launched to avert it. Unemployment, displacement of men by the machines, and many other evils were foreseen.

Joseph Medill had been a printer in his youth and had kept the machines out in sympathy for the men. During one of Mr. Medill's absences, however, Robert W. Patterson, later editor of THE TRIBUNE, had linotypes installed.

But old Thomas Sullivan acted in the crisis with his customary wisdom and tact. The operators of the first machines were chosen from among Tribune veterans. No new men were brought in, Nells recalled.

"The muttering stopped," he continued. "The machines were in to stay. And it worked out just the opposite of expectation. The machines made it possible to print the largest papers in history. Circulation and advertising went up. THE TRIBUNE soon was employing more compositors than ever before."

[Tomorrow the world's greatest pressroom will be visited and described.]

ATTORNEY FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL; WOMAN IS HELD

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 3 (AP).—A middle aged guest of a downtown Detroit hotel, identified by police as Clyde A. McCoy of Fort Wayne, Ind., an attorney, was found dead today on the floor of his 12th story room. Detectives detained an attractive young woman, found in another hotel after a telephone call, for questioning.

Deputy Coroner Foster Knobloch said that aside from scratches on the neck, there was no sign that McCoy had been in a fight. The room was littered with lipstick stained cigaret butts, Knobloch reported, while on a table were a partly filled liquor bottle and several glasses. An autopsy was ordered.

Detective Lieut. Charles Buckholdt said that while he was in the room, after a hotel maid had discovered the body, the telephone rang and a woman's voice asked: "Aren't you dead yet? You drank enough stuff last night to kill you."

Pretending to be McCoy, Buckholdt made an appointment and met the woman in another hotel, taking her to police headquarters.

DRINKING WATER CAN BE DANGEROUS

If drinking water comes from a source where factory refuse and sewage is being dumped, and especially where water movement is restricted, it is difficult to avoid contamination. 11 KILLED AS GAS TRUCK HITS BUS AND BLOWS UP

15 Injured; Passengers Trapped in Flames.

Lumberton, N. C., Oct. 3 [Special].—Eleven persons burned to death and 15 others suffered burns and other injuries today when a loaded gasoline tank truck exploded after plowing into a bus 11 miles north of here.

State highway police took the bodies to St. Paul, a village 3 miles north of the scene of the accident, where the village hall was converted into a temporary morgue.

The bodies were burned beyond recognition, Herman Arvey of the state police said. He said a mother and child were among the victims.

Bus Driver Killed.

Among those killed was Lawrence R. Barbee of Greensboro, N. C., driver of the bus. The driver of the tank truck, Stinson Branch of Lumberton, was burned severely but is expected to recover.

The accident was precipitated by a collision a moment earlier between the truck and a mule drawn wagon, according to Henry Edmond Jones of Wilmington, who saw the crash.

He said the truck, traveling north, overtook the wagon, rammed it, and veered across the road and struck the bus. The explosion followed immediately.

R. J. McNeill, a Negro, driver of the wagon, was injured only slightly. The mule was killed.

Flames Envelop Bus.

Jones said the fire enveloped the bus in a few minutes. He said he helped several persons out a rear door, and others climbed out windows. Those who burned to death were trapped in the wreckage.

The truck was en route to Fort Bragg, N. C., with its cargo of gasoline. The bus was traveling toward Lumberton.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

T. V. writes: "I am a translator for the FBI. In an ordinary position I would be 1-A, but where do I stand in the draft?"

ANSWER: 1-A.

H. J. M. writes: "My optometrist's records show my vision without glasses to be 20/200 in each eye. The navy rejected me because of poor eyesight, listing my vision as 11/20. Could you compare the two systems?"

ANSWER: With 20/200 vision, you would be able to distinguish at 20 feet what a person with "normal" vision could distinguish at 200 feet. Here is a table showing the comparative values of the two systems:

NAVY.		ARMY OR CIVILIAN.
14/20	is approximately equal to	20/ 30
10/20		20/ 40
6/20		20/ 70
4/20		20/100
2/20		20/200

You probably mean that your vision was correctible to 11/20 by navy standards.

Corp. J. F. K. Jr. writes: "There is very little reading material out here. The boys and I would appreciate any books, magazines, and papers your readers could send us. Most of the fellows here are Chicagoans and have missed reading your papers."

ANSWER: Readers may send anything they have to Special Service Officer, Company L, 132d Infantry, A. P. O. 502 C/o Postmaster, A. S. N. 20610325, San Francisco, Cal.

J. G. writes: "I have a common law wife. What would she have to do to prove herself eligible for social security benefits if anything happens to me while in service?"

ANSWER: In some instances a common law wife would receive benefits. It would depend on whether the state where the relationship began recognizes common law marriages; in what states the couple may have lived, and in what state they lived at the time of the husband's death. The decision on such claims are usually predicated on state laws and not upon any general rule.

B. B. M. writes: "In an answer in your column the other day, you said men entitled to the medals and ribbons shown in The Tribune could apply. Do those who are entitled to citations get both a ribbon and a medal?"

ANSWER: Yes. The medals are too cumbersome to be worn at all times, and the ribbons are authorized to be worn in their stead. The medals are worn only on dress uniforms on certain occasions prescribed by "regulations."

M. R. writes: "Will the boys of this war be able to carry their war insurance for life, like the war risk insurance of World War I., or is it good for the duration only?"

ANSWER: National Service life insurance on the 5 year level premium term plan may be exchanged at any time, after it has been in force for 1 year and within the 5 year term period, for life insurance in the same or less amount, in multiples of $500 but not less than $1,000 on the ordinary life, 20 payment life, or 30 payment life plan.

Those who believe in omens are looking forward to Feb. 4, date of the next total eclipse visible on earth. The reason for the interest is that shortly after the sun rises on Japan, the land of the Rising Sun, it will go into eclipse with a totality period of about 2 minutes.

To superstitious ones, and the Japanese are superstitious, the eclipse of the symbol of Japanese empire will be significant, particularly since the emperor is supposed to be a descendant of Ama-terasu, or "Heaven Shiner."

An eclipse of the sun; authorities say, causes certain oriental peoples a great deal of worry. Dr. Ssu-Yu Teng, Chinese research associate in oriental language and literature, says that people of his race, and of the Japanese race, are superstitious concerning the sun, and that an eclipse calls for kneeling on the floor and other demonstrations of awe. Dr. Teng was not able to say whether the eclipse might lead to hara-kiri in Japan.

The eclipse first will be visible at sunrise in Russia, Dr. Struve said, and will be total in Japan shortly after sunrise. Much of the path of totality will be across the waters of the Pacific, but sections of the Aleutian Islands will see the total phase.

AL CAPONE GANG BROKEN, GAMING ENDS: COURTNEY

Handbooks Give Up Fight, Prosecutor Asserts.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney reported yesterday that syndicate gambling is ended in Chicago, and that the Capone-Nitti-Guzik gang, which conducted it, has been driven out of business.

Courtney said a survey on Friday showed that there is not a racing handbook operating within the city, and that places where bets may be made over the counter or by telephone are few.

The gang finally has been driven out during the last year, according to Courtney and his first assistant, Wilbert F. Crowley, by three assistant state's attorneys and six policemen.

Drive Opened Year Ago.

The successful drive was opened last October, after THE TRIBUNE had supplied the prosecutors and the grand jury with the secret records of the syndicate. These records showed gross profits of $322,966 for the month of July, 1941, in territory outside Chicago.

With the secret records for reference, the prosecutors knew the questions to ask every person arrested in a gambling raid. The state's attorney's men questioned more than 2,000 persons in the grand jury room, learning the connections of every figure in the gambling world.

The gang, which is acknowledged to have made millions from gambling and the domination of labor unions in the last 20 years, was then speedily smashed. It was ruled for years by Scarface Al Capone. For the last 10 years, Frank Nitti has been the czar, with Jack Guzik doing the heavy work for him during the last year and a half that illness has forced Nitti into retirement.

Others Forced to Quit.

Others forced out of business by Courtney's drive are:

Murray Humphries, who represented the gang in many legitimate enterprises which he made illegitimate.

Danny Stanton, one-time political power in south side wards where he operated saloons and handbooks.

Willie Heeney, a gunman of the country towns.

The assistant state's attorneys who worked with Courtney and Crowley in smashing the gang are Sam Freedman, Abbey Blattberg and Casimir Cwikilinski.

Cite Judge Caplan's Service.

One grand jury which investigated gambling asked that Judge Oscar Caplan of the Municipal bench be kept at the Racket court, to which all persons accused of gambling are taken. Judge Caplan is still assigned there.

When Judge William J. Campbell of the United States District court was United States attorney, he conducted an investigation of gambling in 1939. He learned that the General News bureau, which supplied racing service to the handbooks, had 900 handbook clients in Chicago.

Since some of these places relayed their service to branches, it was estimated that there were at least 1,000 gambling houses operating within the city. Courtney coöperated with Campbell in cleaning up gambling at that time. The state's attorney said yesterday, however, that he received no coöperation from any city agency.

Courtney said that the Capone-Nitti-Guzik syndicate took one million dollars a year in profit from its loop handbooks and another million a year from establishments in the outlying sections of the city. The syndicate, Courtney said, worked with William Skidmore, the political fixer and graft collector, who is now in federal prison.

The prosecutor said that another form of gambling—the policy racket which formerly took 10 million dollars a year from Chicago's Negroes—also has been crushed.

ASKS FOR PROBE OF PALATINE OLD PEOPLE'S HOME

Testimony that a woman patient had been chained to her bed in an old people's home at Palatine brought a recommendation from Myron Lewis, assistant state's attorney, yesterday for an investigation of the home by the state board of health and state department of registration and education.

The testimony was by Miss Bee Dozier, manager of the home, at an inquest into the death of Miss Kaya Moller, 76 years old, a maid at the home who died there Wednesday. Miss Dozier testified that another woman had been chained because she was ill and wished to leave.

Altho the cause of Miss Moller's death was given on the death certificate as heart trouble, an inquest was ordered at 4338 Fullerton avenue because of burns on her body. Lewis said he was informed they had been caused by fumes of gasoline, used to renovate the mattress on which she slept. The jury reported that it was unable to determine whether Miss Moller died from natural causes.

FIREMAN FOUND HANGED.

Jacksonville, Ill., Oct. 3 (AP).—The body of Morris B. Denny, 54 year old, was found today hanging from a fence near here and Coroner C. S. Young said Denny, a fireman at the Illinois School for the Blind, apparently had committed suicide.

AGE PAYMENTS RISE AS STATE INCOME DROPS

Sales Tax Falls First Time in 2½ Years.

In the face of declining state revenue from sales and motor fuel taxes, old age assistance payments in Illinois increased again during September, Auditor Arthur C. Lueder announced yesterday.

The old age payments have increased steadily since the system was inaugurated in March, 1936, Lueder said. George B. McKibbin, state finance director, recently reported that during the 1941-'42 fiscal year the old age payments were boosted $3,341,374.

Lueder's report yesterday showed that cash disbursements for state expenses in September were $25,055,965.67, requiring the writing of 262,474 warrants. Regular operating expenses of the state government were $19,762,928.28, Lueder said.

McKibbin in his report for September announced that the sales tax showed a decline for the first time in two and a half years. Collections for September, 1942, were $6,552,422, compared with $6,987,931 collected in September, 1941.

In addition, the decline of motor fuel taxes collected continued during the month. Net collections for September, 1942, were $3,279,862, compared with $4,203,793 for September, 1941, a reduction of 22 per cent. Refunds from gross motor fuel collections have been growing during the last year, while collections have been decreasing. Refunds are given to those who use gasoline and oils for nonhighway purposes, and during September amounted to $440,025.39, Auditor Lueder said.

Declines in receipts were also noted by Director McKibbin in oil inspection fees—from $47,678 a year ago to $38,671 this year, and in oil production taxes, from $496,781 to $334,858, a decline of 32.6 per cent.

Increases for the month were registered in liquor, cigaret and public utility gross receipts taxes. Liquor taxes were up 4.7 per cent over a year ago, the cigaret tax up 5.4 per cent, and the public utility tax up 4 per cent.

A slide in revenue from motor fuel tax collections, already noticeable, is expected to steepen as travel by personal automobile is cut down because of wartime restrictions. Gross collections during the nine months of this calendar year stand at about 32 million dollars, compared with more than 35 million dollars collected in the same period of 1941.

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Federal agents testified today that bund local unit leaders had told them of reading to their followers the bund command regarding refusal to undergo military service.

Twenty-five former bund leaders are being tried on charges of conspiracy to counsel bund members to refuse to enter military service.

Daniel C. Macken Jr., Federal Bureau of Investigation special agent, testified that John C. Fitting, Hudson county, N. J., unit leader, had typed a statement admitting he read the command to his followers.

Harry O'Neill, FBI agent, testified that Hugo Weiss, a New York unit leader, told him that he had read the command to his unit.

John J. McLaughlin, another FBI witness, testified that he took a statement from Ferdinand Callsen, South Bend, Ind., unit leader. Callsen said he did not remember reading the command but that "it was received and discussed, and that members knew about it," McLaughlin said.

ARMY PREPARED FOR ACTION IN '43, SAYS M'NARNEY

With the United States Army on California Desert Maneuvers, Oct. 3. (AP).—American soldiers now in training on the California desert and other maneuver areas will be ready for offensive action in 1943, Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, said today.

Gen. McNarney, in the desert to observe the war games being conducted by Maj. Gen. Alvin C. Gillem, said that 10 months after Pearl Harbor, three times as many soldiers are overseas as were sent across during the first 10 months of the last World war.

Tactical units now overseas, he added, are completely equipped and efficiently trained and "in general have had 12 months of rigorous training." He said the war department believed 12 months of strenuous training is necessary before troops are considered ready for combat.

2,000 Attend Event

An old fashioned barbecue with a charcoal pit, a side of beef, and barrels of beer welcomed Rep. Charles S. Dewey of the 9th district home yesterday from Washington, D. C.

The barbecue—a time honored rural custom—was transplanted to the yard of the old mansion at 2800 Sheridan road within the shadows of tall apartment buildings. A tent and a brass band made the affair complete.

Rep. Dewey, up for reëlection on Nov. 3, said it was a pleasure to come from the hubbub of wartime Washington to the comparative quiet of a political barbecue.

The rally was sponsored by the men and women of the Volunteer Friends of Dewey organization. Among those present were Judge Oscar Nelson of the Superior court, State Rep. Edward P. Saltiel of the 31st senatorial district, State Rep. George F. Williston, also of the 31st, and Emerson C. Whitney, Republican ward committeeman of the 48th ward and candidate for state senator from the 31st senatorial district.

DRIVE TO REVOKE CITIZENSHIP OF BUNDISTS OPENS

Group Called Nucleus of Fifth Column.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—The justice department today branded the German-American bund the "official spearhead of the Nazi fifth column in America" and began a nationwide drive to revoke the citizenship of all naturalized persons who were active in the bund, class them as enemy aliens, and intern them.

Attorney General Francis Biddle said that "we are moving at once to clean out this source of danger to our national security."

Biddle said that, altho the bund announced its "voluntary" dissolution after Pearl Harbor, "its spirit and functions continue up to the present day behind the innocent mask of cultural societies, singing and athletic clubs."

"Arm of Nazi Diplomacy."

Biddle asserted that in the last decade the "bund has been an arm of aggressive Nazi world diplomacy—an instrument of the German 'Ausland organization' with headquarters at Stuttgart. Its avowed policy has been to resist integration of Germans into the American system; to retain the complete loyalty of its members to Germany; and to establish in the United States a branch of the German reich.

"The aims and purposes of the bund are wholly inconsistent with American citizenship. Loyalty to one excludes loyalty to the other. It therefore follows that those Germans who became naturalized American citizens and at the same time turned actively to the affairs of the bund are guilty of fraud."

He said the courts would be asked to denaturalize "these disloyal bundists" on the basis of investigations made by the Federal Bureau of Investigation into activities of "hundreds" of former members.

Biddle said that about 500 denaturalization cases had been completed, were pending in courts, or were under consideration by federal attorneys.

The justice department said the bund's history stems back to a German patriotic society, "Teutonia," formed in Detroit in 1924 by Fritz Gissibl, a German alien "who was with Hitler in the Munich beer hall 'putsch.'"

In 1933 this and other groups were brought together by Gissibl and Heinz Spanknoebel into the "Friends of the New Germany." The department said that the name was changed to the German-American bund in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1936.

10,000 TO SELL CHILD BENEFIT TAGS TOMORROW

More than 10,000 volunteer workers will take part in the 35th annual Chicago Children's Benefit league tag day tomorrow. The league, comprised of 50 Chicago social agencies which care for children, has set $85,000 as its goal. Last year $59,000 was raised thru the tag day.

More than 50,000 dependent children in the Chicago area are cared for in the children's hospitals, day nurseries, child placing agencies, neighborhood centers, and special homes and schools for handicapped children which benefit from the tag day.

CLERK ACCUSED OF CURBING G.O.P. VOTER REGISTRY

Trickery by Downstate Democrats Charged.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Marshall, Ill., Oct. 3.—Republican leaders today charged that John Quick, Democratic clerk of Clark county, has refused to comply with the attorney general's instruction to establish branch offices for the registration of voters under the new permanent registration law.

They also accused Democrats of registering only those voters they know will cast Democratic ballots in the Nov. 3 election, when a United States senator, 15 downstate members of congress, and a congressman-at-large will be chosen. Registration ends next Tuesday.

Among those who said such charges have been made are John Hollenbeck, former state's attorney of Clark county; Dr. Charles O. Highsmith of West Union, formerly Republican county chairman, and Warren C. Murray, marshal of the Illinois Supreme court.

Lacked Time, Says Quick.

Quick said the attorney general's opinion on registration does not require county clerks to establish branch offices but merely states that registration taken at such offices will not be rejected as illegal. He said he has established no such offices in Clark county because when he learned of the opinion he decided there was not enough time left to make such action worth while. He said Democrats and Republicans are getting equal and efficient service when they appear at his office to register.

Similar charges of refusal to coöperate in registration have been made in Alton, Madison county, where Rolla J. Mottaz, assistant to the president of the Western Cartridge company and Republican county chairman, and citizens of Alhambra, Omphghent, Marine, St. Jacob, and Foster townships petitioned Norbert Hotz, Democratic county clerk, to give them a proper chance to register.

Reports from Other Counties.

Reports also came from Salem, seat of Marion county, where all officials are Democrats and Oscar L. Hawkins is county clerk, that registration of Democrats only was in full swing.

Alfred F. Schupp, co-chairman of Gov. Dwight H. Green's special committee on registration, said Democrats are using similar tactics in most of the 40 downstate counties which have Democratic clerks.

Dr. Highsmith said he visited Quick, the Clark county clerk, a couple of weeks before Sept. 19, the first of two general precinct registration days under the new permanent registration law. He said he asked Quick to appoint deputies and provide voters with facilities for registering. He said Quick told him he would not do it.

Private Signup Told.

"Yet it has been reported to me that Democratic county officials are registering those they are certain will vote Democratic on Nov. 3," Dr. Highsmith said. "In one case I am informed that Quick himself went out and registered a couple on a Sunday. How those registrations were dated, I do not know."

Hollenbeck and Murray said they had received similar reports.

In Clark county in the April 14 primaries, 566 Democratic votes were cast for Raymond S. McKeough and 2,848 Republicans voted for Sen. Wayland Brooks, who is running to succeed himself. The primary vote for the two in Madison county was 9,127 Republican ballots for Brooks to 4,746 votes for McKeough. In Marion county Brooks got 3,371 and McKeough 2,046.

URGES WOMEN HELP PROTECT RIGHTS IN WAR

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 3 [Special].—American women's achievement of equality with men finds them with a full realization that the American form of government must not be lost in the process of winning the war, Speaker Elmer J. Schnackenberg of the Illinois house of representatives declared in a speech prepared for delivery here tonight.

"We have an abiding conviction that the women of America join with the men," he said, "in the resolute determination that, despite the strain placed upon the American system of government by the burdens of this world conflict, the structure of that government will be maintained.

"The checks and balances of our two party system of government must never be abandoned."

McKEOUGH CITES BACKING OF CIO, AFL PRESIDENTS

Managers of the campaign for Congressman R. S. McKeough made public yesterday indorsements of his candidacy for United States senator by Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial organizations, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

"Your record as a congressman has proved you to be a staunch progressive, fully devoted to the national welfare and to the welfare of the working men and women of the nation," Murray wrote McKeough.

"Because of the full and complete support Congressman McKeough has given to the AFL and all measures sponsored and approved by it during his eight years of service, we favor his election to the United States senate," read a letter from Green.

At Club Opening

Gov. Dwight Green and Mrs. C. Hilding Anderson at Swedish club dinner last night.

Gov. Dwight H. Green last night told members of the Swedish Club of Chicago at its season's formal opening banquet that the outcome of this war will direct the course of the world for a thousand years.

"It will determine whether we, as well as the people of Sweden and other nations, remain free—free to declare what opportunities we shall have and under what conditions we shall live," the governor told the gathering at 1258 North La Salle street, which was featured by the unveiling of a plaque honoring club members and members' sons serving in the armed forces.

C. Hilding Anderson, club president, was in charge. Gosta Oldenburg, royal consul of Sweden, spoke briefly. The Chicago Swedish Glee club under direction of Harry T. Carlson also was on the program.

TOMORROW LAST DAY TO REGISTER FOR NOV. 3 VOTE

Record Off Year Total Seen for Chicago.

An eleventh hour rush of Chicago voters to register tomorrow for the Nov. 3 election is expected to make the total registration a record breaker for an off year—that is, a nonpresidential election year.

Tomorrow is the last day for the unregistered Chicagoan to add his name to the poll lists and it is predicted when the books are closed at 9 p. m. there will be nearly 1,800,000 names recorded. Revision on Friday and Saturday may knock off as many as 50,000 names, but the final figure may approach 1,750,000. The highest direct comparable figure was the registration of 1,718,200 for the state election of 1938.

The qualified elector who wishes to register may do so tomorrow in any of the city's fire stations or in the office of the election commissioners in the city hall. The fire stations will be open from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. and, while the election board's regular hours are only from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., it will accept registrations until 9 p. m.

That the last minute registration will be large was impressed upon observers by the steady increase in the daily totals of registrants at the fire stations since their doors were thrown open by registrars on Sept. 26. Since enrollment continued until after 9 o'clock last night, yesterday's figures were not reported, but the totals for the six previous days were as follows:

Sept. 26, Saturday	4,082
Sept. 28, Monday	5,758
Sept. 29, Tuesday	6,300
Sept. 30, Wednesday	7,147
Oct. 1, Thursday	7,856
Oct. 2, Friday	8,952

More Register Downtown.

Registrations at the election board office also rose steadily. While only 784 presented themselves at the city hall in July, there were 2,196 in August and 3,534 in September. Since the April primary there have been 8,299 persons booked at the city hall.

The registration for the primary was 1,727,244. Adding to that figure the 40,095 registered at the fire stations and the 8,299 at the election board by Sept. 30 there were 1,775,638 names on the poll lists Friday night.

In suburbs under the board's jurisdiction registration also will close tomorrow night. These suburbs are Berwyn, Chicago Heights, Cicero, Elmwood Park, Harvey, Morton Grove, Skokie, Stickney, and Summit. All other territory within Cook county is under the jurisdiction of County Clerk M. J. Flynn and there registration in the offices of village and township clerks will continue thru Tuesday.

CLEANER ALLEYS DRIVE RATS INTO HOMES FOR FOOD

The drive to clean up garbage laden alleys in the city has had one unexpected and undesirable result. Eighty-five per cent of the hundreds of thousands of rats that once fed on alley debris have been driven into neighboring cellars in their search for food, Mrs. Hilda Gitlin, executive director of the Metropolitan Housing council, reported yesterday to an anti-rat committee in Hull house.

Shortage of man power to spread poison and traps has resulted in an increase in the number of rodents, Mrs. Gitlin said, but the fight will continue with the aid of civilian defense sanitation wardens and property owners who will be contacted individually and instructed in rat control methods.

The committee will restrict its efforts to four square blocks in the near west side, termed the worst infested area in the city. If successful, the system will be introduced in other areas, Mrs. Gitlin said.

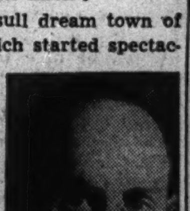
PLAN 200 WAR WORKERS' HOMES IN WESTCHESTER

Sixty Units Already Are Under Construction.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Westchester, Insull dream town of the late 1920s, which started spectacularly with a goal of 40,000 inhabitants but which quietly slid into the depression doldrums and now has a population of 850, is being awakened from its Rip Van Winkle sleep with the largest privately financed single family rental housing project in the Chicago area. Sixty homes of a projected 200 [all of which have building priorities] are in various stages of construction, and additional units are being started at the rate of 3 daily.



Stuart H. Otis.

A formal dedication of the big rental project will be held Oct. 11 at 2 p. m. in the school yard at Gladstone street and Hull avenue, Westchester. Congressman Frank N. Reid of Aurora will be chairman of the ceremonies. Speakers will include Reuben Nelson, president of the village of Westchester; Philip N. Klutznick, regional director of the National Housing agency; Gael Sullivan, Illinois director of FHA, and Earl Heffley of WPB, in charge of housing priorities.

All Improvements In.

The 200 homes are to be located in the area bounded on the south by Gladstone street [two blocks north of Roosevelt road], on the west by Hull avenue [one block from the Westchester L extension], on the east by Pusheck road [the eastern boundary of the village], and on the north by a line just south of Harrison street.

All of the streets in this area are paved, all improvements are in, and the area is shaded by 14 year old elms. Several homes built years ago are all occupied.

For War Workers Only.

The new homes will be rented to war workers only at $39.95 a month. Already 25 units have been rented and will be occupied about Oct. 15. Basements in all of the 200 homes will be in by Dec. 15, it was said, with the expectation of having all completed and ready for occupancy by March 1, 1943.

Designed by Skidmore, Owings & Merrill, the houses and lots will cost $6,000 each. Seventy of the homes will be two story and 130 will be one story with an unfinished second floor. All will have full basements.

They will be of brick and frame and brick construction, with asphalt shingle roofs, 4 inches of rock wool insulation, and coal fired furnaces.

They are being financed thru Draper & Kramer, Inc., with $5,200 FHA insured mortgages on each house, or a total of $1,040,000. The loans are for 25 years, at 4½ per cent, and call for $28.91 monthly payments on principal and interest. They were placed with the New York Life Insurance company.

Sudler & Co., agent for the development, has established a renting office at 615 South Hull avenue to receive applications from war workers. Carroll Sudler Jr. is in charge of the project renting.

The development is under the direction of the Commercial Home Building corporation. Joseph Otis Sr. is chairman, and Stuart H. Otis is president. N. A. Owings is vice president. John J. Maltby of Joseph T. Carp, Inc., which has the general contract, also is vice president. Carroll Sudler Jr. is secretary-treasurer.

Village Comes to Life.

Village President Nelson commented that Westchester after years of lethargy at last is waking up. During the last two years approximately 100 new homes have been built. The town has about 300 homes.

"The town contains 2,200 acres and about one third of it has been subdivided," Nelson said. "Approximately 80 per cent of the platted land is restricted to apartments. This probably will be rezoned to permit single family homes being built."

New Suburban Rental Project

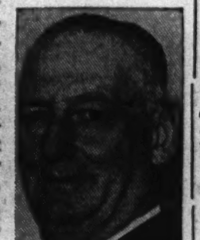
Some of the units in new 200 home development in Westchester, designed by Skidmore, Owings & Merrill, all of which are to be rented to war workers only. The houses are staggered—set at varying distances from the street—and occupy lots with from 38 to 47 feet frontage, with a depth of 126½ feet. The $1,200,000 project is financed with 200 separate FHA mortgages totaling $1,040,000 thru Draper & Kramer, Inc.

War Worker's Home

Five room war worker's home at 7742 Thorndale avenue, east of the Chicago Aircraft Assembly plant (to be operated by Douglas Aircraft company), which is a typical unit in O. W. Besinger's Canfield Ridge development. B. J. Bruns was architect. This house was sold for $6,000 and was financed thru the Investors' Syndicate.

Rush Building of Homes for Plant Officials

With nearly 90 families of officials of the Douglas Aircraft company [which will operate the big Chicago Aircraft Assembly plant, owned by the government and under construction west of Park Ridge] already settling in the northwestern part of Chicago and adjacent suburbs, and more of the expected 300 coming from California daily, O. W. Besinger is hurrying construction on 62 homes in his Canfield Ridge development at the northeast corner of Higgins road and Canfield avenue, in Chicago and adjoining Park Ridge.



O. W. Besinger.

He reported yesterday that 10 are practically completed and that all of the others will be under roof by Dec. 1. Twelve already have been sold. The entire group is scheduled for completion by the first of next year, he said.

Built 6,000 Homes.

Designed by B. J. Bruns, architect, all of the homes have five rooms and basement and are heated with forced warm air coal fired furnaces. They have walls of the same kind of brick on all sides of the house. All are being financed thru the Investors' Syndicate of Minneapolis, of which J. F. Bruns Jr. is the Chicago manager.

Besinger, who says he has built about 6,000 homes in the Chicago metropolitan area during the last 25 years, erected and sold 38 homes in his Canfield Ridge development in 1938 and 1940. These were the first units in a program calling for 100 homes, of which the remaining 62 now are being built.

Active in Suburbs.

He is father of Leonard W. Besinger who has been an active builder in River Forest, Clarendon Hills, and other western suburbs and also in Chicago, where he is now building an 81 unit row house project not far from the Chrysler aircraft engine plant on the southwest side, described in last week's real estate section.

DEVON-WASHTENAW CORNER SOLD.

The State Mutual Life Assurance company sold to Paul Caplan for $46,000 the building at the northwest corner of Devon and Washtenaw avenues, containing 7 stores, 4 offices, 4 flats, and a studio. Brokers were I. Deemar & Co., and Victor Realty company.

HEATING CONVERSION ENTITLES LANDLORD TO SEEK RENT BOOST

Conversion of heating units from oil to coal or gas and insulation of oil heated dwellings may be considered an increase in service entitling Chicago area landlords to ask for rent increases under federal rent control regulation, it was announced yesterday by Earl Dean Horward, rent director for Cook, Du Page, Lake, and Kane counties.

Howard said that this policy change, based on a ruling by the Office of Price Administration, was made necessary by fuel oil rationing.

The same ruling authorized Howard to grant rent increases on the basis of increased service where the landlord is not obligated to furnish fuel but voluntarily converts the heating plant from oil to other fuel at his own expense, or insulates the building.

Realty Miscellany

Albert F. Keeney, famous in the realty world for his flaming red neckties, his unfailing good nature, and his long years of activity in the northwest side and suburban realty field, celebrated his 70th birthday Oct. 1. Following a custom of many years, all men of the office at 5612 North avenue wore Keeney red ties and the office girls wore red hairbows. Several large baskets, each containing 70 red roses, brightened the office. In the afternoon Keeney was given a surprise reception attended by the entire office force, their wives, and many friends.

COFFEE SUPPLY CALLED ENOUGH FOR TWO MONTHS

Picture Brightens, Says Official of Industry.

Chicago housewives will not be threatened with a serious coffee shortage for at least 60 days, James Kissane, head of the Chicago Coffee association, which includes 98 per cent of the region's coffee wholesalers and importers, said yesterday.

"In my opinion the coffee picture has grown brighter in the last few weeks," he said. "Sinkings along the Atlantic coast and in the Caribbean apparently have diminished. Also reflecting a note of optimism is the Commodity Credit corporation's blanket authorization for importers to bring in all coffee contracted for prior to July 2. Previously the volume of imports was arbitrarily restricted."

This does not mean, he warned, that the normal volume of coffee importation can be anticipated, because of restricted shipping. Virtually all coffee vessels owned by American lines have been pressed into government service, Kissane said, and importations must depend upon Brazilian bottoms.

He said coffee hoarding probably will not present an acute problem, since coffee deteriorates too rapidly after roasting.

Possibility that coffee may be rationed was indicated by a spokesman for the Office of Price Administration in Washington.

No Ration Plan Yet.

The official, who declined to be quoted, asserted that, while the OPA long has recognized that coffee may have to be rationed, no plan exists for action in the "immediate future."

John C. Weigel, regional OPA administrator in Chicago, yesterday repeated his attack upon the practice of grocers to force customers to purchase other commodities before selling them coffee.

Weigel termed the practice "unfair and unlawful" and asserted that grocers who persist in following it face loss of their licenses.

"How Do Grocers Know?"

His suggestion that grocers sell coffee only to regular customers was assailed by Sidney M. Libit, counsel for the Community Retail Grocers' association, who demanded: "How are grocers to know all of their customers?"

Libit defended the coffee plus sales plan, describing it as the only "natural way to distribute coffee equitably." He added that most grocers would prefer straight rationing.

"We very much doubt the wisdom of the OPA's stand," he said, "but as long as it's a ruling, our duty is to obey it."

Libit declared that in his opinion the OPA policy would lead to complete coffee rationing.

U. S. ARMY SEEKS USE OF $500,000 CANADIAN HOME

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 3.—Two branches of the United States armed forces and a commercial air line are negotiating separately with the Alberta government for use of government house in Edmonton, the capital of Alberta, it was learned today from reliable sources.

It was reported that the United States army and North West Airlines, a commercial aviation company, were bidding against each other on the building for use as dormitories, while the United States army air forces wanted it for administration purposes.

Government house at Edmonton, built in 1915 at a cost of $500,000 as a residence for Alberta's lieutenant-governors, was closed in 1938 when the legislature controled by the Social Credit party failed to pass an appropriation for its upkeep.

ELIZABETH ANN LANDIS.

Miss Elizabeth Ann Landis, WAVES officer recently assigned to Chicago, would have been in New York City watching a world series game yesterday had her navy orders been postponed. Instead she spent the day at women's navy reserve headquarters in the Board of Trade building explaining the technicalities of enlistment to would-be WAVES.

The trip to the world series was to have been a graduation gift to Miss Landis from her uncle, Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, on completion of her naval training course at Smith college in Northampton, Mass.

Miss Landis is the daughter of the late Frederick Landis, who was congressman from Logansport, Ind. Two of her brothers are in the navy, another is at West Point, and a fourth Kenesaw M. Landis II., is deputy prosecuting attorney of the 29th judicial circuit of Indiana. Her sister may follow Miss Landis into one of the women's services.

STRIKE SETTLED AT CANDY PLANT; WAGES BOOSTED

A two day strike of 750 employés of Bunte Bros., candy manufacturers, 3301 West Franklin boulevard, was settled yesterday. Officials of the Bakers and Confectioners International, local 351, and of the company, said the principal provision in the agreement was an increase of 5 cents an hour. Employés will return to work tomorrow.

Twenty-seven drivers of the Shell Oil company of East Chicago who went on a strike on Thursday returned to work yesterday pending settlement of their differences with the company by arbitration, according to company spokesmen. The drivers, who are members of the Teamsters' union [AFL], have demanded a 5½ cent hourly wage increase.

Chicago's response to the nation's call for scrap was praised yesterday by Nathaniel Leverone, War Production board state salvage director, who announced that the city's scrap dealers now are handling 20 per cent more volume than during last month. The daily total is now more than 3,600 tons, he said, against a 3,000 ton daily average in September.

Negotiation for large tonnages such as bridges and railroad and street car rails is underway, John Nuveen Jr., WPB regional salvage director, said.

Nuveen added that the auto graveyard section soon will accelerate movements of scrap automobiles.

Start Hauling at Schools.

So successful has been the salvage drive among school children that board of education officials have arranged for trucks to begin hauling away the piles tomorrow.

Contracts were awarded to two scrap metal firms, the Kingsbury Scrap Iron and Metal company, 1000 Fullerton avenue, which will use 35 trucks for school scrap pickups, and the West Pullman Scrap Iron and Metal company, 11954 Peoria street, which will detail 10 trucks to the job. Bids were undisclosed.

Declaring that "wherever we can help in the drive we will do so," Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand yesterday announced army trucks will be available for picking up scrap heaps. All posts and stations in the 6th service command have been asked to coöperate with civilian defense officials in the salvage drive, Gen. Aurand said, and trucks, when requested, will be sent from the nearest army garage or station.

A contribution of 7,850 tons of scrap metal has been made by County hospital, Dr. Ole C. Nelson, assistant warden, said. Old wheel stretchers and broken down beds comprise the bulk of the tonnage.

Nearly 10 per cent of the hospital scrap was in vitally needed copper and brass, Dr. Nelson said. He said an additional 30 or 40 tons of scrap metal may be salvaged from the obsolete boiler room of Durand hospital, recently acquired by the county board.

In Evanston, the Junior Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a movie performance next Saturday for children of the city who will be admitted to the Valencia theater for five pounds of scrap.

A bird's eye view of the city's school yards would resemble an ant colony, board of education officials commented, with children streaming in from all directions, tugging armloads and wagons full of a bewildering assortment of scrap metal.

At Calumet High school, 8131 May street, patriotic students accounted for 30,000 pounds of scrap including two ancient automobiles wheedled from parents.

Uruguay Foreign Chief to Seek Vice Presidency

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 3 (AP).—Alberto Guani, minister of foreign affairs and acting minister of national defense, resigned today because he is a candidate for vice president. President Alfredo Baldomir was understood to have accepted Guani's resignation from the defense post but contended the political campaign would not interfere with his service as foreign minister and asked him to retain it.

Good Health Will Win!

YOU owe it to yourself and to your country to keep well. Good health is an important part of the nation's war program. Without it we cannot provide the physical energy that is necessary to win. Make it your patriotic duty to have your physical condition checked regularly. Disease germs are ever present in the body ready to strike the moment bodily resistance is lowered against them. To be fully protected, these examinations must be thorough and complete. Health authorities advise an examination of every part of the body at least once a year, especially if you are past 40 years of age. A complete examination will protect you against such killing diseases as heart failure, cancer, pneumonia, tuberculosis, kidney trouble, diabetes, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, appendicitis, etc. Almost any one of these diseases takes a greater toll of life every year than all the battles we fought during the last war.

All of these services are available here through a competent and experienced staff of physicians, practicing in all fields of medicine and surgery. Use these outstanding services to get well and to keep well. The fees are unusually low.

ALSAB BEATEN BY WHIRLAWAY IN BELMONT CUP

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Whirlaway had his horse laugh on the Alsab cheering and chowder society today.

Getting revenge for the half a nose defeat he was handed by Alsab in their $25,000 match race two weeks ago, Whirlaway trounced Alsab by three-quarters of a length in the 23d running of the $25,000 added Jockey Club Gold cup at Belmont Park picked up an $18,350 pay check and became the first horse in turf history to win more than half a million dollars.

What's more, he did it under a classy ride by Georgie [The Iceman] Woolf, who was partly blamed for the match race defeat. As a matter of fact, Woolf not only got even but with the victory he rounded out what was probably this year's top gold filed "double." Only about an hour before he hit the jackpot with Whirlaway, Woolf sat in the saddle as John Marsch's Occupation waltzed to a five length victory in the $57,890 Belmont Futurity, richest of all races for 2 year olds. This victory, in which the midwestern colt outclassed Count Fleet and Slide Rule, stamped Occupation as the year's top candidate for the championship of the juveniles.

Despite the money involved in the Futurity and the possibility that this year's victor might go on to break the ancient jinx that a Futurity winner never takes the Kentucky Derby, the second go-round for Alsab and Whirlaway was the hot horse race today. The 31,805 cash customers proved it. They bet $105,970 on Whirlaway's nose—more than had ever been bet in New York before on a horse to win.

And, while Whirlaway was the 11 to 20 favorite in the betting he went around Al Sabath's Chicago express so convincingly and steadily in the stretch that he made the express look more like a local slowing down for a whistle stop.

Woolf let The Rhymer, from Mrs. Payne Whitney's barn, and Alsab, with Carroll Bierman aboard, fight it out for the lead for a mile and a quarter. Then he sent the Kentucky cannonball up. For a quarter of a mile Alsab stood him off, as he did in just lasting to win their thriller two weeks ago.

As they straightened out for home Woolf belted Blenheim's big tailed baby with his bat and Whirlaway went right on past Alsab and was increasing his edge at the wire as he finished the two miles in 3:21 3-5, running the last quarter mile in the good time of 25 1-5 seconds.

It was double revenge for Whirlaway, for he not only kayoed Alsab, but at the finish he was nearly nine lengths in front of Townsend Martin's Bolingbroke, who handed him a whipping in North American record time on this same strip only a week ago. The weary Rhymer plodded home fourth.

There was $18,350 in the pay envelope Warren Wright's whizz-bang picked up, skyrocketing his earnings to $511,486. He packed 124 pounds in this weight-for-age affair, compared to 117 for Alsab.

The Futurity was run in two sections. Occupation had competition only for about three-sixteenths of a mile. Then he said "so long" to the nine others in the field and went away from there. Clocked in 1:15 1-5 for the 6½ furlong trip down the Widener straightaway, the winner of the Arlington and Washington Park Futurities in Chicago, rewarded his supporters with $7.10 for $2.

Hal Price Headley's filly, Askmenow, was a surprise second a head in front of Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Fleet. Slide Rule, well liked stepper from the barn of Airplane Manufacturer W. E. Boeing, closed some ground to come home fourth.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

A field goal, the only score of the game, yesterday beat the University of Texas, which had needed an adding machine to compute its touchdown raids in two previous games. The field goal, after 54 minutes of bruising football, was kicked by a substitute guard, an inconspicuous substitute at that. This one dramatic moment gave Northwestern a 3 to 0 victory in Dyche stadium before a surprisingly large assemblage of 43,000.

The field goal kicker was Alan Pick, a senior from West Bend, Wis., who has worn his own special groove on the Northwestern bench these past two seasons. Close followers of the Wildcats seemed to recall last year he came legging it out to the field from his own private seat and then came back to sit down after missing a goal attempt.

Graham Goes 36 Yards.

The Wildcats, who had fended off numerous Texas scoring forays in the second and third quarters, suddenly found themselves in command of the battle in the fourth period. At its outset they drove 59 yards and were halted on a pass interception on the Southwesterners' 11 yard line.

Then they started all over again from their 40 yard line. Otto Graham, the Purple's spark plug, with Nick Vodick adding deception as the man in motion, cut thru the Texas right tackle, slanted to his left and finally was hauled down on the Texas 24 after a 36 yard gallop.

With Vodick and Graham running, the Wildcats picked up a first down on the 13, but the Texans made a firm stand.

It was fourth down on the 14 and, all of a sudden, a flying figure came dashing over to the blob of orange and white jerseys. It was Alan Pick, now suddenly the most important player on the gridiron. The ball was at a difficult angle, several yards off center to the right.

Pick Kicks and Departs.

The ball came back from center, Quarter Back Dud Kean quickly placed it in position, and Substitute Pick swung his right leg. It was a line drive kick, straight and true over the target. Then the substitute, grinning broadly, rushed back toward the bench only to run into a hero's welcome. Wildcat substitutes and the coaches leaped off the bench, raced across the cinder track and completely enveloped the three point kid. Soon he emerged on the shoulders of a pair of teammates. His job was over, and maybe he'll get a letter

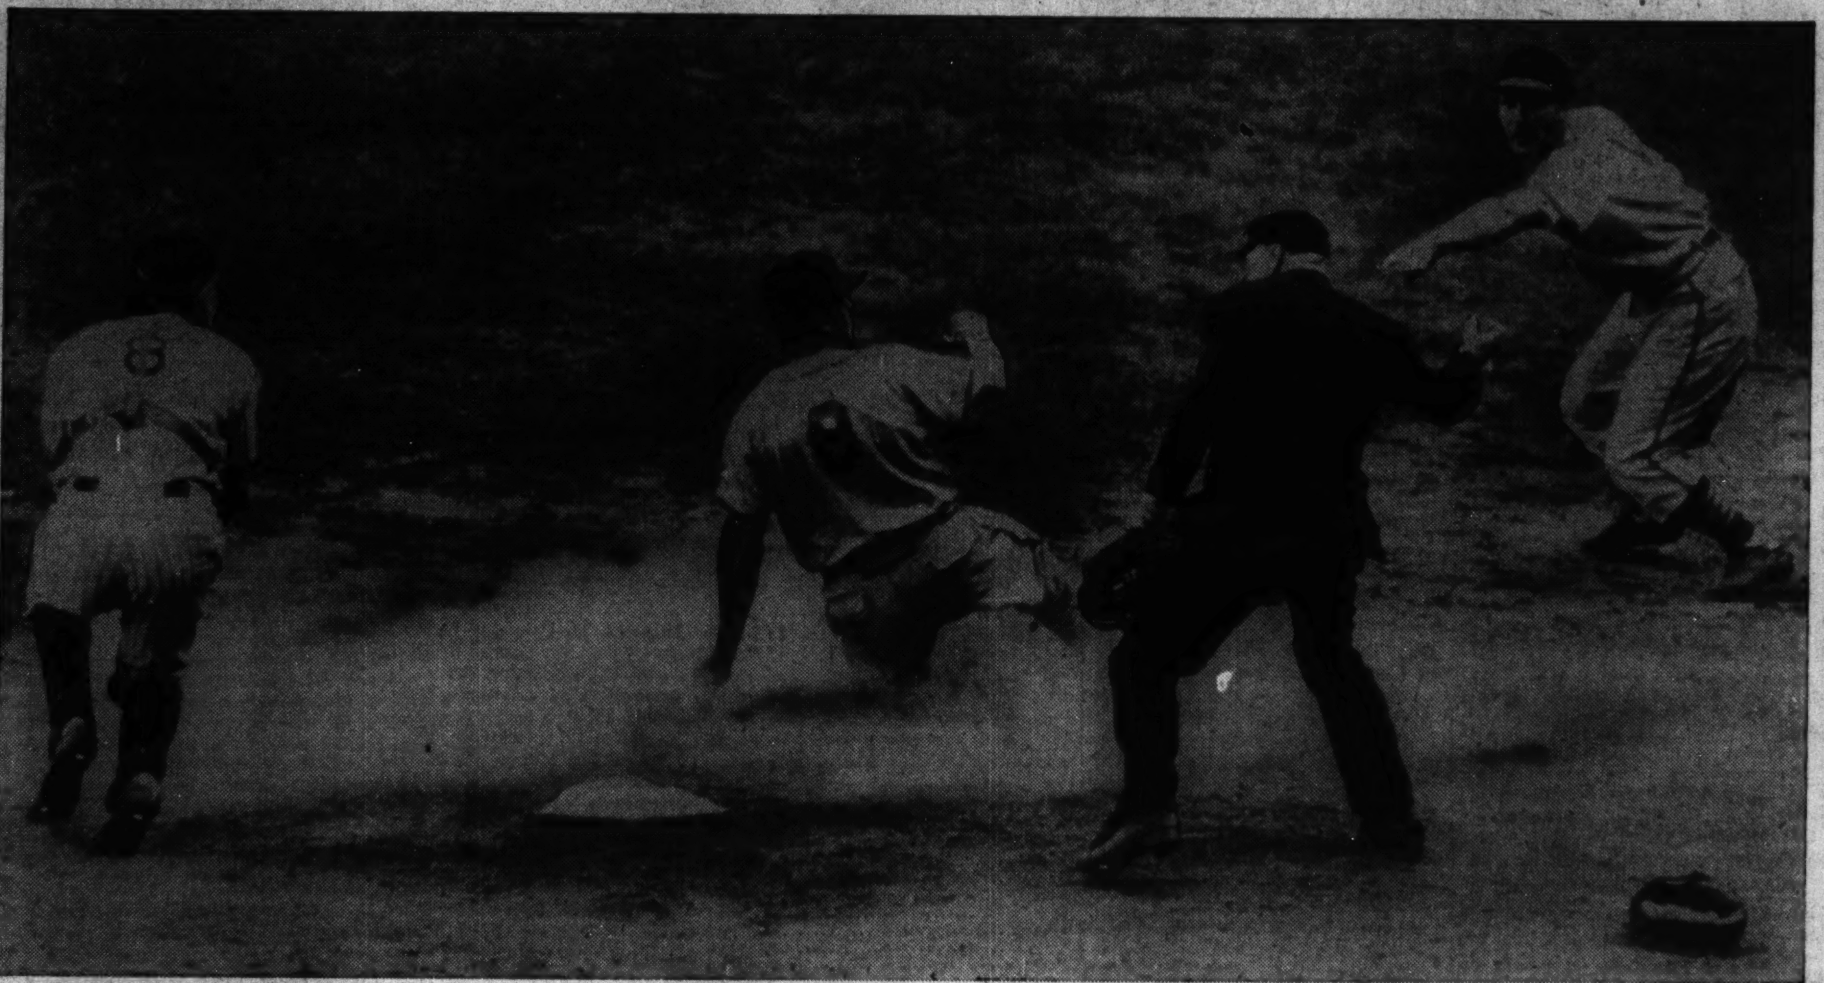
A CARDINAL IS OUT, BUT HE HAS LAST LAUGH



Terry Moore, Cardinal center fielder, slides into home plate in a ninth inning double play in third world series game yesterday between St. Louis and Yankees in New York. Teammate George Kurowski (right) points to the plate and cries "safe," but Umpire George Barr calls the out. The action started when Johnny Hopp flied to Charley Keller, Yankee outfielder, who threw to Bill Dickey (left). The Cardinals won, 2 to 0, to take the lead in the series two games to one. NOTRE DAME'S RALLY TOO LATE; TECH WINS, 13-6

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 3.—The boys from Georgia Tech today spread woe and anguish along the 100 yards of turf that carpets the Notre Dame stadium. Slicker than jack rabbits in their maneuvers, the Engineers, conceding nothing to a foe they had been warned to fear, bolted to a 13 to 6 triumph to drape Notre Dame with its first football defeat since the 1940 season. It also marked the second Tech victory in the series of 13 games.

The Georgians, except in one instance, took both the Notre Dame defense and offense apart. Whenever the Irish made threatening gestures they found the solution long before their goal line was seriously endangered. They were continually sailing forth with their own offense which time and again blew the Irish up and down the field. And that's the way it went until a late third period fumble by Jim Mello touched off some dizzy action that hung up all the victors' points, followed by a Notre Dame surge that was still going strong up to the last few minutes of battling.

Engineers Threaten in Second.

The Engineers served warning on their foes as early as the second period. They wandered down to the Irish 5 yard mark and were turned back when an attempted pass shower was ended by an interception. They kept on worrying Notre Dame and the break finally came at about the half way point of the third quarter. They snared that Mello fumble and knocked off 28 touchdown yards in the twinkling of an eye. At the start of the fourth quarter they did it again, this time for 24 yards. Then Notre Dame made its only sustained drive of the day, a drive that rolled for 73 yards with Tom Miller setting the pace.

The Irish started off as if intending to solve the touchdown problem without delay. They ran out of the end zone with Tech's opening kickoff and followed with an impressive series of first downs, one the result of Angelo Bertelli's initial pitch. The drive ended suddenly when Plaster stole a Bertelli pass and reeled off 15 yards to bring it up to the Engineers' 28. They took a few healthy shots at the Irish line but relief came for the latter when Ralph Plaster fumbled and Bob McBride recovered for Notre Dame on his 45 yard line. Plaster promptly made amends by intercepting Mello's long pass and running it 22 yards to midfield. Then in the last minute of the period the Georgians punted, the first punt of the battle.

Tech Really in Earnest.

To reach more comfortable midfield territory Bertelli punted at the start of the second quarter, Tech capturing the ball on Notre Dame's 48 yard line. Clint Castleberry, another of Tech's elusive backs, shot around his left end for 14 yards, an advance that brought back the 10 Irish regulars who had retired at the opening of the period. In a double exchange of punts, Tech wound up 6 yards to

Buckeyes Trim Indiana, 32-21 in a Thriller

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Oct. 3.—Ohio State, 32; Indiana, 21!

The above is positively not the score of a basketball game. Nobody made any free throws. That 32 to 21 tabulation was the final count of the first game of the 1942 Western conference football season, and the 48,227 spectators who witnessed it will testify that there hasn't been the like of such a game hereabouts since that day in 1935 when Notre Dame came out of nowhere in the last seconds to beat Ohio State by 18 to 13.

There was a suspicion in these parts last night and this morning that this game would be what is sometimes called a contest. The young Buckeyes guaranteed a game. They fulfilled that promise.

It takes two teams to make a contest, however, and the Hoosiers kept their side of the contract for more than three quarters, in as thrilling a scoring fight as the central states will see for many a week. Scouting agents of the teams' future rivals admitted after the battle that they may expect anything and everything and particularly from Ohio State.

Just Look at the Score!

Best and briefest explanation of the doings that went on here today can be resolved into the progressive scoring record of the game. The Buckeyes scored 6 points in the first period and added 7 more in the second quarter for a 13 to 0 lead which the Hoosiers pared by a 7 point drive before the half ended.

Indiana went ahead, 14 to 13, early in the third period, but five plays later Ohio State made it 19 to 14. The Madison, Wis., Oct. 3.—The Wisconsin football players turned on the power for one big quarter this afternoon, whipping over four touchdowns in the second period to take full command after making a somewhat precarious start in their game with Marquette. From there the Badgers went on to entertain the crowd of 35,000 with a 35 to 7 victory.

In the course of the afternoon Wisconsin did just about everything a good football team is expected to do. From the instant a passing play began to develop until the ball settled precisely into the hands of the racing receiver, the boys acted as tho they knew exactly what was going to happen. Their timing was splendid and not once did they throw the ball away.

Running Game Impressive.

Their running game was equally impressive. Time and again the ball carriers, maneuvering behind a phalanx of hard charging blockers, were shaken loose for substantial gains. Meanwhile the Badger line, operating aggressively and smartly from end to end, was forcing the issue on every play.

It took some time, however, for the Badger superiority to develop. Thruout the first quarter, Wisconsin was backed up against its own goal line after losing the ball on a fumble on the first play from scrimmage.

The entire complexion of the game changed, however, on the first play of the second quarter. The Badgers had the ball on their own 28 yard line. Jack Wink, the quarterback, took the pass from center and leis-

Great Lakes Power Crushes Iowa, 25 to 0

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 3.—It's ice cream next week instead of beans at the Great Lakes Naval Training station. Take the word of Herman Schneidman, injured Great Lakes quarter back who served as a press box spotter and who sang out the above tribute to his teammates as the Bluejackets pushed over their fourth touchdown in defeating the University of Iowa, 25 to 0, today.

Today's game may have marked the beginning of a renaissance of football at Great Lakes, for the sailors, who stumbled in their opener a week ago, gave promise of providing trouble aplenty from now on. A scrappy but outmanned Iowa eleven gave them a battle for most of one half today, but conditions which were favorable for straight football, plus a preponderance of capable man power, swung the tide to the Sailors shortly before the first half ended. And their power increased as the second half progressed. They scored midway in the third quarter, added a third touchdown early in the final period and then scored a third time with a team of substitutes against a substitute Hawkeye team in the last few minutes.

Ball Is Slippery.

Fumbles were few considering the slippery condition of the ball, but two, one each by Iowa's sophomore full backs, Chuck Uknes and Dick Hoerner, led to Great Lakes touchdowns. Both were near midfield, but in each case the collection of former pro and college stars who make up the sailor team took advantage of openings and poured thru the Hawk-

SEAHAWKS SNAP MINNESOTA MARK OF 18 VICTORIES

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 3.—Minnesota's record of winning football that had grown to 18 consecutive games since 1939 ended this dismal afternoon in Memorial Stadium by the margin of the point after touchdown. The Seahawks from the Iowa Pre-Flight school, coached by Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman, who had directed the Gophers to national preeminence in the past decade, ended Minnesota's victory march, 7 to 6.

Thirty-seven thousand watched a battle which will have few equals this season for hard smashing, blocking and tackling. The Gophers scored first. Five minutes later the Seahawks had matched the touchdown and added the all important point by Fred Gage's place kick. With the leverage of this point the Seahawks dug in and defended.

One Yard from Pay Dirt.

Only once in the last half were the Seahawks able to get out to midfield. Time and again the Gophers seemed on the verge of breaking loose and their assault reached a stirring climax in the last 60 seconds when Minnesota's Bill Daley ran 50 yards and was pushed out of bounds 1 yard short of the end zone.

Minnesota's followers were confident of victory, but on the first play from scrimmage John Haman, former Northwestern center, smashed into Vic Kulbitski, Gopher full back, as he lunged into the line. Kulbitski fumbled, Haman recovered and Minnesota's last chance for victory had been snatched away as quickly as it had been offered.

Daley's run was a brilliant individual achievement, for the play began as a forward pass attempt. It was second down, 10 yards to gain, and the ball was on Minnesota's 49 yard line. Daley retreated to pass, was unable to find a receiver, and then he

New York, Oct. 3.—Earmark the St. Louis Cards' 2 to 0 triumph over the New York Yankees today to go down in the books as one of the greatest games in world series history. This first shutout the Yanks suffered in world series competition since 1926 had everything—great pitching by Spud Chandler and greater pitching by Ernie White, startling defense plays by Enos Slaughter and Terry Moore, hysterical quarrels with umpires by the usually calm Yanks; just a great game under perfect conditions before a grand new record crowd of 69,123 excited fans who paid $206,177 and got their money's worth. The receipts also set a new record.

The Yanks, excepting Carl Hubbell's victory in the first game of the 1936 series, haven't been behind in a series before since Jess Haines of the Cards shut out Dutch Reuther on Oct. 5, 1926. That was the last time the Yanks were shut out and also gave the Cards a record of two victories in the first three games.

Borowy to Pitch Today.

Thus nonplussed as the present generation of Yanks never has been nonplussed, the Yanks tomorrow will be given another dose of left handed casting—by Max Lanier or may face Morton Cooper again. The Yanks will rely on Rookie Hank Borowy.

The Cards, in the third inning, gave White the one run he needed, and Ernie helped vitally in its production. It was a freakish run, too. At the start of the third, Whitey Kurowski drew the only pass in the game, excepting an intentional one which loaded the bases with none out in the ninth.

Marion bunted and Kurowski went to second while Marion returned to the bench, apparently thrown out by Chandler. The game was going to proceed on that basis when Manager Joe McCarthy came charging out of the dugout. He claimed that Marion's bunt was a foul. Plate Umpire George Barr and Third Base Umpire Bill Summers conferred. Then they called in Umpire George Magerkurth from first and Umpire Cal Hubbard from second.

There were no movies available, but after a long confab the gents in serge decided they had been wrong and Mr. McCarthy was right. So Kurowski went back to first and Marion came out of the dugout to bat some more. He sent a slow bouncer to Frankie Crossetti and reached first a split second ahead of the ball.

Kurowski and Marion moved up on White's sacrifice and scored while Joe Gordon was throwing out Jimmy Brown. Chandler yielded only three singles in his eight inning term,

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 3.—Vanderbilt today gave a ringing salute to its southeastern conference rivals by overpowering, outspeeding, and outmaneuvering Purdue, 26 to 0.

The Boilermakers have taken beatings by larger scores, but never have we seen a team from Lafayette so completely outplayed as Purdue was this afternoon. The team was sluggish physically and mentally and was suffering from a bad case of jitters.

Vanderbilt, big, belligerent and fast, finished the game with three freshmen in its lineup. The reserve combination was functioning almost as effectively against the thoroly beaten Boilermakers as did the first string. The only bright spot for Purdue on this dismal day was the punting of Bob Hajzyk.

Purdue Line Outmatched.

Vanderbilt showed the 18,000 spectators two expert forward passers in Art Rebrovich and John Burns, three good running backs in Jack Jenkins, Bernie Rohling, and J. P. Moore, all of whom deployed behind a line that was more than a match for the heavier forwards from Purdue.

The arithmetic of the game emphasizes the Commodores' superiority in their second straight victory over the boys from Lafayette. They made 16 first downs to Purdue's 6. They piled up 303 yards from scrimmage against the Boilermakers' 42, and 187 by forward passing as compared with Purdue's 44.

Vanderbilt gave evidence of its strength immediately after hostilities began and scored before the period ended. Rebrovich set up the touchdown opportunity by hurling a pass to Jimmy Webb on Purdue's 22. Webb again grabbed a toss from Rebrovich, hesitated momentarily, then cut back thru the middle of the Boilermaker secondary to the 4 yard line. Rohling went around his left end for the score. Jenkins' place kick was wide.

Drive Successful.

The Nashville boys went to work in earnest in the second quarter and before the intermission had rolled up the count to 19 to 0.

Barnes started the second touchdown march by completing a pass to Harry Richter on Purdue's 18. He found Jack McDavid wide open for another pass that was completed on the 6. The Commodores then relied on their best running back, Jenkins, who crossed the goal on the fourth thrust at the Boilermaker line. Will Powell kicked goal to give Vanderbilt a 13 to 0 lead.

Vanderbilt capitalized on a Purdue fumble for its third score. Forrest McCaffry dropped the ball on an end around play and Harry Kelly, Vanderbilt tackle, fell on it on the Boilermakers' 13 yard line. Moore, Simmons and Rohling alternated in moving the ball to the 4, and on fourth down Simmons went over for the touchdown. Powell's place kick was wide.

Fumble Costly.

Another Purdue fumble, one of seven charged to the Boilermakers, gave Vanderbilt its final scoring opportunity. This time it was Henry Stram who let the oval bounce out of his arms and B. Hamilton recovered for the Commodores on the visitors' 22. Webb got around his left end to the Boilermakers' 13. Simmons found a big hole in the middle of Purdue's line and went to the 4 before Hajzyk got him. He stumbled after reaching the scrimmage line on the next play, but a few seconds later he fired a pass to Webb, who brought it down in the end zone for a touchdown. Powell's kick was good, making the score 26 to 0.

Purdue tried persistently to score on long forwards in the final period. It completed a couple of substantial gains, but at no time did the Bailermakers have a chance to penetrate its opponents' defense when Vanderbilt wanted to turn on the pressure.

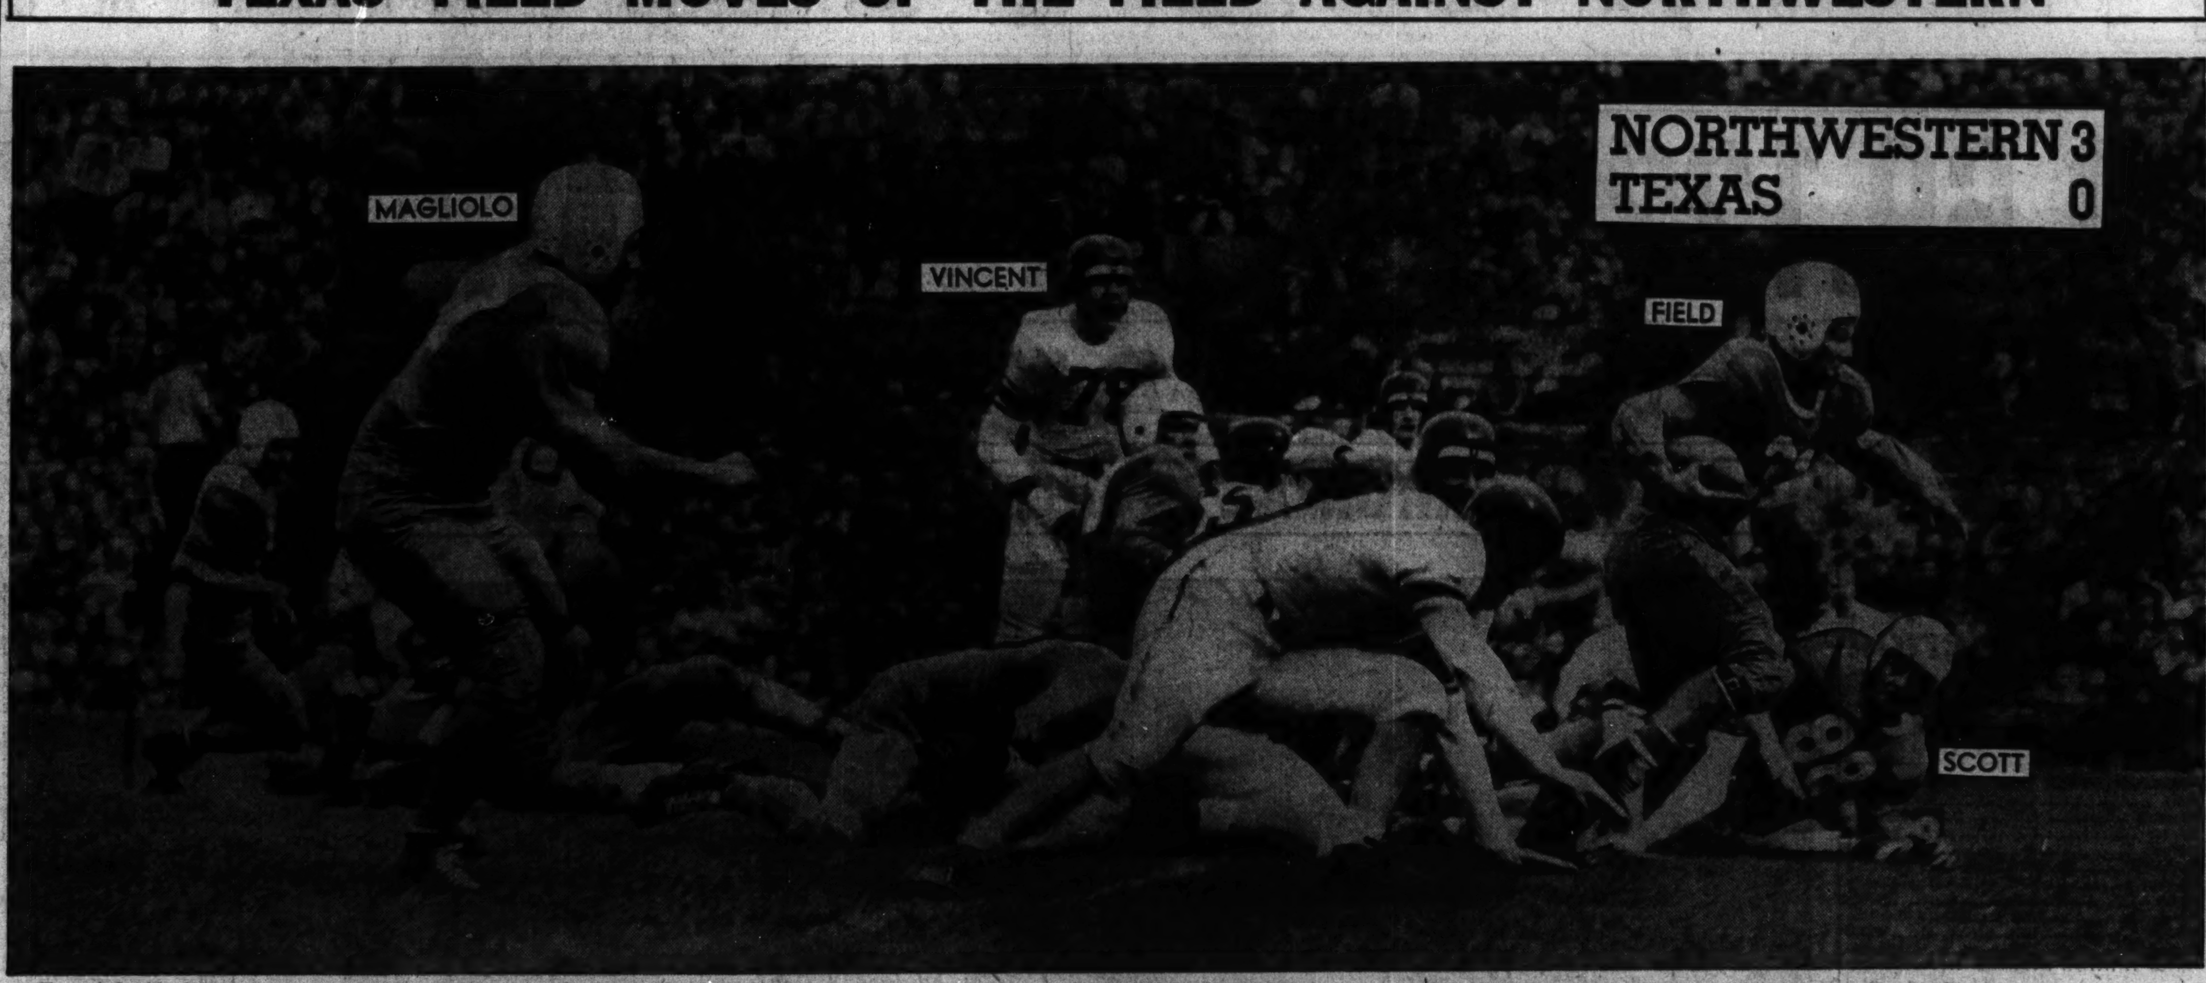
TEXAS' FIELD MOVES UP THE FIELD AGAINST NORTHWESTERN



Texas' Jackie Field, Longhorns' speedy back, carries ball for an 11 yard gain in first quarter against Northwestern in their stubbornly fought intersectional clash in Dyche stadium yesterday. Only score of the game came in the fourth quarter when Alan Pick kicked a field goal from 22 yards out. Brilliant running by Otto Graham, including a 36 yard dash, set up the winning play. Pick, who spent his sophomore and junior years on the bench, was carried on shoulders of teammates after making kick which won the game.

Wildcats Beat Texas, 3 to 0 on Pick's Kick

Only three points, but it was a thriller. There were sporadic running and passing bursts that indicated how the Texans had rolled up 40 points on the Corpus Christi Naval Cadets and 64 last week on Kansas State, which was more important in a football way when Northwestern's Lynn Waldorf coached there a few years ago.

There was the constant threat that Jackie Field, one of the fastest runners seen in Dyche stadium, would get away, or that the accurate passes of Roy McKay would break down the Wildcats' strong and smart resistance.

Field Runs 55 Yards.

Late in the third quarter Field, from the Longhorns' 28 yard line, broke around the Northwestern right end and simply outran everything in sight for 55 yards until Kean finally speared him on the 17. This threat melted in the Indian summer air when Capt. Nick Burke leaped up, batted McKay's pass high in the air, then captured the ball.

Earlier in the same period the Wildcats had driven 47 yards, 30 of them on a fleet journey by Don Buffmire down the east side line. But 27 yards from home Northwestern had to punt.

The second quarter was a rough one for the Wildcats and their trouble started when McKay actually kicked the ball the entire length of the field. Standing on his goal line the Texas full back drove the ball high and far over Graham's head. Otto turned and loped after it as it rolled tantalizingly toward the Northwestern goal. Its force was almost spent as it passed the 5 yard line, but one last turn sent it over for a touchback.

Fumbles Are Frequent.

After Graham had swung around right end for 9 yards, Hirsch fumbled and Zuehl Conoly, Texas tackle, recovered on the Wildcats' 30. McKay whipped a pass to Field, who fumbled on the 20, and Bud Haase recovered. The Wildcats were in trouble again a few plays later when Joe Magliolo stole the ball from Graham as he started around the Texas right end. This gave the Longhorns possession on the Purple 22.

McKay drove over left guard for 10 and Field picked up a yard to the 11. Then McKay passed to Magliolo on the 15 and Bob Motl knocked him out of bounds on the 7. McKay's pass over the goal line was batted in the air by a pair of Wildcats and Ken Matthews, Texas half back, caught the ball, but he was just out of the end zone. Another pass was incomplete and Northwestern took the ball.

Northwestern edged into Texas territory only once in the first quarter, this on an 18 yard pass from Graham to Motl to the 42. Then Audrey Gill intercepted Graham's pass on his 30, and ran it back 8. A punt exchange gave the Longhorns possession on their 30 and they put on a 48 yard drive, highlighted by McKay's pitching.

Wildcat Defense Holds Up.

Field and McKay lived up to their reputation as ground gainers, but yesterday they went up against a defense which was seldom fooled by the intricate ball handling in the back field. Field carried 15 times for 94 yards and McKay made 66 in 10 efforts. Buffmire had the best Northwestern average, 30 yards in 7 thrusts. Graham, who played 58 minutes of rugged football, advanced 68 yards in 20 maneuvers. First downs went to the Wildcats, 10 to 8, tho their 143 yard rushing was 3 yards short of the Texas total. Northwestern outpassed its opponents, 72 yards to 39.

Open All Age Heads Field Trial Today

Trained Golden, Labrador, and Chesapeake Bay retrievers from five different states, demonstrated their hunting ability yesterday in the annual field trial sponsored by the Midwest Field Trial club near Wauconda. This test for breeds that retrieve both on land and in the water is being held on the Malcolm J. Boyle estate two miles east of Wauconda. It continues thru today.

Two stakes, one for puppies and the second for nonwinners, were on the program yesterday. Starting this morning at 9 a. m., the open all age event, in which many champion and nationally known retrievers will compete, is expected to take all of the day. Included among the 22 dogs nominated for the open all-age are field trial champion Tar of Arden, the Labrador owned by Paul Bakewell III. of St. Louis, which won the field and stream trophy last year, Sand Gold Terry, the yellow Labrador owned by J. W. Whitehill, Milwaukee, Wis., which won the Minnesota retriever trial a few weeks ago, field trial champion Glenairlie Rocket, owned by Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Garlock, Barrington, and Gunnar II., the Chesapeake Bay retriever, which won national honors two years ago.

Mrs. Edwin N. Dodge, Wayzata, Minn., owner of King Midas, the Golden retriever that last fall won the first national championship retriever trial ever held in the United States, is one of the judges at this trial. She is the first retriever judge ever to officiate at a trial in the middle west. Mrs. Fletcher F. Garlock, Barrington, is president of the Midwest club and also chairman of the field trial committee, marking another first in retriever activity in the middle west for she is the first woman to be elected president of a retriever club.

MISSOURI BEATS COLORADO, 26-13; STEUBER STARS

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 3 (AP).—Missouri scored a 26 to 13 victory over Colorado today in a game so exciting few of the 4,000 spectators had time to sit down between plays.

Stan Hendrickson, Colorado left end, did a little scoring of his own off the Missouri T formation. He dashed thru the line, and literally stole the ball from Ervin Pitts who was attempting a toss off to Bob Steuber, and ran 74 yards to even the score.

Colorado set Missouri back to its own 20 with a punt into the end zone. O'Hara made 19, Jack Morton got a dozen more, then Steuber, running wide around the right side, suddenly skidded to a halt, reversed his field and sprinted 53 yards to score.

Missouri counted again in each of the last two periods.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 3 [Special]. —Michigan won its second straight game of the season this afternoon by outclassing Michigan State, 20 to 0.

Michigan scored all its touchdowns in the second half. In the opening half the Wolverines controled the ball most of the time, and drove into State territory often, once in the first quarter getting down to the 25 yard line, where a fumble by Paul White was recovered by the Spartans, and again in the second period to the State 15 where a 30 yard drive bogged down.

If there was a hero among the Wolverines, he was Don Robinson, the light, but hard charging junior back who started at left half. Robinson, the work horse of the Wolverine squad thruout the game, snapped Michigan out of its lethargy in the third quarter by leading a concentrated running attack and finally carrying the ball over from the 1 foot line for the initial Michigan touchdown. Jim Brieske, sophomore center, added the extra point.

Wardley Scores on Reverse.

Four minutes after Robinson plunged over with the first touchdown, Sophomore Frank Wardley, former all-State back from Joliet, Ill., added six more points on a 15 yard reverse. Brieske's try for the point was blocked.

Michigan added its last score in the final quarter and this time the show was taken completely over by the sophomore backs. After one drive had failed on the State 40 in the last quarter, Captain George Ceithaml paved the way for the final touchdown when he tackled Walt Pawlowski on the State 27 after Pawlowski had taken Elbert Stark's pass. Pawlowski was hit so hard he dropped the ball and Ceithaml pounced on it.

Sophomores Score Touchdown.

Then three sophomore backs, Don Lund at full, Bob Chappuis at left half, and Warren Yaap, former Oak Park High star, at right half, alternated to push over the touchdown in seven plays, Yaap taking the last 4 yards thru tackle standing up. Brieske came thru for the extra point again.

The expected aerial duel between Michigan's set of throwing stars, Chappuis, Robinson, and Cliff Wise, and the Spartans' throwing threat, Dick Kieppe, didn't come off today, mainly because the Wolverines found the State line more susceptible to touchdown drives than their pass defense.

Lund Is Standout Soph.

Don Boor, the full back who was slated as a starter till the recurrence of a knee injury downed him early in the season, broke into the lineup for the first time today, but both he and Bob Wiese, the starting full back, were somewhat overshadowed by the battering drives of Sophomore Don Lund in the last quarter. Lund took the ball seven times in the final period for a total of 35 yards.

The victory is Michigan's 28th in the series, which started in 1898. State has won six games, and three were ties. Today's victory is also the sixth straight for Michigan over its intrastate rival.

DUKE TRAMPLED BY WAKE FOREST IN 20 TO 7 UPSET

Blue Devils Outclassed by Underdog Rivals.

Wake Forest, N. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—Duke university's remnants of Rose bowl glory were trampled into the dust here today when an underdog Wake Forest outfit completely outclassed the favorites and won a Southern conference football game, 20 to 7, before a crowd of 7,010.

It was the first Deacon victory over the Blue Devils since 1926. The Deacons scored two touchdowns in the first period and added another in the second and then went on the defensive during the last half.

Scores on Long Run.

Red Cochran made 8 yards from the Duke 30 and then went around right for 12 more. Then Johnny Perry circled left end for the touchdown. Sacrinity converted.

Score After Blocked Kick.

Midway in the second period, Storer got a bad pass from center and Burnie Capps, Deacon end, blocked a kick, grabbed the ball on the run and was hauled down on the Duke 2. Full Back Russ Perry, Durham soph, smashed center for the touchdown. Sacrinity's place kick was good again.

The stage was set for Duke's score when Gordon Carver, Durham soph, punted to Johnny Perry who was tackled on the 20. Wake Forest was penalized 15 yards for holding, Russ Perry fumbled and Bob Nanni covered for Duke on the 2. Leo Long hit center for the touchdown. Bob Gantt's place kick was good.

DAILY TROUBLE WINS 1ST STAKE AT HAWTHORNE

Daily Trouble won his first stake victory of the Chicago season yesterday in the $5,000 added Hawthorne handicap at the Stickney course.

The winner moved up gradually from eighth position to second at the head of the stretch. There he engaged With Regards, and the pair battled it out down the stretch. It wasn't until the last stride that Daily Trouble got his nose in front to score by that narrow margin.

Daily Trouble, overlooked in the wagering, paid $25.80, $8.20, and $5 across the board. With Regards, who went to the post a 2 to 1 favorite, paid $4.40 to place and $3.80 to show. A length and a half behind With Regards was Best Seller, who nosed out the fast charging Take Wing for third. Best Seller paid $4.80 to show.

The time for the mile and a furlong race was 1:51 4-5 over a fast track.

Sunny Portress won the sixth race, the co-feature on the card. The 2 year old filly, with Apprentice Robert Fielding up, defeated Woodford Lad, winner of the $5,000 added Juvenile handicap last week.

Wins by Length and a Half.

The juvenile finished a length and a half in front of Be Brief, who, in turn, was a neck ahead of Bit of Nerve for place money. The winner paid $16.80 and covered the six furlongs in 1:12 4-5.

The fourth race, the extra event on the card, went for the Chicago Service Men's center, and the proceeds donated were $8,009.

A two-way pay-off resulted in the daily double when the first race ended in a dead heat between One Jest and Praetorian. The first paid $4.40 straight, while the latter returned $5.20.

Woolford farm's Legislator, making his initial start, won the second race. The winner led Galladon and Trust Buster across the line and paid $5 straight.

The combination of One Jest and Legislator in the double was worth $21.40, while Praetorian and Legislator returned $16.80.

Soccer Teams to Play Today for USO Fund

BY OFFSIDE.

The International Soccer league will make its contribution to the United Service organization today with two soccer games and a track and field program in Lane Tech stadium.

The soccer portion of the day's events has the Spartas opposing the Vikings in the feature match and the Slovaks and Kickers meeting in the first game at 1 o'clock. A parade of athletes will precede the contest. Between games an Olympic relay race, with eight of the fastest soccer players entered, and a boys' soccer game will be held.

Vikings Sign McDermott.

The Spartas, undefeated in three games this season, will have their strongest team on the field. The Vikings, still experimenting, have signed Jimmy McDermott, former Sparta star, and will have Ernie Kuehl back in the lineup.

The Slovaks, who won the state championship last season, have lost several stars to the service and will lose Ted Doubek and Smitty Tomecek soon, but they will present a formidable lineup against the Kickers who will be seeking their first victory. To speed up the games, the league again will use the two referee system, Maurice Korer and Jack Maher in the opener and Robert Jones and Fred Klotz in the second.

STARS OF TENNIS WORLD PLAY FOR RED CROSS TODAY

Hardwick and Little on Benefit Program.

Chicago tennis fans will have their last opportunity of the season to witness three of the world's outstanding stars in action and at the same time contribute to the Red Cross, this afternoon at the Chicago Town and Tennis club.

Mrs. Dorothy Round Little of Great Britain, former world singles champion, and Ruth Mary Hardwick, who lost to Helen Wills Moody in the Wimbledon finals in 1933, are paired in the feature match which is second on the program.

Hare to Play Jimmy Evert.

Charles E. [Bunny] Hare of Great Britain, former Davis cup player, and Jimmy Evert, former national boys' champion, now a freshman at Notre Dame, will meet in a match which opens the show. The final will be a mixed doubles engagement involving Mrs. Little, Miss Hardwick, Bobby Riggs, generally recognized as the nation's outstanding singles player, and George O'Connell, former University of Chicago star, who now is professional at the Town and Tennis club.

The same price — $1.10, including tax—prevails for all seats and the public is invited. Starting time of the first match is 3 p. m.

Mrs. Little, who was known as Dorothy Round thru most of her triumphs, has been a consistent winner since she decided to enter her first tournament at Pwllheli, Wales, at the age of 16. She played at Wimbledon in the All-England tournament in 1929, but it was not until 1931 that she achieved her first major triumph. That was a conquest of Señorita D'Alvarez, the Spanish champion. Soon after that Miss Round was named to the British Wightman cup team. During the next two years she was a member of several British International teams, which defeated Germany, France, and the British West Indies.

Defeated Helen Jacobs.

Her outstanding achievement, of course, occurred in 1934, when she defeated Helen Jacobs in the Wimbledon finals to become the world's No. 1 feminine star.

In 1935 she visited the United States again, representing her home land in the Wightman cup matches. Her victims this time included Miss Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey.

Riggs, who turned professional last fall after eliminating all opposition in the amateur ranks, has been uniformly successful in the money ranks. At present he is professional at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

All of the stars competing today are donating their services.

NORTH CENTRAL TOPS KALAMAZOO IN LAST MINUTE

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 3 [Special].—Kalamazoo college lost to North Central tonight by a 12 to 6 score.

In the first quarter, Bob Reed, Kalamazoo half back, scored from the 2 yard mark, but a penalty was called and the score nullified.

In the second quarter a long pass put North Central on the Hornet's 14 and Don Jacobs went the rest of the way for a touchdown. In the fourth quarter Barley blocked a Cardinal punt and recovered on the North Central 23, and then Kalamazoo drove to a touchdown. Dan Bowman's kick was blocked. North Central started a 65 yard march on the next kick-off to score with Joe Sciuto going the final 8 yards in the last minute of the game.

FEWER MAN DAYS OF HUNTING THIS FALL PREDICTED

War Will Have Little Effect Otherwise.

BY BOB BECKER.

There has been much discussion among conservation directors and outdoorsmen about the effects that the World War II. will have on our wild game resources. For months the conservationists have been digging into this subject, and at the same time older sportsmen who, because of their age are not doing any shooting for Uncle Sam, continue to talk about the effects of the war on waterfowl and upland game hunting.

The fish and wildlife service [department of the interior] has been doing considerable research on how the war may affect our wild life resources. Some of their deductions are not only pertinent but interesting as the 1942 hunting season gets under way. A general survey of many of the factors involved in the current hunting season is as follows:

Fewer Man Days of Hunting.

One fish and wildlife service authority has said that the number of people who will seek recreation in the outdoors [fishermen and hunters especially] this year is not going to be materially less than in 1941, altho there will be fewer man days of hunting this fall than last year due to conditions affecting transportation.

Sportsmen are up against shotgun shell rationing. This has been self-imposed by some stores to prevent hoarding of shells. [The system was instituted in Chicago some time ago.] Are hunters using ammunition that might be of use to our armed forces? Is this the time to let all wild life increase without any interference? The government answers these questions in this way: What is good game management in times of peace is also good game management in times of war. Says W. E. Crouch, chief of game management of the fish and wildlife service: "Wildlife plays an important part in peacetime recreation and should play an important part in our wartime recreation. Under war conditions recreation is extremely important in keeping up the national morale. Furthermore, good game management includes the wide harvest of a game crop that is renewable from year to year, providing breeding stock is retained."

Economic Value of Game.

This department pointed out several weeks ago that we can hardly overlook the economic value of the wild game meat which can be harvested legally this fall, [in keeping with open seasons] by American sportsmen. W. E. Crouch, chief of game mangement of the fish and wildlife service, said earlier in the year that a minimum of 135,000,000 pounds of wild game meat from small and big animals and birds, and 300,000,00 pounds of edible game fish [taken by rod and reel], could be harvested before the end of the year to make a total of 435,000,000 pounds of food made available from our wildlife resources.

SANTA CLARA IS 14 TO 6 WINNER OVER STANFORD

Al Beals Scores Twice on Passes.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 3 (AP).—Two swift passes, two flashing runs, and Santa Clara's Broncos took a 14 to 6 victory over Stanford today, before 35,000 fans.

The first touchdown play resulted from a 19 yard pass and a 40 yard run by Al Beals. In the final period Jesse Freitas whipped the ball 16 yards and his receiver dashed 12 more. Al Santucci, place kicking center, went back each time to add the extra point.

The Indians scored their touchdown in the final period, after being 14 points behind. Randall Fawcett, full back, raced around right end for 35 yards to score. Lineups:

WASHINGTON STATE WINS, 7-0.

Pullman, Wash., Oct. 3 (AP).—Washington State loosed one scoring charge today for 42 yards and a second quarter touchdown that brought a 7 to 0 victory over the University of Oregon. A crowd of 6,000, smallest in a decade for a local homecoming, watched the Cougars post their second Pacific coast local conference triumph of the season.

After an exchange of kicks that ended with Jay Stoves returning an Oregon punt 14 yards to the visitors' 28, State lugged the ball thru and around the big Oregon front wall to the goal, with Kennedy doing most of the work and going the last eight yards in three plunges. Frank Londos went in at full back to place kick the point.

Corvallis, Ore., Oct. 3 (AP).—Oregon State's Rose Bowl and Pacific Coast conference football champions defeated the University of California, 13 to 8, today on Half Back Everett Smith's half-yard plunge to a touchdown in the last 10 seconds.

California grabbed a 2 to 0 lead in the first period on a safety as Bill McInnis fell on a loose ball after a wild pass from center behind the Beaver goal.

Oregon State came back in the second quarter with Joe Day sparking a running attack for 74 yards and driving across for a touchdown to make it 6 to 2.

Oregon State drew a penalty for pass interference and it was a first down for California on the 1 yard line. On the first play, Steve Pickett swept left end and went across standing up.

WASHINGTON, TROJANS TIE.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 3 (AP).—The University of California, substituting speed and deception for its old time power, battled Washington to a 0 to 0 tie today. A crowd of 26,000 saw Washington drive five times inside the Trojan 15 yard line, but always fall short of first down.

U. S. C. threw the biggest scare into Washington supporters with the deception of its quick cutting back in motion in the game's opening minutes. Three consecutive first downs carried the Trojans 46 yards to the husky 34, but a quarter back sneak, with 6 yards to go for a first down, failed.

Washington opened its first drive just before the first period ended—a 62 yard march that carried to the U. S. C. 4. There Half Back Bob Erickson lacked a yard of making it a first down.

Of five scoring chances, Washington got two on recovered fumbles and two on pass interceptions deep in Trojan territory.

ST. NORBERT IS DEFEATED, 2-0, BY MINNESOTANS

De Pere, Wis., Oct. 3 [Special].—St. Norbert college football team lost the opening game of its season here today to Gustavus Adolphus of Minnesota, 2 to 0.

Gustavus Adolphus got its score on a safety midway in the second quarter, when Half Back Ed Feser of St. Norbert was tackled in his own end zone by Harold Swanson, Gustavus center.

Only other serious threat was by the Gusties in the third quarter when a blocked St. Norbert punt rolled out of bounds on the 5 yard line.

the good, one of the Notre Dame punts being partially blocked. After another kicking swap the southern lads were up to Notre Dame's 38 yard line and it wasn't long before the Irish appreciated that the Engineers really were in earnest.

They got up to the 38 yard mark because Castleberry, carrying a Bertelli punt, skipped thru the Irish for 23 yards before being pitched out of bounds. The thing grew serious when Eddie Prokop sailed a pass to Pat McHugh, who wormed his way toward the sidelines and wasn't trapped until a pair of Irish defenders gave him the shoulder on the 5. The Georgians elected to go the remainder of the distance via air but the transportation proved poor. Prokop passed and Herb Coleman slapped it down. A second pass went wild. Then Bob Sheldon replaced Prokop and cut loose with a pitch but Bertelli intercepted it and was nailed on the 2 as the period ended.

Notre Dame Stops on 10.

The Irish started to roll again with the opening of the third quarter. With the help of Bertelli passes to Murphy and Tom Miller, they worked the kickoff down the field only to be stopped on Tech's 10 where Manning intercepted a Bertelli pitch. Tech immediately touched off another bomb. Luck sprinted from a punt formation for 30 yards, but this threat finally vanished with a pun, only to have it revived a few minutes later by the Mello fumble on which the Georgians cut themselves their first touchdown dividend.

The Mello error was grabbed by Harvey Hardy on the Irish 28. Rabbit Jordon on an end around maneuver baffled the Irish for 9 yards. McHugh hit 'em for a first down on the 14. Prokop's pass was tipped by Coleman, giving the toss enough extra height to carry it into the hands of McHugh, who was flattened one foot from the Notre Dame goal. On the next play, Plaster plunged over and then kicked the point for a 7 to 0 Tech lead. By the time the period ended the Georgians were back on the Irish 24 yard line, ready for their second thrust.

1 Minute, 50 Seconds Later.

The second touchdown was a matter of only one minute and 50 seconds. McHugh burst thru for 15 yards. In another end around Marshall picked up 3 and Castleberry heaved a pass to McHugh in the end zone. Plaster's placement went astray.

The Irish bounced back quickly from this bolt. With the Miller brothers, Tom and Creighton, carrying the load, Notre Dame went from its 27 yard line to 15 yards from the enemy goal. Tom Miller paced off the remaining 15 yards with a dash over Tech's right end. Bertelli missed in his attempt for the extra point. The Irish proved they weren't quite thru. They touched off another assault and reached Tech's 43 yard line. Then Bertelli let go with one of those desperately long passes. George Manning intercepted it and pretty soon the clock ran out of minutes.

took charge himself. He pulled clear from four Seahawks, who apparently had him cornered along the north sideline. Then Daley struck out down the sideline for 20 yards, cut sharply across the field and headed on an angle for the goal line.

Mal Kutner Ends Romp.

A rapidly formed barrier of blockers escorted Daley across the gridiron but he was on his way at the enemy 30 yard line. Only one man, Mal Kutner, sprint star from the University of Texas, playing at right end, had any chance to get Daley. Kutner had been in the mèlée when Daley had broken loose behind the line of scrimmage.

Now he again was in position because of Daley's reverse in midfield.

The winning touchdown, so it seemed, merely was postponed for no one doubted but that the Gophers, who had steadily hammered the Seahawks line for short gains, would fail of gaining one yard. But the Cadets went into a seven man line, and Haman's headlong charge caught Kulbitski before he reached the scrimmage line. The ball dropped under Haman as he fell.

Kutner Blocked Kick.

Kutner not only gets credit by saving the game, with an assist to Haman, of course, but he actually won it in the first period when he blocked Minnesota's try for the point after touchdown. Again it was Kutner's amazing speed that confused the Gopher defense.

He sprinted from the right flank as the ball was grounded for the placement and swept past the blocker and into the path of the ball as Kulbitski kicked.

The game was played on a slick field which afforded imperfect footing and definitely handicapped passers. Altho the Gophers attempted 18 passes and used a trio of throwers, only three passes were completed. Minnesota's famed power was apparent thruout, but the Gophers, while piling up 13 first downs to 9 for the Seahawks, never linked as many together as did their rivals.

Daley Offensive Star.

Daley established himself as the offensive star of the game before his final bid for victory, for he got the Minnesota touchdown. Daley went 55 yards for the score.

On this run Daley had advantage of excellent deception to get into the clear and his straight away sprint could be defended against only by one side of the Seahawks' secondary.

The play started with Kulbitski taking the ball on a direct pass from center and plunging at the line. Kulbitski handed the ball to Quarter Back Bob Sandberg as he went by and Sandberg immediately lateraled to Daley, who was racing wide toward the right flank of the Seahawk line. Daley turned the end and was into the secondary before the defenders spotted the ball.

Fisher Key Man for Seahawks.

Dick Fisher, who played last fall for Ohio State, returned a punt 33 yards for the touchdown that became a victory by addition of Gage's placement. Without detracting from Fisher's run [he was the most agile of all the Seahawks] the opportunity was set up by a mental lapse on the part of Herman Frickey, the Gophers' safety.

Minnesota had stopped the Seahawk attack, which had carried to the Gopher 40 yard line, and on fourth down Fisher kicked. Frickey caught the ball on Minnesota's 2 yard line with both Seahawks' ends covering and he was thrown immediately. Obviously the kick would have gone into the end zone for a touchback and Minnesota would have had possession of the ball on its 20 yard line.

The Seahawks' one point lead dictated their defensive play in the second half but it is a matter of record that the service men only accomplished one first down in the 30 minutes. By today's victory the Seahawks now have won three games. Minnesota previously had beaten Pittsburgh for its 18th consecutive triumph.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Oct. 3 (AP).—Alabama knocked off Mississippi State's Southeastern conference crown today and kicked it all around Denny Stadium, scoring all its points in the third quarter to win, 21 to 6, before 18,000 fans.

State's powerful team, a preseason favorite to retain its title, held Alabama scoreless for the first half, but it crumbled under sledge hammer blows of Russ Craft, Russ Mosley, and Dom Salls in the third period. Craft scored three touchdowns, twice off left tackle and the third time on a spectacular 38 yard gallop.

A home town boy, Kermit Davis, of Tuscaloosa, kept State from the ignominy or a shutout. In the last quarter he snatched a desperate 29 yard pass from Substitute Tail Back Billy Murphy, and ran 15 more yards to score.

AUBURN, 27; TULANE, 13.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 3 (AP).—A great Auburn team ripped the glitter off Tulane today, forced the Green Wave into constant goal line defense, and wound up victor, 27 to 13, before 30,000 spectators.

Auburn took over in the second period on the wave 30 from where Reynolds and Clayton smashed Tulane's ragged line and Reynolds went over. Tulane came back fast when Grush took a 38 yard pass from Thomas to Auburn's 29. A tricky passing play, a forward from Pracko to Thomas, then a lateral from Thomas to Grush, was the payoff, Grush scoring from the Auburn 15.

In the third period Auburn blocked Brignac's kick and took over on the Tulane 12. On the third play, Clayton slammed over six yards for the touchdown. Tulane hit back from the air with a 19 yard pass from Pracko to Thomas which coasted to the Auburn 35. Grush, Ely, and Pracko finally worked it over. Auburn shifted to the air in the fourth as Gafford pitched a 24 yard shot to Clayton to score.

Auburn's final score came after an interception on Tulane's 41 and Irby plugged thru on a series of thrusts to the two, then sliced over center for the touchdown.

POWERFUL PENN VETERANS DOWN HARVARD, 19 TO 7

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 3 (AP).—Pennsylvania's powerful veterans took full advantage of three early miscues to clinch a 19 to 7 victory over their inexperienced Harvard rivals before being penalized for a total of 110 yards today before a crowd of 15,000 at the stadium.

The first Penn touchdown was set up when Dick Martin, its blocking back, recovered Don Richard's fumble on Harvard's 7 yard line on the 10th play after the Quakers received the opening kickoff. They had to take four slams at the Crimson line before scoring and Capt. Bernie Kuczynski converted his only extra point out of three tries.

Stiff Batters Thru Line.

Two plays after the resulting kickoff, which Richards caught on his goal line and carried out 15 yards, Wayne Johnson, full back, made a dobble that Kuczynski smothered on Harvard's 22. Smashing 5 yards at a clip, Bert Stiff, in four plays, made first down and then broke thru for his second touchdown.

Before Coach Dick Harlow's unseasoned youngsters had time to recover from those punishing blows, Lee Pietz, who alternated with Bob Odell, brother of Yale's new head coach, at tailback, set the stage for the third Penn scoring jaunt by snagging a Bill Wilson pass in midfield and returning it to Harvard's 3. Stiff then made 8 yards, passed to the Quaker captain to wipe out 14 more, and then had Miller finish the rest of the trip, by rushing twice from the 10 yard line.

Score in Last Minute.

The Harvards managed to run and pass to Penn's 15 and 25 yard lines in the final period before Comeford tossed Georgia Boston, a freshman end replacement, a touchdown pass from Penn's 25 yard stripe during the last minute of play. After Bill Barnes placekicked Harvard's seventh point, Jerry McCarthy, in for Martin, ended the game by racing 33 yards with Barnes' kickoff.

NAVY WINS, 35-0.

Gordon Studer and Hillis Hume stole the show in the first and third periods to pace the sailors' attack, altho Comm. John Whelchel, the navy coach, threw a stream of reserves into action in the closing period. An estimated 15,000 persons watched the game.

Studer was the spearhead of the first rapid touchdown drive that began on Navy's 27. The next score came quickly after Hume intercepted a Virginia pass on his 41 on a toss by Studer to Gene Goudie who raced 30 yards. Studer and Hume drive 69 yards for a score in the third period, in three consecutive plays.

Two minutes later Hume scored again in one play after Navy recovered George Grimes' fumble on the Virginia 17. Hardy Fowler intercepted a Cavalier pass and sped 65 yards for the final Middy touchdown in the fourth. Crepeau converted from placement after each score.

PENN STATE TRIUMPHS.

State College, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP).—A 79 yard touchdown run by Earl Brown in the third period gave Penn State a 14 to 7 triumph over Bucknell before 10,000 today. Bucknell scored in the first period on Chet Podd's 19 yard pass. Penn State tide it in the second on Larry Joe's 15 yard end run.

COLUMBIA SMOTHERS MAINE.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—With Paul Governali unloading passes from every point on the field, Columbia smothered Maine, 34 to 2, today before a crowd of 12,000. Governali personally scored Columbia's first touchdown on the third play of the second quarter. Then he hurled a 40 yard pass to Ken Germann, who sped 30 yards more for the second touchdown.

Governali aimed next at Bruce Gehrke, who speared a 40 yard heave on the 30 and was forced out of bounds on the Maine 4. Governali lobbed another to Germann in the end zone for another score. Leno Ferrarini converted his third straight point.

A 27 yard pass by Governali early in the third was followed by a 21 yard touchdown gallop by Germann, and in the fourth, Don Kaspazak passed 48 yards to Otto Apel for the final Columbia score.

NAVY PLEBES WIN.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 3 (AP).—Navy's plebe football team, undefeated in three years, opened the 1942 season with a 27 to 0 victory over the Temple university frosh today.

Pitt Panthers Beat Southern Methodist, 20-7

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP)—Pitt's Panthers, flashing the old Pitt power at times, surprised even Panther partisans by trouncing Southern Methodist 20 to 7 today before a crowd of 15,000. Sparked by Bill Dutton, a half back from Weston, W. Va., the Panthers took the play from the favored Mustangs almost completely as they snapped back from a humiliating defeat by Minnesota last week. They scored in the first three minutes and clinched the decision with two touchdowns in the third quarter.

Pitt kept the Mustangs' famed Flying Circus pretty well grounded, except in the closing period when Full Back Howard Maley shot a 49 yard pass to Half Back Jack Moncrief on the Pitt 5 to set up the Texans' only score. Another pass from Half Back Wayne Shaw to End Kelly Simpson, produced the touchdown.

Drive 93 Yards for Score.

The Panthers thrilled the fans with a 93 yard touchdown drive as the game opened. Quarter Back Walt West ran the kickoff 57 yards to the SMU 36. Dutton and Full Back Frank Saksa punched it to the 5 and Dutton went over.

With Dutton racing off tackle for long gains, the Panthers drove 50 yards in the second period to the SMU 1 yard line, but they lost the ball on Dutton's fumble. Opening up an overhead game of their own in the third quarter, the Panthers scored on Dutton's 15 yard toss to Saksa. Then Half Back Tony DiMatteo carried the ball 28 yards in three plays for the Panthers' final touchdown.

Pitt's Margin Decisive.

Pitt made 17 first downs to 7 for the Mustangs, and rolled up 243 yards rushing against 52. SMU completed 11 of 27 passes for 167 yards. Pitt tried only eight aerials, connecting on five for 81 yards. The Mustangs several times checked Pitt with long punts, averaging 55 yards on their kicks. Lineups:

YALE BEATS LEHIGH.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 3 (AP).—Yale walloped Lehigh's football team, 33 to 6, in their first meeting in 26 years today in the Bowl before 10,000 fans by unleashing a four touchdown attack in the final half.

In winning its opener for its new coach, 31 year old Howie O'Dell, Yale rolled up its highest score since 1935. Altho he didn't tally himself, Hugh Knowlton showed a talented pitching army that connected for three of Yale's scores. A 27 yard dash by Ed Taylor of Columbia, S. C., and a 26 yard run by Will Overlock of River Forest, Ill., on an intercepted pass accounted for the victors' other touchdowns.

Herb Shoener of Maplewood, N. J., bulled his way thru the Yale line to account for Lehigh's only score in the second session.

DARTMOUTH SWAMPS MIAMI.

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 3 (AP).—Dartmouth uncovered a group of promising freshman backs today as the Big Green swamped a completely outclassed Miami eleven, 58 to 7, before a crowd of 5,000.

With the exception of a 70 yard touchdown dash by veteran Ray Wolfe, in the third period, the freshman backs, Jack Sayers, Dale Armstrong, and Larry Bartnick, provided the chief thrills. McLaughrey used his first team for 12 minutes in the opening quarter and in that time Tom Douglas tallied from Miami's 8, Capt. Bud Kast on a 38 yard run, and Meryll Frost on a 24 yard end sweep.

The reserves took over in the second quarter when John Roberts scored on a 20 yard run, to end a 76 yard touchdown march.

WILLIAMS TRIMS TIGERS.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 3 (AP).—Half Back Gunnar Hayes sparked Williams to its first victory in history over Princeton, 19 to 6, in Palmer stadium this afternoon as he returned a punt 59 yards for one touchdown and passed 56 yards to Pat Higigns for another in a second half rally.

TENNESSEE ROUTS FORDHAM, 40-14, BY AIR AND LAND

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 3 (AP).—Tennesee throttled Fordham's passing attack and substituted their own, plus some neat running today to rout the Rams, 40 to 14, before 22,000 spectators.

The Rams' Steve Filipowicz, passing ace extra-ordinary, put Fordham out in front in less than three minutes after the battle opened by intercepting Bobby Cifers' pass and racing 48 yards unmolested to score. Sammy Ososki converted to end the easterners' scoring until the final minute.

Game Is All Tennessee.

Tennessee's first drive carried 68 yards but an off side penalty nullified a touchdown, which Cifers punched over from the one. The Vols, held to a scoreless deadlock by South Carolina in their inaugural, came roaring back to smash over two touchdowns each in the next three stanzas.

The first came after a vicious 47 yard drive, Walter Slater of Providence, R. I., knifing over after working the ball down to the 1 with passes and runs by Sophomore Clyde Fuson.

The cheers had hardly died down from this first score before Tennessee blasted right back for another, Slater passing to End Bill Hubbell on the Rams' 19 and he raced on untouched for the touchdown.

Two More Rapid Scores.

Tennessee punched across two more touchdowns in rapid succession in the third period, Bobby Cifers flipping a 20 yard pass to Bill Hillman for one, and Red Zontini dashing 15 yards off tackle for the other.

Ending their scoring in the final quarter, the Vols registered on a 15 yard sprint by a fourth string tailback, and a 35 yard pass from Junie Whittaker to Zontini.

The Rams, hopelessly outclassed, never seriously threatened from the time Filipoicz ran back Cifer's pass for a touchdown, until the fading minutes of the game. Combining some nifty running by Joseph [Sammy] Andrejco with short passes, the Rams marched 80 yards with Harry Squatrito plunging over from the 1.

TEXAS AGGIES WIN, 19-0.

College Station, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP).—The Texas Aggies, beaten last week by Louisiana State, surged back today with a three touchdown attack in the first half to defeat Texas Tech, 19 to 0.

Leo Daniels scored after two minutes of play when he ran back a punt for 55 yards behind fine blocking by Bill Henderson and Felix Bucek. In the second period the Aggies started a march from their own 36 yard line —that finally paid off with a 6 yard pass from Daniels to Willie Zapalac.

TCU, 13; ARKANSAS, 6.

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP).—Emery Nix pulled another game out of the fire today for Texas Christian university, running and passing to a fourth quarter touchdown that gave the Horned Frogs a 13 to 6 victory over Arkansas in the Southwest conference football opener.

With four and one half minutes to go, Nix led a TCU march from the 15. First he sent John Bond thru for 3 and Don Ezell for 3 more. Then he passed to Bond for a first down on the TCU 30. Then he passed to Bob McCollum for 8 and smashed thru center to the Arkansas 44. Then passed to Bruce Alford in the corner of the field. Alford took it without breaking stride and sped across for the winning touchdown.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 3 [Special].—Illinois overwhelmed Butler, 67 to 0, today to establish a new scoring record for Memorial stadium. The highest previous score was made against another Butler team, which was defeated, 58 to 0, by the 1927 Illini champions.

Butler proved a stronger team than the University of South Dakota, which was defeated, 46 to 0, last week, but the Illini showed improvement and more power. In the air, however, they were not so impressive, completing only two throws out of nine attempts.

Art Dufelmeier, a long legged 6 foot sophomore half back from Beardstown, Ill., made his bow to fame by two spectacular runs for touchdowns from scrimmage in the closing minutes of the first half. The first was for 32 yards and the other for 28. Dufelmeier twisted, dodged, and used his hips to advantage as he sped around the Butler left side.

Griffin Starts Parade.

After Capt. Jimmy Smith lateraled to Don Griffin for the first touchdown after four minutes play the Illini swept to six touchdowns in the first half, which finished with a 40 point total.

The undaunted Bulldogs came back scrapping in the third quarter in which they made three consecutive first downs, one on a penalty, and penetrated to the Illinois 44 yard line. Big Tom Sleet, Negro full back, led this solitary foray, the only time the Bulldogs were in Illinois territory.

Coach Ray Eliot used 43 Illinois players. A crowd of 10,000, including Boy and Girl Scouts, attended.

Griffin carried the ball 13 times for one hundred and thirty yards, an average of ten on each try. Dufelmeier carried it five times for seventy-five, an average of fifteen. Butkovich gained sixty-five on five tries, an average of 13.

Nine Plays to Score.

Illinois required nine plays to score its first touchdown. With the ball on Butler's 28 yard line as a result of four straight first downs, Smith broke over center and ran to the 5 yard line, where he lateraled to Griffin who went over.

Then Griffin and Smith sparked a sixty-six yard drive, which Griffin capped with a twenty-four yard touchdown run around his own right end.

Tony Butkovich scored the third touchdown on a two yard plunge after 2½ minutes of the second quarter had elapsed. MacWenskunas, sophomore center, recovered a Butler fumble deep in Butler territory to set up the score.

Two short punts by Tanner gave Illinois its next opportunity. With the ball on the Butler 31, Dufelmeier skirted his own right end and cut back thru the Bulldog secondary behind good blocking.

Makes 27 Yard Score.

Taking the ball on downs on the Butler 27, Illinois registered its sixth touchdown on its first play from scrimmage when Dufelmeier again circled his own right end.

Griffin dashed 52 yards for the seventh touchdown early in the third period, after the Illini had stopped the sole Butler drive.

At the outset of the fourth quarter, MacArthur, reserve center, intercepted a pass by Mingle and ran to the Bulldog 49 to set up the next score. On the next play, Butkovich broke loose around his own right end and ran to the Butler 36, where he lateraled to Good who went over.

McCarthy scored the ninth touchdown, taking a pass from Good. McCarthy had set up the score on the previous play, intercepting a Butler pass on the Bulldog 35 and carrying the ball to the 33.

Astroth Spears One.

A fourth down pass from Dufelmeier to Astroth provided the 10th score. With the ball on the Butler 28, where the Bulldogs had lost it on downs, Dufelmeier threw a 5 yard toss to Astroth, who twisted down the sidelines and scored standing up.

Steve DeWald, Butler half back, fumbles in first quarter of game with Illinois in Champaign. The ball appears to be resting on head of Illinois' Jim McCarthy, an end. Mac Wenskunas, Illini center, recovered it. Illinois set a scoring record for Memorial stadium in routing the Bulldogs. The previous high was against another Butler team, 58 to 0, made in 1927.

urely trotted off to the right behind strong protection as the play developed. Far down the field Dave Schreiner, the Badger right end, was dashing into the clear. Wink flung the ball and Schreiner speared it on the Marquette 40 yard line at the instant he had drawn free of the last of the Hilltoppers' secondary defense and galloped on to the goal.

Scores Twice on Passes.

Twice again within the next few minutes Schreiner took passes for touchdowns. The approach to the first of these was made by two brilliant runs, one by Pat Harder and the other by Mark Hoskins. Starting on his own 38 yard line, Harder swung around end 18 yards to the Marquette 44. Then Hoskins cut off tackle, twisted clear of several opponents and finally got to the 12 yard line. On the next play Harder passed to Schreiner in the end zone.

Schreiner's third touchdown came after another half dozen plays. Taking the ball from scrimmage on his own 37 yard line, Harder charged to the Marquette 32 on a gallop of 31 yards. Then Wink threw another long pass to Schreiner, who caught it near the goal and raced over.

Schreiner also figured prominently in the advance for the fourth touchdown of this last drive. Ashley Anderson whipped him a pass which he pulled down on the Marquette 28 yard line for a gain of 24 yards. Ray advanced to the 19 on two cracks. Then Elroy Hirsch came through with one of his hard, shifty sprints off tackle for a touchdown.

Fumble Leads to Score.

Trailing 28 to 0 in the third quarter, Marquette got its only touchdown after advancing from midfield, where a Badger fumble had been recovered. The Hilltoppers worked their way to the 27 yard line with the aid of some running plays by John Strykalski and a pass by the same boy to John Harrington. Then Strzykalski threw one to Alois Vogt, who was downed on the 3 yard line. From there Strzykalski plunged for the touchdown.

The Badgers' last score occurred in the third quarter. With the ball on the Marquette 42 yard line, Hirsch sent a long pass to Bob Hanzlik.

Ohio State Finds Indiana Tough, but Wins, 32 to 21

Hoosiers made their final thrust for a 21 to 19 advantage shortly after, but the Ohioans came back to smash over two last quarter touchdowns for their ultimate margin.

For all the snugness of the scoring it was obvious that Ohio State may well have the same sort of team which finished in the first division of the conference last season. Today the Buckeyes came up with Bill Willis, a sophomore Negro end, who turned in an all around job, and a batch of gifted backs in Gene Fekete, Les Horvath, Tommy James, Capt. George Lynn, and Paul Sarringhaus.

Hillenbrand Sparkles.

The customers who came today to look at a Hoosier wearing the numerals "44" weren't disappointed by its bearer for Willie Hillenbrand again kept his record of consistently fine football clear by scoring the first Indiana touchdown on a 54 yard break out of a fake reverse and passing eight yards to Lou Saban, 195 pound full back from LaGrange, Ill., for the third Hoosier score.

It looked as tho Saban's accuracy at extra point kicking would save the day for his team at the 21 to 19 juncture, but Fekete, who also sports number "44," redeemed his two placement failures by scoring the deciding touchdown, his third of this strange afternoon.

The statistics were sufficiently on the Ohio State side to give the Buckeyes a 2 to 1 edge.

Fumble Sets Up Score.

An Indiana fumble shortly after the opening kickoff led to the first Buckeye touchdown. Willis recovered for Ohio on the Buckeye 43 yard line. Then Fekete and Sarringhaus picked up 8 and 14 yards respectively, Fekete and Sarringhaus, with considerable help from Horvath, drove to the 4 yard line, and then the latter broke around his own right end for the first touchdown. Fekete missed the point.

Fekete, an explosive type of ball carrier, led a second quarter march to another touchdown, plowing one yard over center after a pass from Sarringhaus to Right End Bob Shaw in the end zone had been ruled complete after interference by Chuck Jacoby, former St. Ignatius of Chicago star. The Hoosiers made it 13 to 7 on the aforesaid 54 yard romp by Hillenbrand after 22 minutes of play in the first half, Saban added the point.

Indiana went to the front in the first minute of the second half, after Earl Dolaway and Bobby Cowan had collaborated on a reverse which led to a 46 yard dash by the latter. Fekete climaxed a drive powered by Junior Right Half Back George Frye by clicking off 45 yards from a reverse. Gene missed the kick, but the frantic Buckeye rooters were satisfied with the 19 to 14 margin until Hillenbrand flipped his touchdown pass to Saban.

Fekete, Sarringhaus, and James paced a third period parade which culminated in the third minute of the last quarter with Fekete punching the weary Indiana line for a touchdown from 2 yards out. This time, Gene made good on the kick and the Buckeyes led, 26 to 21. With 8 minutes of play remaining, Capt. Lynn, whose blocking play thruout the day was excellent, intercepted a Hillenbrand pass on the Indiana 29 yard line. Fekete got 2, and then Horvath broke into the clear before Hillenbrand detained him at the Indiana 19 yard line. A reverse from Lynn to Horvath brought the ball to the 1 foot line, only a diving tackle by Hillenbrand preventing a clean touchdown and Lynn sifted thru a quarter back sneak for the touchdown. Fekete missed the point.

4th Quarter Drive Brings Rice Triumph

Houston, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP).—The Rice Owls firmly established their bid for national football recognition today with a 27 to 14 victory over Louisiana State before 20,000 spectators.

Just when the crowd was reconciled to a 14 to 14 tie midway in the fourth quarter, Rice opened up. Virgil Eikenberg, sophomore tail back, completed a pass to Williams, an end, on the LSU 46. Don Stephens tore thru a hole in center for 20 yards, then hit the same spot for 10 more. Eikenberg then threw to Lindsey Bowen for a touchdown. Bowen's kick was blocked.

Gets Touchdown for Insurance.

A few minutes later Rice took over on downs on the LSU 25. Eikenberg ran around right end and after taking a lateral to the 10, Full Back Dick Dwelle hit center for 8. Then Eikenberg went over. Bowen converted to make the score 27 to 14.

Shortly after the opening kickoff Rice showed it meant business, rolling 61 yards for the first touchdown. The payoff came when Dwelle lateralled to Dickson on the LSU 10 for a touchdown. Bowen converted.

LSU Never Got Ahead.

LSU, stunned and determined, got the ball on Rice's 30. Full Back Walter Gorinski from Mutual, Pa., advanced to the 9. Harris circled right end for a touchdown, then converted to make it 7 to 7.

The Tigers tied the score again early in the fourth when Alvin Dark, a sophomore passer, shot three aerials that advanced deep into Rice territory. Gorinski went over from the 2 and Harris converted to tie the score 14 to 14. Lineups:

Tom Farmer tried his passing arm, throwing most of the nine attempts made by the Hawkeyes. He completed only three and had three intercepted, one at a time when Iowa appeared to be on the move in the opening quarter. A later interception set up the Bluejackets' final touchdown. A slippery ball and slippery footing made use of the pass dangerous. Great Lakes tried just five and completed none.

Ends Hawkeye Threat.

Iowa reached Great Lakes' 37 yard line on a 17 yard pass over center from Farmer to Sam Vacanti in the opening period, but Smith intercepted Farmer's next try on his 10 and removed that Hawkeye threat.

Late in the second quarter the sailors started their first drive, with Kmetovic taking Farmer's punt on his own 47 yard line. Sweiger and McCullough moved the ball to the Iowa 39 in two plays, then combined their talents to add first downs on the 26 and 14 yard stripes. McCullough was stopped on three plays, then Smith came into the game with less than a minute to play and attempted to pass to McCullough on the 2 yard stripe. Interference by Del Dickerhoof, Iowa game captain, was ruled, and on the next play Popov went over. The try for extra point failed.

Iowa failed to gain after taking the third period kickoff and punted. Smith fumbled and Uknes recovered on the Great Lakes 44. Gust Zarnas broke thru to tackle Farmer for a 12 yard loss on the first play and two plays later Uknes fumbled and Bill Radovich recovered for the sailors on the Iowa 44. Smith made 3 yards, Sweiger, 6, then Sweiger a first down on the 32. Sweiger then faked a pass to Smith and spun thru to the 16. Five plays later Sweiger burrowed thru from the 2½ yard stripe. Rudy Mucha kicked the extra point to make the score 13 to 0.

McCullough Goes Over.

Early in the final period Hoerner started a dash thru the sailor line near midfield and the ball spurted from his arms to be recovered by Basil Petry, once of Purdue. Then Popov carried the load. He made 5 at a hole between Iowa's right tackle and guard, then repeated. Aided by Carey and McCullough, he made one first down on the 24, then another on the 6. McCullough finally went over. Mucha's kick was low.

Soon after the next kickoff, McCullough intercepted a long pass by Farmer on the sailor 34 and returned 14 yards. Two plays gained only three yards, then a flock of eager sailor subs went to work. Paul Anderson, former Purdue player and Bill Harrell, late of Alabama, did most of the work. The chief contribution was a 19 yard dash by Anderson. The Iowans slowed down the sailor tempo momentarily at the 5 yard mark, then Joe Boyle, former Creighton player, went the remaining distance on an end around play, crossing without being touched. Ed Lesnick's try for the extra point was blocked.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP).—Dominating the offensive play thruout but finding most of their touchdown drives stymied before reaching pay territory, the Army football team stumbled thru to a 14 to 0 victory over a stubborn Lafayette eleven in the Cadets' opening game today. A crowd of 7,000 attended.

Thwarted time and again just when it seemed their drives would pay off, Coach Earl Blaik's soldiers managed to score in the second quarter, thanks to a 72 yard dash by Ralph Hill on an ancient, chin-whiskered play, and again in the final period on a snappy 39 yard drive.

One-Man Mazur Parade.

The first touchdown was as unexpected as it was sensational. Hank Mazur, workhorse of the Army corps, took a routine punt on his own 28 yard line. He started for his right, and as he passed Hill he slipped the ball to him. As the entire Lafayette team headed in Mazur's direction, Hill hot-footed it down the sideline for 72 yards and the score. Ed Murphy place kicked the extra point.

In the final period, Mazur staged practically a one man parade to the goal. He received a punt on the Lafayette 39, returned it to the 33, passed to Hill to the 21, skirted his right end to the 3, then plunged the rest of the way for the touchdown. Again Murphy converted.

Army Line Stiff.

While this was going on, the robust Lafayette lads were batting their heads futilely against the stalwart Army line, or throwing passes with indifferent success. The Leopards completed nine of 19 tosses, but the gains were small.

COLGATE TRIMS CORNELL.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP).—Colgate mixed full back Mike Micka's powerful line plunging with vital forward passes to fashion three touchdowns and defeat Cornell on Schoellkopf field today, 18 to 6.

Denied a victory over Cornell in nine games since 1919, the Red Raiders made certain of this one with three touchdowns in the first half. None of the extra points was converted.

Cornell threatened twice in the first half and finally scored early in the third period, covering 71 yards on line plunges and a pass to Stacy Mosser.

Next Saturday Deadline for All-Star Show.

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.

This is the last week left to Chicago bowlers to file their entires in the local eliminations for the second annual All-Star tournament. The entry deadline will be midnight next Saturday, Oct. 10, the eliminations will take place Oct. 17-18, 24-25, and Oct. 31-Nov. 1, and the eight Chicagoans surviving those eliminations [along with six who are seeded] will step up to the firing line in the nation-wide event Dec. 5 as candidates for the individual match game championship of the United States.

Most of the eligibles for the Chicago eliminations—that is, the fellows who averaged 190 or better in league play last year—have said, at least to themselves, that they probably could take Ned Day's match game title away from him if given the opportunity. The Chicago eliminations for the All-Star tourney offer that opportunity, which means it's a case for them of put up—or else.

Six Chicagoans Seeded.

Joe Wilman, Joe Sinke, Bill Hargadon, Herb Freitag, Bill Flesch, and Wally Freitag are not among the fellows whom the entrants in the Chicago eliminations will have to whip to win one of the eight places open to Chicagoans in the big show. Those six men are seeded in the All-Star tournament.

But men who are going to shoot do include Jules Sowa, Classic league secretary, who got his taste of All-Star competition last year and liked it. Also among them will be Eli Maricich who was an alternate a year ago, and Johnny Small, who is teaming up with Maricich in a doubles match against Herb Freitag and Paul Krumske. First six of the 24 games in that doubles match for $1,000 were rolled last night at Dearborn-Jackson recreation and the second six go on at 1:30 this afternoon. It will be something of a tuneup for All-Star competition. Other Classic leaguers are expected to enter after tonight's league sweepstakes at Cascade Center, West Madison street.

Jerry Steinberg Enters.

Another among the entrants already in is Jerry Steinberg, who does most of his shooting at Hyde Park recreations. Jerry tossed in a new high solo count in Hyde Park's junior league last week when he fired a 656 total, and his last series in the South Shore Major was 642. Jerry's skill is known mostly around the section where he bowls, but he's not afraid to match his strike ball with that of the city's or nation's big names.

Entries for the All-Star eliminations are being taken by Math Luecker, secretary of the Bowling Proprietors' Association of Greater Chicago, whose address is 1738 Addison street. The entry fee is $25.

The eliminations will be run on the round robbin plan, with eight men to a group. Each man will bowl a four game match against each of the other seven men in the group, or 28 games in all. Should there be more than eight groups of eight men and consequently more than eight group winners, the committee will set up a roll-off schedule.

Four men in each group will be in the prize money. The winner will get his $50 entry into the All-Star tournament plus $50 in cash. Second prize will be $50; third prize, $30, and fourth prize, $20.

NEW TRIER WINS OVER WAUKEGAN; THREE IN ROW

New Trier High school opened its campaign in the Suburban Football league by defeating Waukegan, 25 to 0, yesterday on the latter's field. It was New Trier's third consecutive victory of the season.

The New Trier frosh-sophomore team took a 19 to 7 victory over Waukegan in a game that preceded the varsity contest. Lineups:

Spotting the Pins

Sixteen teams representing most of the strong leagues in the city will compete tonight in the fourth of the Classic Bowling league's weekly sweepstakes. Tonight's shooting will take place at Lloyd Wevang's Cascade center at 3825 West Madison street. Profits will go toward maintenance of the new lanes being installed in the Auditorium theater service men's center. Tonight's lineup follows:

The Junior league at Legion alleys, 7550 Cottage Grove avenue, celebrated Monday night. The reason: one of its members, Ray Juhlin, leadoff man on the Legion alleys five, fired the first 700 series in the league's 20 year history. Juhlin, a member of the team for five years and a 179 average bowler, got 196, 276, 247, for 719. . . . Wallace Coals ran their Samuelson's major record to 10 victories and two defeats by taking the Budweisers for three, but Mee & Rammes kept pace by firing a 2,905 series to blank the Old Pogues. E. Kleindinst leads the individuals with a 202 average. Wednesday's schedule:

Note to the fellow who left a mineralite with the initials C. E. C. in its bag in a parking lot on the south side last spring: The ball is at Windy City, 2101 South Cicero. . . . Tomorrow night's schedule in the Windy City major:

Soper Brothers vs. J. M. Kralovec; O'Keefe Coals vs. Bee-Vacs; Budweisers vs. Meister Brau; Nonebetter Ice Creams vs. Ace Fasteners; John Tomans vs. Furman Funerals; Vogel Brothers vs. Cascade Arcade; Reichman Jewelers vs. Joseph L. Gills; Mineralites vs. T. W. Samuels.

Chicago Recreation Five Hits 3,107 and Takes Lead.

George Sak dropped pins for a 675 total, Jerry Aulicky for 657, and Ted Svoma 632 including a 256 single effort as Chicago recreation hit 3,107 and moved into the South End Traveling league lead. The Chicago five took a full set from Bennett's Bowl. Rheingolds, defending champions, remained a game behind the new leaders by scoring a triple over Miami Lounge. Ed Parks of Park Manor tied Svoma for high game with his 256. . . . Three of the eight teams in the Ravenswood league insisted on carrying the name Doghouse, so they're Doghouse Nos. 1, 2, and 3. It's a man's league, of course. . . . Wink's Streamliners still are in the lead in the C. & N. W. Railway Pioneer league at Logan Bowl, but they share it with the B. of R. C. five, each with five victories in six games. . . . A few top scores in the Faetz & Son major:

Lee Hoerstman, 669; Ches Niesen, 650; George Bauer, 627; John Johansen, 623; Lee Faetz, 621.

Last year's high at the Renzino recreation was Joe Quattrocki's 676. On the first night of the Chicago Towel league's competition this season at Renzino's, Leon Potter got 213, 231, 234—678. Next stop: 700? . . . The big counts came in the wrong spots for South Shore major teams last week. Domestic Linen Supply outfired G. W. Gustafsons 2,797 to 2,662, but the Gustafsons won the first game a rolloff and the third by four pins. South Shore National bank toppled 2,988 to the Wesley Smiths' 2,794, but its 1,027 in the last game was one pin shy of a tie. . . . Jerry Steinberg set a new solo high in Hyde Park's Junior major with a 656 series. It paced his team, Ruby's Barbecue, to a three game victory over Hyde Park garage.

Brosius Setting Hot Pace in Hyde Park Major League.

Marty Szorc shot 635 and Joe Maycan, 630, as Congress Arcade administered a three game drubbing to the Glunz Liquor in the Greater Chicago Traveling circuit. Early's Avondale recreation took the odd game from Cascade Budweisers behind Joe Moskal's 686. . . . Ed Brosius is setting a hot pace in the Hyde Park major. He has a 269 game, 680 series and is tied with George Lindmark for high average, 201.

STEVENSON'S [Friday]—Peggy Rall, 531; Carrie Goebel, 527; Laila Glerman, 525; Emma Henkel [135 average bowler], 503. OPPORTUNITY, PACKERS KNOCK AT CARDS' DOOR

Clash in Comiskey Park Tonight; Bears Play Rams

This Week's Games

Chicago Bears vs. Cleveland Rams in Cleveland.

Brooklyn Dodgers vs. Detroit Lions in Detroit.

Washington Redskins vs. Philadelphia Eagles in Philadelphia.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

The youthful Chicago Cardinals tonight come face to face with their biggest golden gridiron moment in years. It is a moment which will stretch into 60 minutes of terrific golden gridiron conflict and if at the finish the lads Jim Conzelman has whipped into a unit are victorious it will be—look out, Bears.

The look out, Bears, is in the future. Tonight's business in Comiskey park is with a group of giants from northern Wisconsin, who are in the same chill-bringing spot they found themselves a year ago. These are the Packers from Green Bay and it was the Cardinals who last year almost knocked them out of the National Football league race.

On Sept. 28, 1941, the Bears beat the Packers, 25 to 17, in Green Bay. The next Sunday, Oct. 5, the Packers and the Cardinals met in Milwaukee. In the final minutes of this game, Green Bay drove 43 yards to a touchdown, beat the Cards, 14 to 13, and by this narrow margin stayed in the race until knocked out weeks later by the Bears in a playoff.

Cardinals Lead Division.

In that Milwaukee game, the Packers showed strong evidence that their spirit had been sapped by defeat on the previous Sunday. This game tonight, tho, has an added twist. These Cardinals are in the race—so much so that they lead the western division with two straight victories—and are quietly confident that such old time bugaboos as the Packers and Bears cannot stop their progress. Last year, when they met the Packers for the first time, the Cardinals had lost one game and tied the other against these same opponents they have whipped this season.

That's why tonight, there are two sides to the game. The Packers desperately need to win to stay in the running. The Cardinals, likewise, have that golden moment because a victory will keep them undefeated and bolster their confidence for next Sunday's engagement with the Bears in Wrigley field. The Bears are in Cleveland today for their second league game, with the Rams as their opponents.

Isbell, Pitch; Hutson, Catch.

The Packers, as usual, will offer in sharp outline Cecil Isbell, pitcher, and Don Hutson, catcher. There are lesser lights, like Larry Craig, one of the league's greatest blockers; Andy Uram, who runs and who sometimes catches passes when the defenders have Hutson in a pocket; Ted Fritsch, a blond thunderbolt from Stevens Point, Wis., Teachers, who plays full back; Tony Canadeo, who can skip around and thru a line, and who throws a pass or two when Isbell is getting a breathing spell.

It stacks up as a ball tossing show, with Isbell and Schwenk getting most of the exercise. The Cards, like the Packers, have some runners, too. Schwenk can go places and so can Marshall Goldberg, Knolla, Steve Lach, Johnny Martin, and Bob Morrow.

The Cardinals haven't beaten the Packers since 1937, when they came off with a 14 to 7 decision. Since then, there has been a monotonous procession of eight Green Bay victories, which is enough to make such a patient fellow as Conzelman go to any legal lengths to win.

Cards Are Scheming.

The Packers came into town yesterday for a night's rest on the near north side. The Cardinals worked out in the morning and had scheming session last night.

Tonight's is the Cardinals' last home show until Dec. 6 when they close the regular season with the Bears. It's their big golden moment of 1942 and indications are that at least 25,000 will come out to see what happens this time.

Last year, Green Bay had trouble with two freshmen Cardinal passers, Ray Mallouf and Johnny Clement, from Southern Methodist university. Those two youngsters are part of the war now, but Conzelman has been able to come up with other fellows who can throw. The main one is Bud Schwenk, whose accurate tosses have brought the three touchdowns scored in league play. Another new one is Johnny Knolla, swart half back from Creighton university, who will throw as Schwenk's alternate.

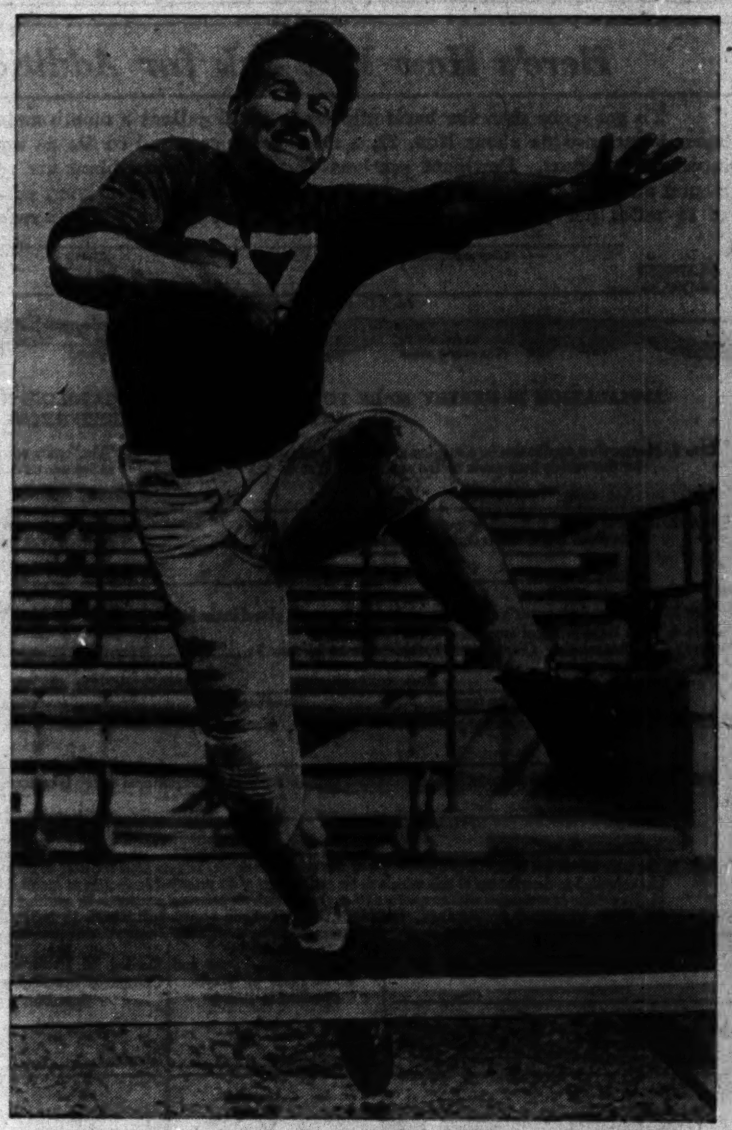
The Bears figure to have little trouble with the Rams, tho the Ohioans have two great passers in Parker Hall and Jack Jacobs and a strong running attack. The Cards beat the Rams in their opener three weeks ago, 7 to 0. In 10 games against Cleveland since 1937 the Bears have won eight. They lost twice to the Rams in 1938.

The other western division team, Detroit, which hasn't scored in two games, meets the Brooklyn Dodgers in Detroit. New York, which upset Washington last week, goes against the Pittsburgh Steelers in Pittsburgh. Washington plays the Philadelphia Eagles in Philadelphia.

Albion College Defeats Ohio Northern, 6 to 0

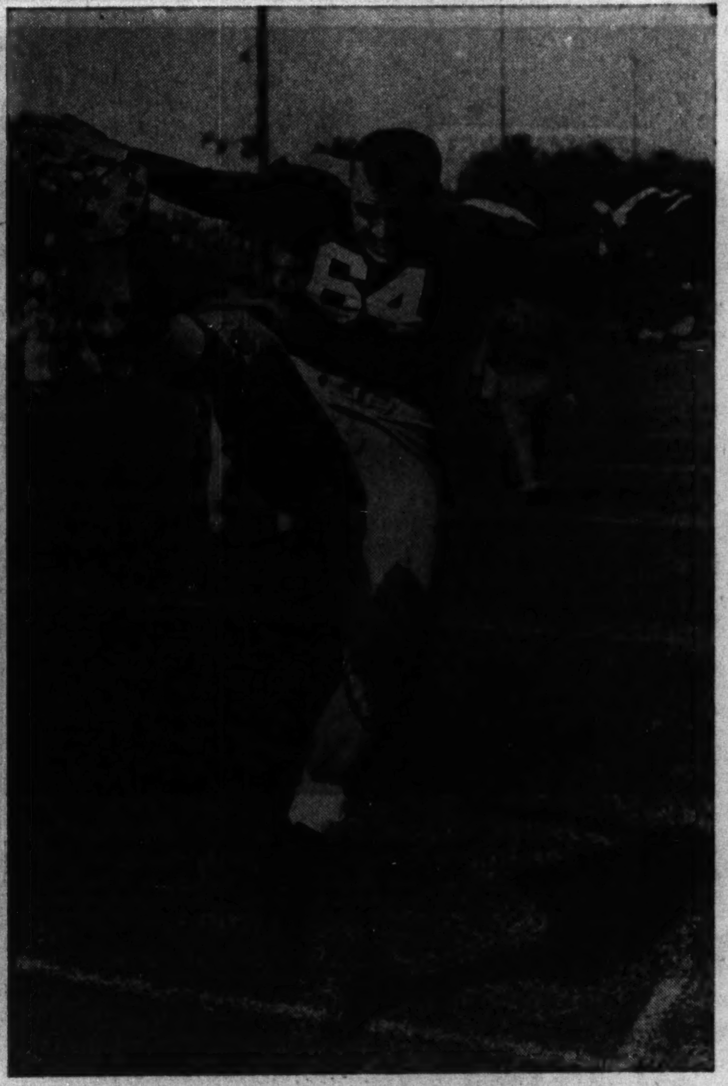
Albion, Mich., Oct. 3 [Special].—Albion college opened its home football schedule today with a 6 to 0 victory over Ohio Northern university. Bill Hopkins passing 6 yards to Bruce Stevens for a touchdown in the third period.

PACKERS VS. CARDS—AND THESE THREE WILL BE THERE!



One of the newcomers to the Chicago Cardinals who will try to embarrass the Green Bay Packers tonight in Comiskey park is Steve Lach, the 205 pound half back from Duke university. Lach has been a part of the running attack which has netted the Cards two straight National Football league victories, and he also has caught one of Bud Schwenk's touchdown passes.

Bud Schwenk in the act of throwing one of his accurate passes. Schwenk, claimed in the college draft by his old Washington university of St. Louis coach, Jim Conzelman, has thrown three touchdown passes for the Cards in their league triumphs over Cleveland and Detroit.



The Packers have some new blood, too. One of their important freshmen is Ted Fritsch, full back from Stevens Point, Wis., Teachers, who has been outstanding against the western army All-Stars and the Chicago Bears. Fritsch is 21 years old, stands 5 feet 10½ inches and weighs 205 pounds.

Series Rivals Sure of Train for Trip West

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—The New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals should have no trouble getting back to St. Louis next week on regularly scheduled trains, the Office of Defense Transportation said today.

Any appeal for relaxation of this rule would have to be made by the railroad on which the teams chose to travel, ODT officials who declined use of their names said, and no such appeal has been received yet.

Simplest solution would be for the teams' secretaries merely to apply for the necessary number of upper and lower berths, and there would be no government objection if this meant the addition of three, four, or five cars to a regularly scheduled train, the ODT spokesman said.

Even if the addition of a second section to a regular train were required to carry the athletes, ODT, under its order, would interpose no objection if the train had run added sections 20 per cent of the time in the last 90 days.

ANGOTT FIGHT OFF.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 4 [AP].—Charley Jones, manager of Lightweight Champion Sammy Angott, said today that his fighter injured his right hand in a bout in New Orleans Wednesday night and would be unable to meet Allie Stolz in New York on Nov. 13.

SOX-CUBS GAME IS CALLED OFF; PLAY 4TH TODAY

Beating the Cubs wasn't just a four-day job as the White Sox had gauged it, but the miscalculation can be blamed on the weather, which last night wasn't fit for ball playing.

So the Cubs, with a one-day reprieve and the added break of being back in Wrigley field, today will try to match the weather and string out the city series. The pitchers who were scheduled to start last night in Comiskey park, Thornton Lee for the Sox and Hiram Bithorn for the Cubs, will keep their assignments this afternoon. The game will start at 2:30 p. m.

If the National leaguers manage to win this afternoon, which would break a nine-game Sox winning streak stretching back to the fag end of the 1940 series, the remainder of the competition will be played at night in Comiskey park.

A Cub victory today would give Ted Lyons, the 41 year old Sox marvel, a chance to nail down the decision tomorrow night, with Bill Lee his probable mound opponent.

CARDINALS BEAT YANKEES, 2-0; GO INTO SERIES LEAD

Marion's scratch, a liner to center by Stan Musial in the fourth and a scooter past Crossetti by Kurowski with one out in the eighth inning.

In only the third and eight innings did more than three batsmen face Chandler, but he yielded to Pinch Batter Red Ruffing [who fanned] in the home eighth and this switch led to the Cards' run in the ninth.

Slaughter Comes Thru.

Marvin Breuer started the ninth and Brown opened with a single to right center. Moore bunted and Breuer threw to Phil Rizzuto at second. His throw pulled Rizzuto off the bag. Brown was safe at second and Moore at first. Slaughter singled to center, the fifth and last Cardinal hit, Brown scoring, Moore reaching third and Slaughter advancing to second when Joe DiMaggio threw to third. The Yanks thought Moore was out at third and Crosetti shoved Umpire Summers who shoved him back, shove for shove. At the end of the wrangle 38 year old Jim Turner replaced Breuer and Musial was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Walker Cooper then sent a short fly to DiMaggio and the runners held their bases. Johnny Hopp then flied to Charley Keller, and Moore was doubled at the plate as he attempted to score after the catch.

One Yank Reaches Second.

Rizzuto, the Yanks' leadoff man, was the only New York runner to get to second. He got to third in the first inning. Rizzuto opened the Yanks offensive with a safe bunt. After Buddy Hassett had fouled to Walker Cooper and Roy Cullenbine had fanned, Rizzuto stole second and went on to third when Walker Cooper threw the ball into center field. DiMaggio then struck out after a 2 and 2 count.

Keller then rolled to Hopp, but Bill Dickey singled to center for his fifth hit of the series. Jerry Priddy flied to Moore.

In the third inning, Chandler struck out, Rizzuto lined to Kurowski and Crosetti, who had gone in the line as a result of a shift following a minor injury to Hassett, struck out.

DiMaggio Gets Single.

With one out in the fourth, DiMaggio made the first of his two singles but Gordon and Keller flied out.

Cullenbine singled with two down in the sixth and then followed the first great fielding play of the game. DiMaggio drove one toward the 457 marker in left center, his favorite spot for triples. Musial and Moore raced for it. Just as the ball was about to bang to earth, Musial dived. He dived, not to get the ball, but to get out of Moore's way. And Moore got the ball in a miracle catch.

The seventh brought equally desperate and sparkling protection of the Cards' precious one run lead.

With one out, Keller rammed a smack toward the boxes in right field, his pet spot for homers. Slaughter dashed to a point against the four foot barrier between the 344 foot and the 367 foot markers, leaped high in the air and virtually plucked the potential tying homer off the hats of box holders.

After Moore had sped in for a fine catch of Cullenbine's short fly at the start of the ninth, DiMaggio singled to left, Gordon fouled to Kurowski and Slaughter backed up against the right field barrier for another shot from Keller's bat. But this time he didn't have to leap. He just waited for the ball to snuggle in his glove for the final out of the historic ball game.

Brooklyn Given Permission to Deal with Rickey

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Sam Breadon, president and owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, said tonight that he had given the Brooklyn Dodgers' management permission to discuss their vacancies with Branch Rickey, general manager of the Cardinals. Rickey's $50,000 a year contract with the Cardinals expires Dec. 31.

Rickey, when told of Breadon's announcement and when asked if he was negotiating with the Dodgers, replied "I haven't, and if I had I wouldn't say anything about it, but I haven't." At the time, however, he was closeted with his son, Branch Rickey Jr., who is the head of the Dodgers' farm clubs.

Breadon said that Ford Frick, president of the National league, approached him recently and explained that the Dodger directors wanted to discuss their vacancies with Rickey but would not do so if Breadon objected. Breadon said he told them to go ahead.

KRUMSKE AND FRIETAG TAKE 55 PIN MARGIN

The team of Paul Krumske and Herb Frietag, veteran Classic league bowlers, took the lead by 55 pins against John Small and Eli Maricich in the first six of a 24 game series doubles match on Dearborn-Jackson recreation alleys last night. The winning team will receive $1,200.

Krumske and Frietag rolled 2,430 and Small and Maricich, also members of the Classic league, 2,375. Maricich bowled the high individual game—256. The second six games of the block will be rolled this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock on the same alleys.

COOPER OR LANIER AND BOROWY TO DO HURLING TODAY

Southworth Undecided, McCarthy Certain.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The boisterous, jubilant St. Louis Cardinals, their nervous tension entirely gone, are supremely confident they are on the march, with victory certain, and nothing whatever will stop them.

That was the attitude of Manager Billy Southworth down to the last player as they staged a yipping celebration in their dressing room after blanking the New York Yankees, 2 to 0, in the third game of the series today and move into a 2 to 1 lead. It was the first time the Yankees had been behind in a series since 1936 when the New York Giants won the opening game with the Yanks coming back to win four straight.

Southworth himself was the authority that the Cards had been relieved of tension.

"But, mind you," he explained. "I ain't going to make any predictions. We've still got to win two ball games. The Yankees are tough—there are no tougher and we've got to play to win."

Praise from Southworth.

Southworth praised Spurgeon Chandler's pitching, the pitching of his own victorious Ernie White, and the marvelously thrilling jumping one hand catch Enos [Country] Slaughter made of Charley Keller's smashing drive in the seventh inning.

Slaughter, with perfect timing, jumped to make the catch with his gloved left hand as the ball was dropping into the crowded stands for a home run.

"That was a thriller," Southworth said. "It would have gone into the stands for sure to tie the score.

"Chandler pitched a fine game. He used his control to good advantage. White also had good control and a lot of stuff. It was as good a game as I've seen him pitch all summer."

The grinning White, who held the Yanks to six hits, thought it was the best game he'd ever pitched in his life.

"Boy, I feel gooder as hell," he yelled. "It was the greatest game I ever hope to pitch."

Cooper or Lanier Today.

Southworth said either big Morton Cooper, ace righthander, or Max Lanier, a lefty, would oppose the Yanks tomorrow. He said he wanted to talk the situation over with Lanier tonight to learn who he feels before reaching a decision.

Cooper, a 22 game winner, with 10 shutouts and only 7 defeats, hopes Southworth will select him. The Yanks beat him, 7 to 4, in the opening game in St. Louis.

"I had six days rest and didn't have my control," Cooper explained. "I've got it now."

Cooper is sure the Cardinals are on their way to the world's championship.

"We've got the big edge now," he said. "They've got to win three out of four now."

"We haven't lost a series since last July when Brooklyn beat us four out of five. It's damn tough to beat this club three out of four."

Borowy to Hurl for Yanks.

In the Yankee dressing room, there was only silence as the beaten American league champions trooped in, grim faced and weary.

Manager Joe McCarthy went straight to his office, where he sat as if in a daze, apparently unable to believe that his team had dropped two games in a row. He said he would pitch Hank Borowy, a right hander who won 15 games and lost only 4 this season, in the fourth game, tomorrow.

Buddy Hassett, who suffered a fractured left thumb in the opening frame, led the Yankee players into the clubhouse, attired in his street clothes. He had returned after submitting to an X-ray examination.

Spud Chandler was the first man dressed. Most of the players who finished the game today took their time getting out of their uniforms and none had anything to say.

SPRINTING BACK LEADS ST. JOHN'S TO 20-0 VICTORY

Dubuque, Ia., Oct. 3 [Special].—St. John's Military academy, led by Terry Lentz, defeated Loras academy here today, 20 to 0. Lentz, half back, scored all three touchdowns for the Cadets, his second resulting from a 63 yard sprint in the second quarter. His others were 11 and 23 yards.

BUNGLING GAVE LIFE TO CURBS ON MOTORISTS

BY HAL FOUST.

The 35 mile an hour speed limit and the forthcoming skimpy gas rations are tire conservation measures of a severity necessitated by the administration's bungling of its rubber program, criticized even by President Roosevelt's own advisory committee, headed by Bernard Baruch.

The restraints on speed and mileage are fundamentals in prolonging the life of tires on the common family automobile until the rubber is to be requisitioned for the most essential civilian needs, such as for transportation of doctors, policemen, and war workers, or until synthetic rubber is in production in adequate quantities, notwithstanding governmental fumbling, to meet military requirements and to maintain this country's motorized economy.

No Rubber in Sight.

The official viewpoint in Washington is that there is no rubber in sight for tires for ordinary family use until the end of the war, or at least not in 1943 or '44. This doesn't take into account synthetic sources recently discovered or still to be discovered, such as the possible salvage from paper pulp mill waste of enough alcohol for 900,000 tons of rubber annually.

The 35 miles an hour speed limit, advocated by Washington for universal compliance as an essential war sacrifice, is not spoken of as a temporary measure. It's referred to as a regulation for the duration. The same applies to national gasoline rationing. Every one is going to coöperate.

In addition to the curb on speed and travel mileage, there are other important factors in tire life that must not be neglected simply because an automobile is not being used as much as in former years. Infrequent and limited use must not be accompanied by infrequent and limited care of the tires.

Watch Air Pressure.

Watch the air pressure. That means put a gauge on all five valve stems every week. Just so you won't forget, set a certain day of the week, the same day each week, for this five minute chore. Underinflation breaks the casing carcass. Overinflation expedites wear by concentrating the load on a small tread surface, and there's less resilience to minimize cuts and bruises.

Inspect the tires periodically. Or better still, have a mechanic do it. Probing into the small cuts may discover imbedded glass or nails. Some shops now X-ray tires.

Avoid bumping curbs in parking. Tires aren't designed to withstand hard shocks from the side. The impact may bruise the side wall.

In driving, be a little more vigilant in observing and in avoiding glass or other foreign objects on the right of way. In fast driving in the country, we were inclined to keep our eyes focused far ahead. You can give more attention at 35 miles an hour to the pavement immediately in your path.

Keep Brakes Adjusted.

Accelerate slowly. A fast pickup is extravagant with gasoline and promotes tire wear. Handle the brake delicately. Use the engine compression to decelerate. Make a quick stop only to cope with emergencies. A skid will take miles from the life of a tire. Keep brakes adjusted to distribute the braking job.

Take it easy on the turns. The centrifugal force is a severe strain, a side thrust, especially on the front wheels. A squeal on a turn is evidence of gross waste of rubber.

Switch the tires from wheel to wheel every few thousand miles to distribute the wear peculiar to each position on the tire. In the days of fast driving, there was much discussion and disagreement on whether the better tires should for reasons of safety be on the front or the rear. At 35 miles an hour, it doesn't make any difference. At 35 miles an hour, a blowout shouldn't cause an accident.

Have the wheels properly aligned and balanced. Improper adjustment kills tires. Be thoughtful of your tires. And write your congressman and senator to expedite and to enlarge the synthetic rubber program. The responsibility for this production is with President Roosevelt but, under a democratic form of government, the legislature is still potent.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

TIRE WRECKER.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—At 98th street and Western avenue on the west side of the street, there is a bad spot in the pavement which has become dangerous and which must ruin at least a thousand tires per day. Surely this condition does not conserve rubber. Is it not some one's job to inspect conditions such as this?

Q. F. JENSEN.

STREET CAR MOTORMEN.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—A red stop light offers very little protection to motorists or pedestrians at street car crossings, in view of the flagrant violations by motormen recently to continue across the street after the light has changed.

Some day this race may result in a tie and between two street cars. What then?

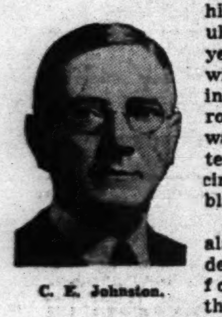
MORE SLOWING OF PASSENGER TRAINS STUDIED

Freight Runs Also May Be Longer.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Plans for further slowing down western passenger trains—placed on high speed schedules only after years of effort—will be discussed in Chicago tomorrow afternoon, it was disclosed yesterday in railroad circles. The war is blamed.



C. E. Johnston.

A proposal is also reported under consideration for lengthening the running time of freight trains between Chicago and the Pacific coast by a day. Under it freight shipped from Chicago to Los Angeles and other points would be delivered in eight instead of seven days. The purpose is said to be to ease operating problems caused by the increasing volume of war traffic moving over the transcontinental lines.

Jeffers May Be Present.

The discussion of passenger and freight train schedules will take place in the office of C. E. Johnston, president of the Western Association of Railway Executives in the Union Station building. Officials of the Office of Defense Transportation, Washington, will take part and William M. Jeffers, new rubber production director, may be present.

It is expected that the conference will consider proposals to add two to four hours to the running time of standard equipment passenger trains to the Pacific coast, which now make the run in about 60 hours. The ODT is also said to be asking that the 17 hour running time of the fast streamliners, the City of Denver of the Northwestern and Union Pacific and the Denver Zephyr of the Burlington, be lengthened to 20 hours. It is proposed to have the Twin Cities streamliners go on an eight hour instead of a six or six hour and fifteen minute schedule.

Some Trains Already Slowed.

Late in June the running time of the fastest Pacific coast streamliners, including the Super Chief of the Santa Fe and the City of Los Angeles of the North Western-Union Pacific, was increased from 39¾ to 41¾ hours. The 16 hour schedules of the Denver streamliners were extended to 17 hours.

The ODT recommended the extensions to enable trains to make more stops, thereby serving communities likely to be affected by restrictions on automobile and bus operation. It was also suggested that it would be easier to operate trains more slowly over lines crowded with war traffic.

It is expected the ODT will turn its attention to the eastern roads later. The New York Central's 20th Century Limited and the Pennsylvania's Broadway Limited are on 16 hour schedules.

Roads Oppose Changes.

Some western railroad officials are objecting to extending the time of the streamliners because the slower schedules would not allow them sufficient time to service trains properly at terminals. Further, it is held that the faster trains are needed to relieve the strain on the air lines crowded with military and other war traffic.

The Illinois Central announced several changes in long distance passenger train schedules and services to fit war conditions, all to become effective Sunday, Oct. 18. Running time of many long distance trains will be extended from five minutes to an hour. The only long distance trains excepted are the Panama Limited [Chicago to New Orleans], Green Diamond [Chicago to St. Louis], and the City of Miami [Chicago to Miami].

Divert Thru Sleeper Service.

Thru travel in sleeping cars between Chicago and New Orleans and between St. Louis and New Orleans is being diverted to the Panama Limited, and the extra fare formerly charged on that streamliner is being eliminated. The Creole and the Louisiane will take care of coach service.

"The changes are being made to increase the contribution of the Illinois Central in the war effort," J. V. Lanigan, passenger traffic manager, said. "The lengthening of thru passenger schedules will improve 'on time' operation and also will expedite the transportation of war supplies."

Freezing of passenger train schedules as of Sept. 26 becomes effective today. There will be no more special trains and cars to football and other sports events.

Restrict Nickel Use to Only Actual Implements of War

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 [Special].—Use of nickel has been restricted by the WPB to implements of war and other products certified by the army-navy munitions board to be essential in successful prosecution of the war. Previously WPB had prohibited its use in a long list of products, but permitted some uses on specific allocations.

Grain Traders Turn Bearish on Price Law

The new farm price and wage control law was construed yesterday by members of the Chicago Board of Trade as a bearish document, temporarily at least. But they expressed hope that the market would continue free of further controls.

An official of the board said last night that during recent years enough grain has come into the open market to create normal price fluctuations between the effective price floor established by government loans on stored grain, and the partially effective ceiling imposed by the government's readiness to sell its surplus holdings of grain.

He said traders hoped that the volume of free grain would continue sufficient to permit the market to maintain its other economic functions of facilitating the grading and exchange of farm commodities. He admitted that many in the trade fear the eventual consequences of the constantly tightening federal controls over free markets.

Prices Move Lower.

Grain prices were on the downgrade from the start yesterday with corn in the lead. That grain declined ⅜ to 1 cent with December reaching 84¼ cents a bushel, a new seasonal low, and wheat was off about ⅜ cent. At no time did the markets show a disposition to rally and final sales were near the bottom. Closing losses on corn futures were ⅜ to ⅞ cent; wheat, ⅜ to ¾ cent; oats, ¼ to ⅜ cent; rye, ⅞ to 1 cent, and soy beans ⅝ to 1 cent. December corn closed at 84⅜ cents and wheat at $1.27½.

Announcement late in the day that the ceiling price of flour had been frozen at the highest price prevailing between Sept. 26 and Oct. 2 was regarded by brokers as likely to result in limiting purchases of that commodity to actual needs and was expected to have a depressing effect on wheat.

Corn Damaged Little.

Farmers were assured by two Chicago crop experts that recent freezing weather had caused relatively little damage to the new corn crop. Mrs. E. H. Miller estimated the prospective yield at 2 billion 946 million bushels, and C. M. Galvin with James E. Bennett & Co., at 2 billion 975 million bushels.

RETAILERS LEFT 'HOLDING BAG' IN FREEZE — MEEK

Retailers, manufacturers, converters, and distributors will be left "holding the bag" under President Roosevelt's new freezing order unless the ceilings established earlier on a March price peak basis are readjusted to a September basis, J. T. Meek, executive secretary of the Illinois Federation of Retail Associations, Chicago, said yesterday. He suggested a "re-freezing" to put finished goods, rents, wages, and raw commodity prices all on one basis.

"If would be feasible and possible to advance the March ceilings to the September level to permit all four factors to move toward the inflation control goal together," Meek said. "Otherwise those under March ceilings will have to pay the penalty of congress' failure to enact farm price and wage controls until this late date."

PRODUCE FUTURE MARKETS SLIDE ON PRICE FREEZE

Produce futures declined yesterday on the Chicago Mercantile exchange in one of the busiest Saturday sessions of the year. Traders said losses were a result of concern over ceilings imposed by the President.

Butter contracts declined 0.15 to 0.35 cent a pound, with the November contract closing at 44.35 cents. Egg futures dropped 0.30 to 0.40 cent a dozen, the October contract at 36.25 cents. Potato futures dipped 0.03 to 0.22 cent a hundredweight. The January contract closed at $3.35.

Old Timer Goes to Chicago Fire Show

Show in Loop Opens Chicago Antifire Week

The Fire Prevention show sponsored by the Chicago fire department, the Chicago Association of Commerce, and civic groups was opened with a ceremony in the loop yesterday as the nation prepared to begin today its observance of Fire Prevention week proclaimed by President Roosevelt.

Show Extends Thru Week.

Fire Commissioner Michael J. Corrigan, City Fire Marshal A. J. Mullaney, Joel R. Wilson, chairman of the fire prevention committee of the Association of Commerce, and Ralph Burke of the OCD protective services attended the ceremony. Except for today, the show will be open thru next Saturday.

Meanwhile State Insurance Director Paul F. Jones called on the people of Illinois to help cut down the large annual loss from fires, and officials of the Chicago Fire Insurance patrol disclosed information on its work last year to help prevent damage to property during fires.

Because of the war and the necessity of preventing wastefulness, said Jones, "there never was a time when the preservation of life and property against destruction by fire was so vital."

Patrol Prevents Damage.

The insurance patrol's work was summarized in a report to Fire Commissioner Corrigan by Frank C. McAuliffe, chief of the patrol. The patrol is an organization maintained by private insurance companies, and employs experts whose primary task is to rush to fires and cover up property with tarpaulins to prevent damage from débris, smoke, and water. The 100 employés also participate often in rescues of fire victims.

Chief McAuliffe reported that the patrol attended 13,698 fires, traveled 52,872 miles, spread 23,088 covers, and spent 4,651 hours on fire duty.

Gov. Green has asked the Illinois State Council of Defense to participate in Fire Prevention week activities. School and Scout organizations are taking part also.

The week commemorates the destruction of a large part of Chicago by fire in 1871. The great fire began on Sunday evening, Oct. 8, and was not under control until three days later. It cost 175 million dollars' worth of property and 250 lives.

AUTO INSURANCE CUT 10 TO 25% IN ILLINOIS BY ONE UNDERWRITER

Lower schedules of automobile liability rates in the Illinois territory of the American Automobile Insurance company, retroactive to Aug. 1, were announced yesterday by E. D. Loring, resident vice president.

Loring said that reductions vary from 10 to 25 per cent, depending on the estimated mileage the individual policy holder will drive during the next year. He said the company is reducing its automobile bodily injury rates on a nation-wide basis because of voluntary reduced mileage and speed.

Reductions will be based on annual mileage estimates by owners until gasoline rationing becomes effective in this area, after which premium rates will correspond with the A, B, and C gasoline ration book classifications.

PIPE LINE SALE BY COLUMBIA OIL APPROVED BY SEC

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP).—The long fight between Columbia Oil and Gasoline corporation and Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company over control of the 75 million dollar Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line company virtually ended today when the Securities and Exchange commission approved transactions leading to Mokan's eventual control of the valuable natural gas property.

Columbia Oil was given a year to consumate the $10,436,826 voluntary sale of its 50.1 per cent holdings of Panhandle common stock to Phillips Petroleum company which will sell half of that interest to Mokan, which then will have 68 per cent control. All that remains is approval of Columbia Oil stockholders.

The plan also provides for dissolution of Columbia Oil, a subsidiary of Columbia Gas and Electric corporation, and automatically would end "death sentence" action against Columbia Oil under the holding company act. The SEC last April directed the Columbia companies to cut Panhandle from their system.

MEAT INSTITUTE TO HEAR WICKARD AND GEN. HERSHEY

The problem of meeting the meat requirements of American civilians, the armed services and the lend-lease program will be discussed tomorrow by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard at the annual dinner of the American Meat institute in the Drake hotel.

W. C. Codling, chief of the meat packing section of the War Production board's food branch, and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the selctive service system, will speak at the opening session of the institute's annual convention. Officials of the organization have been holding closed meetings prior to the opening of the convention.

The unopposed slate of nominees, besides Neumiller, includes Charles W. Berquist, Western Electric company, for vice president, and Leslie McMahon, City National Bank & Trust company, to succeed himself as treasurer. Louis E. Leverone, president of Canteen Food Service, Inc., retiring president, will become chairman of the board. The election will be held Friday in the Palmer House.

Report Other War Curbs Lift Apparel Sales

The midseason holiday apparel market which closed a one week showing yesterday at the Merchandise Mart was reported to have been unusually successful.

Business was aided, it was said, because other lines of merchandise have been curtailed by war and apparel inventories were cut by large sales during recent chilly weather.

"Retail sales stimulated by the cold snap of the preceding week left buyers in a position to make satisfactorily large additions to their stocks," said Percy Wilson, managing director of the mart.

Useful Items More Important.

"From the standpoint of wartime economy the growing realization on the part of the retail merchant of the importance of useful items, notably wearing apparel, for their Christmas gift stocks, and the possibilities of heat regulations stimulating the buying of warm clothing, contributed their share."

He said retail merchants are replacing lines of merchandise necessary to the war effort and no longer available to civilians with apparel stocks. He said these stocks not only are vital to the retail stores' continued existence, but can be classed as civilian necessities.

Large Attendance Reported.

Increased attendance was recorded for both large and smaller store buyers from the midwest. The largest numbers of out of state representatives came from Kansas, Michigan, Nebraska, Iowa, Indiana, and Ohio.

The heaviest demand was reported in infants' and children's wear, with lingerie and women's apparel next. Most buying in the first two days was of children's wear, but beginning Wednesday large sales were reported in women's wear and accessories.

WARN CIVILIANS LARD SHORTAGE MAY DEVELOP

U.S. Requires 65 Pct. of Output.

A shortage of lard for civilian consumption is imminent because of huge government purchases, packers and distributors said yesterday. The extent of the shortage will be governed by the volume of lend-lease buying, they said, but expressed doubt that rationing would be imposed even if the supply available for civilians is reduced sharply from its present low level.

Lend-lease purchases of lard, principally for Great Britain and Russia, have totaled 838 million pounds since March, 1941. The department of agriculture has announced that lend-lease and other government requirements demand require 65 per cent of the nation's total lard output.

Pinch Termed Inevitable.

If this demand is satisfied, or even if the over-all buying rate of the last 18 months is maintained, packers' representatives said, a serious scarcity for civilians is inevitable. They said that before the government began its vast buying, 70 per cent of lard production went into consumer channels and the remainder was exported.

On Sept. 1, United States lard stocks totaled 73 million pounds, including 23 million pounds owned by the government. This compared with 202 million on March 1 and 375 million in mid-1941. Stocks in Chicago, the nation's lard center, totaled 11,199,000 pounds on Sept. 30 against 26,133,000 at the end of August.

Lard production has been increased but has fallen far short of increased demands. Output in the first eight months of 1942 in plants under federal inspection was 1,122,562,000 pounds, compared with 974,239,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Packers Can't Fill Orders.

Packers said this gap between supply and demand has resulted in an "acute" industry situation. Lend-lease buying in Chicago has been light since midyear because packers cannot fill orders. Civilian orders are being filled only partially.

An official of one distributing firm said that in many instances jobbers and retail stores are unable to obtain lard. Chain stores reported that they have been forced to shop for supplies and "spread it" among their stores, but that so far they have been able to meet demand "fairly well."

In the event of the anticipated sharp reduction of civilian supplies, the severity of the pinch will vary with the type and amount of cooking and baking done by individuals. Commercial users, such as bakers, are expected to be hard hit.

60 CHICAGO AREA FIRMS GIVEN 67 NEW WAR ORDERS

Sixty-seven new war orders were placed with 60 companies in the Chicago area last week, including 17 that had no previous orders, Leverett S. Lyon, chief executive officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce, reported yesterday. Contracts awarded 1,709 firms in the area since war production was started total $1,845,778,000.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Sunday, Oct. 4, 1942.

[Copyright: 1942: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DIVERGENT TRENDS.

The trading volume in shares listed on the New York Stock exchange in 1941 declined 18 per cent from the 1940 level. For the first eight months of this year the volume has decreased about 28 per cent from the corresponding period in 1941.

In comparison, the dollar volume of trading in bonds in 1941, exclusive of government obligations, increased about 33 per cent over 1940, and for the first eight months of this year was substantially the same as in the 1941 period.

As a factor in the divergent trends in stock and bond trading volume since 1940, market analysts have cited the more favorable position with respect to taxes that fixed obligations of a corporation have over its stock issues.

Bonds represent a debt of a corporation, and interest payments are fixed charges against earnings before federal income taxes. Dividends are paid from earnings after allowance for taxes.

Many large corporations have reduced dividends in the face of rising taxes. Despite steeper levies and smaller profit margins, interest payments on bonds have not been affected materially where gross earnings under wartime industrial activity provide an ample margin for payment of fixed charges.

For some time railroad securities have been the center of interest in the bond market. Less vulnerable to taxes because of heavy invested capital, railroads have improved their credit position as a result of sharply higher revenues.

The credit position of utilities and industrials with large operating income and favorable long term prospects has not been lowered despite steep taxes, in the opinion of most market analysts. Consequently, many investors are believed to have turned their interest from stocks whose yield has become less certain because of taxes to funded obligations.

In some instances interest payments have been resumed on bonds which had been in default before wartime industrial activity sent gross earnings soaring. This has been particularly true in the case of railroads. The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company stated in its annual report for 1941 that the company had received almost $800,000 interest on bonds of railroads in receivership or bankruptcy which previously had been in default.

G. M. Accepts Order of WLB Under Protest

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 3 (AP).—Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors corporation, made public today a letter to the War Labor board advising it that "due to the 'all-out' war in which our country is engaged," the corporation will comply with the board's recent directive orders concerning General Motors and its union employés.

At the same time he made it clear the corporation differed sharply with the board's views. He termed some of them "unreasonable and unnecessary."

Cost Put at 69 Millions.

The WLB order provided wage increases of 4 cents an hour, equal pay for equal work by women and approved stipulations as to vacation allowances and the maintenance of union membership. Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the United Automobile Workers [CIO], in recommending union adoption of the agreement said it carried economic gains totaling 69 million dollars for 254,000 workers.

Wilson, in his letter, said that General Motors is employing more men and women than ever before in its history and that more than 95 per cent of its production effort is on war material.

Compliance with the WLB orders "requiring their incorporation in signed contracts with the unions," Wilson wrote, does not mean that General Motors has come into a mutually satisfactory understanding with the unions regarding the specific provisions of the board's orders.

Pact Not an Agreement.

"There has been no meeting of minds between the corporation and the unions as to the soundness or desirability of certain of these provisions," he added. "Thus the resulting documents cannot be regarded as collective bargaining agreements."

Wilson took specific exception to the WLB directive concerning the maintenance of union membership.

"We believe the laws of our country provide for free choice unionism," he said, "and we continue to maintain that it is improper for the corporation to be forced to establish as a condition of employment that union members must remain in the union to continue to hold their jobs."

IBA Meeting to Be Two Day Parley on War

War finance will be the main topic at the 31st annual meeting of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, Oct. 19 and 20, in the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. The association's customary five day convention will be superseded this year by the two day "war finance conference."

Speakers scheduled to address the conference on opening day are Rear Adm. Emory Scott Land, chairman of the United States Maritime commission and administrator of the War Shipping administration; Daniel W. Bell, undessecretary of the treasury; Joseph C. Grew, special assistant to the secretary of state, and former ambassador to Japan, and IBA President John S. Fleek.

Other speakers will include United States treasury officials and executive managers of several victory fund committees. Incoming President Jay N. Whipple will speak at the closing session.

In addition to the conference proper, national committee meetings and a meeting of the board of governors will be held Sunday, Oct. 18. David Dillman, IBA educational director, Chicago, said the association is asking members outside New York to schedule one of their regular business trips east to coincide with the conference dates to permit their attendance without extra use of transportation facilities.

Income Tax Adjustment Suggested for Idle Tools

Leverett S. Lyon, chief executive officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce, yesterday suggested to the bureau of internal revenue that some provision be made to enable industries to make commensurate deductions in their 1943 income tax reports for peacetime machine tools now idle or being replaced by war production machinery. Lyon said a clear policy on the matter would contribute greatly to obtaining a maximum of scrap metal in this area thru scrapping of machinery on which tax deductions were permitted.

WLB Explains Rule on 'Inequalities.'

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3 (AP).—The War Labor board today allowed a wage increase of 4 cents an hour to 90,000 Chrysler corporation employés who had sought a 12½ cent raise, and set forth a definition of "pay inequalities" significant in connection with the discretionary duties imposed on the board under President Roosevelt's new anti-inflation order.

Dr. G. W. Taylor.

The increase amounts to $7,488,000 a year. The board's decision was reached more than a week ago but was not made public until after the President issued an executive order stabilizing wages at Sept. 15 levels except where gross inequalities exist.

Defines "Inequalities."

Dr. George W. Taylor, vice chairman of the board, writing the majority opinion, defined the term "inequalities" to cover only abnormal differences in wage rates.

"It should be pointed out," Dr. Taylor wrote, "that differences in rates are not necessarily inequalities in rates. On the contrary, the wages paid in American industry are normally characterized by all sorts of differentials created for many different reasons. Under any sound program for stabilizing wages in this time of war it must be presumed that the well established differences in wages are not inequalities. Such an approach is particularly to be followed when such differences have been established by collective bargaining procedures.

Requires Fuller Showing.

"One must not interpret the above stated presumption, however, as an indication that established differences in wages can never become inequalities. The point is, however, that a showing of inequality in wages requires much more than a showing of differences."

The decision adjusted vacation pay in line with action in the General Motors case and ordered that women receive "equal pay for comparable quantity and quality of work on comparable operations."

The CIO Automobile Workers of America had asked for a $1 an hour minimum wage and for abolition of differentials between plants of the company. Both requests were denied.

CIO Members Dissent.

Two CIO WLB members, Thomas Kennedy and Van A. Bittner, dissented on the general wage increase, minimum rate, wage equalization and abolition of the differential. They said that if the board had applied the Little Steel formula in the same manner as in the General Motors case, the Chrysler workers would have been entitled to 4½ cents an hour instead of 4 cents. The dissent said that the board had followed the "whimsical guesswork" of its panel in subtracting ½ cent as an allowance for individual wage increases granted since Jan. 1, 1941.

The 4 cent increase is to be retroactive to June 1, when the wage agreement between the corporation and the union expired.

ODT Admits Wine Makers Continue to Use Tank Cars

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2 (AP).—Railroad tank cars are still being used to transport wine, the Office of Defense Transportation acknowledged today. Officials said virtually all those suitable for transportation of petroleum or other vitally needed products had been taken from the wine industry.

RAIL AND STEEL STOCKS EXTEND MARKET ADVANCE

Average Up for 2d Week; Trading Expands.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The stock market today extended its recovery on the second largest Saturday turnover of the year, altho profit cashing in the wake of the substantial advance this week restricted most gains to fractions.

Steels and rails were the leaders, as was the case yesterday when dealings were the liveliest since last December. The trend was upward from the start and advances were well in the majority despite some recession near the close.

Tax Bill Encourages.

New buying was attributed partly to the senate finance committee's completion of the tax bill containing relief for some corporations and to improved war news. Inflation views persisted as a bullish influence despite the latest economic controls.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 0.2 of a point at 38.7, equaling its previous 1942 top established last January. The rail average was the highest since August, 1941. For the week an advance of 0.9 was added to the gain of 0.8 the preceding week for the 60 stocks. Transfers of 445,920 shares were the largest for any two hour trading day since Jan. 3.

CHICAGO PRICES HIGHER.

Chicago Stock exchange prices advanced yesterday on turnover of 19,000 shares. Of 70 issues traded, 41 were higher, 14 declined, and 15 were unchanged.

Volume leaders included Chicago corporation and Peabody Coal B, both unchanged, and General Motors and Commonwealth Edison, both up ⅛.

Chicago Bank Clearings in September Are Larger

Chicago banks cleared $1,739,900,000 of checks in September, compared with $1,716,300,000 in the corresponding 1941 period, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. For last week clearings were $438,300,000, compared with $405,400,000 in the preceding week and $415,100,000 in the 1941 week. The report follows:

PRICE RULE ROBS MARKET OF BEST BEEF, IS CHARGE

Longfed Steer Supply Cut, Packers Report.

Predictions made several months ago that the Office of Price Administration's method of controling beef prices would reduce both the quantity and quality of meat coming into the market have been borne out, Chicago packing interests declared yesterday.

They estimated that 10,000 to 15,000 tons of potential beef monthly is being sacrificed because OPA ceilings are too low to cover the extra cost of feeding steers long enough to attain choice and prime market ratings.

Last week's rule placing an overall limit of 23 cents a pound on carcasses of such beef was regarded as another blow to the producers of prime cattle in the corn belt.

Lower Yield Per Animal.

A survey conducted by the department of agriculture shows a steady decline in average weights of cattle butchered since the beef ceilings were imposed last May, as well as a lower yield of beef per animal, indicating poorer quality of meat. A higher yield of meat per head usually means higher quality of the beef, packers said. During August, the latest period for which official figures for the entire country are available, packers under federal inspection butchered a total of 1,103,000 cattle, which averaged 37 pounds per head lighter than last April, just before beef seilings were set.

Altho the number butchered yielded a record tonnage of beef, due to the large number handled, the yield was 25 to 30 million pounds below a normal output from such a total, it was said.

Chicago Weights Decline.

A survey in the Chicago stockyards indicates another drop in the average weights during September. Last month's average weight of steers in the yards, which handle a large share of the longfed cattle produced in the corn belt and heavier weights than the country as a whole, was placed at 1,075 pounds, off 24 pounds since April.

By limiting the prices that packers can charge for top beef at abnormally low levels compared with what they can get for cheaper meats, the OPA is wiping out the margin of profit for farmers of the corn belt who feed out steers to heavy weights, it was said. Farmers producing lower grades of beef animals are getting the highest prices on record.

BOND SALES SET THREE YEAR TOP FOR A SATURDAY

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Transactions of $9,129,800 face value in today's bond market were the highest for any Saturday since the flurry brought on by the outbreak of the European war. Sales on Sept. 9, 1939, were $19,827,000. Last Saturday's transactions totaled $4,974,000.

Rails, with gains of more than a point in some cases, led a general advance in the short session. Buying was concentrated in low and medium priced categories.

Foreign bonds were evenly divided between plus and minuses.

TIES OF DEVOTION UNITE A BROKEN WORLD FOR DAY

Chicago to Join in Rites Spanning the Globe.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

At 6 o'clock last night, Chicago time, in Wellington, New Zealand, which is 10:30 this morning in the islands "down under," all Anglican, Protestant, and Lutheran churches opened the Third World Communion Sunday services which will continue with the sun around the world. Chicago churches will participate in the rites today.

This year World Communion Sunday services hold a dramatic content unknown to days of peace. They represent an unbroken fellowship reaching around a world divided by war. For example, an hour and a half after New Zealand services begin the fellowship of the communion will reach Sydney and Melbourne in Australia. Chaplains on warships in the South Pacific will be administering the rite to sailors, marines, and airmen.

Rites Extend Even to Tokio.

In some of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's outposts chaplains will offer the consecrated wine and bread to soldiers, while far to the north in Tokio and other Japanese cities Toyohiko Kagawa's faithful Christians will break the bread of fellowship in some Japanese counterpart of the ancient catacombs.

What will happen to the heroes of Bataan who still are prisoners in the Philippines, by way of spiritual solace on World Communion Sunday, was known only to them last night. The Christian generalissimo, Chiang Kai-shek and Mme. Chiang, probably received the bread of fellowship in Chungking. And so it continued thruout Chicago's night.

Hour by hour it was Calcutta and Bombay; Moscow, Jerusalem, and Capetown; until the midnight hour passed and Berlin was reached at 1 o'clock today, and Confessional Christians braved the secret police and also supped in world fellowship. Then the British islands, Vichy, Iceland, Rio de Janiero, and on to New York.

Chain of Devotion.

As people gather for communion services in their own Chicago churches this morning, as well as throughout the nation, thoughts will be uppermost for American fighting men and the fellowship of broken bread. The Rev. Carlyle Adams, editor of the Presbyterian Church Times, spoke of the day as a chain of devotion around a broken world.

Two Notable Services.

Two notable services will be held, one in Oak Park and the other in Evanston. Dr. Henry Smith Leiper of New York, head of the American section of the World Council of Churches, will speak this afternoon at First Congregational church, Evanston, and tonight at First Congregational church, Oak Park. The World council was one of the coöperating agencies in charge of World Communion Sunday.

BATTALION FIRE CHIEF DIES; IS 2D VICTIM OF BLAZE

Capt. William Steed, 52 years old, acting chief of the 8th battalion of the fire department, died in Mercy Hospital yesterday, the second victim of a 5-11 fire that swept a one story garage at 2930 South Wells street Friday night. Steed was caught in the wreckage of a falling wall. Thomas Fitzgerald, member of truck company 14, also caught in the collapse, was dead when pulled from the wreckage.

Six other firemen were injured and much valuable motor equipment belonging to the Acme Truck Rentals company, a subsidiary of the Interstate Motor Freight System, was destroyed. William J. O'Connor, Chicago manager of the Interstate company, said 35 pieces of equipment, mostly truck tractors and tires, were destroyed. He estimated the loss at more than $100,000 in equipment alone.

The blaze started when a welding torch ignited a wooden section of the building.

Mohawk, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP).—Earl Brown, 28 years old, a war plant worker, was shot to death today in a family quarrel over his draft reclassification from 3-A to 1-A.

PARENT SUBSIDY TERMED LIKELY AS BIRTHS SLUMP

Decrease Perils Nation, Rally Warned.

BY GAIL COMPTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 3.—America will face a population decline in 25 years which will be so serious that unless it becomes national policy to maintain the family as an institution for the transmission of race, wealth, and culture it will make little difference who wins the war.

This prediction was made today by Dr. O. E. Baker, professor of economic geography at the University of Maryland, before nearly 5,000 persons attending the opening meeting of the 20th annual national Catholic Rural Life conference.

Dr. Baker said the burden of maintaining the nation's birth rate lies with the rural population, but the migration of millions of farm boys and girls to cities in the last few years has resulted in a sharp decrease in the rate of rural reproduction.

Shift in Births Described.

"In 1920," Baker said, "10 adults on the farm were raising 17 children, while 10 adults in the city were raising 10 children. The farming people thus were raising two-thirds more than enough children to hold the farm population stationary, and city people were just about reproducing themselves.

"Ten adults on the farm were raising between 13 and 14 children in 1940, and 10 adults in the city were raising 7 children. The rural surplus of children now is not enough to balance the urban deficit."

Dr. Baker said the number of old people is increasing steadily and predicted that within 25 years the number of deaths probably would balance the decreasing number of births, resulting in a stationary population.

"This condition gradually will merge into a steadily declining population," he said.

He said that because of the drift toward dependency on the state for the transmission of culture and wealth, it is likely the state will eventually subsidize parenthood to compensate for the declining population.

Consequences Termed Profound.

"Ten per cent of the families of the nation, if provided with a little more capital in the form of fertilizer, agricultural machinery, good seed, and other materials, could provide an adequate diet and ample clothing for the remaining 90 per cent," Baker said. "But if this 90 per cent has as low a birth rate as characterizes urban people now, there would be a serious decline in population and profound economic and social consequences."

Baker emphasized the stake the church has in rural areas, asserting the failure of the family to function adequately results from lack of religion and the domination of materialistic concepts of success.

The rôle of youth on the farm and the teaching of religion in rural areas were discussed at the opening day of the conference. Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard will speak Monday.

DAY by DAY on the FARM

By BEN MARKLAND

Aged Elm Nears End.

October 3, 1942.

AN American elm which was a sapling when Indians roamed northern Illinois is nearing the end of its life on the Fox river farm. A majestic tree—five feet in diameter and undoubtedly 150 years old—it has received every attention science can provide, but a recent flash of lightning caused such severe damage that it probably will die.

The elm stands in a little depression about 200 yards south of the Fox river and about the same distance north of the Fox road. When the property was taken over as an experimental farm the tree was in poor condition, with a huge cavity in its trunk.

Surgeons Fill Cavity.

In 1929 tree surgeons were called in and said the elm could be saved. Three men went to work cleaning the trunk cavity just as a dentist cleans a decayed tooth before filling it. The decayed space was large enough to hold two men. Twenty-five bags of cement and about 3½ cubic yards of gravel were used to fill the cavity, which extended from near the ground to a point 25 feet up the trunk.

In addition to this major task, the tree surgeons eliminated decayed branches, treated smaller cavities, and used steel cables to support the major branches in the lower part of the tree.

The forces of nature which had doomed the stately old tree to death have been stayed for 13 years by the repair work done in 1929. When we saw the tree this week, however, it appeared that nature has hit back in an effort to continue the elm's decline. Lightning struck the new growth which had formed over the filling, ripping a 20 foot strip of wood alongside the cement. Near the top of the tree a large branch was broken and the steel cables which held several of the lower branches were jolted out of place by the bolt.

New Wood Ripped Away.

It is doubtful if the farm management will make a second attempt to save the tree. New wood which has been growing over the filling since 1929 was ripped away, leaving exposed wood which will decay rapidly unless additional costly repairs are made soon.

The men on the Fox river farm are heartened by the game bird crop visible this fall. They have seen ringneck pheasants in many corners of the farm, particularly in the woodlots bordering the river. A representative of the state department of conservation, Milton Pittman, recently visited the farm and checked on the game bird life. He reported an excellent pheasant population, found several coveys of quail, and found a sufficiency of feed and cover.

THE LADY IS A SPY!

TRIBUNE

Foreword

The following story, the first of a series, is based on the true experience of a young woman detective who has been drawn into the espionage war. She is a typically American girl, intelligent, personable, attractive. For her protection all names and scenes in the following account are completely fictitious, altho the events are based on an actual experience.

By LLOYD WENDT

PERHAPS you've met her. Pert, blue-eyed young woman with a penchant for tailored suits and a snub nose that crinkles when she laughs. She looks like those pictures of air line hostesses in the newspaper advertisements. Or a schoolgirl with twin bows in her auburn hair. Certainly you wouldn't think of her as a familiar of spies and criminals.

But Diana has haunted the underworld from New York to San Francisco. She's trapped smugglers on the Mexican border, racketeers in Chicago, extortionists in St. Louis, dope runners on the west coast, and spies and saboteurs from Detroit to the oil fields of Texas. Some of the men she's put in prison have threatened to kill her when they get out. Others write her tender little notes, always hoping it wasn't Danny who brought them to justice. She rarely appears in court, never takes publicity. Her job is quietly to snare criminals and then disappear.

It was two years ago that Danny entered the service of the nation in the dangerous work of under-cover operator. She became a counterspy. Not officially, in government employment, but in her usual capacity as a private detective.

Danny had just completed a routine accident case when she was summoned to the home office of her agency and told to report at once to a small machine gun plant in a middle western city.

"This is a new one, Danny," Mr. Allen, chief of the agency, told her. "A spy case. The C——— company makes anti-aircraft machine guns for the British. The factory was converted from a hardware supply plant. They're supposed to put out 100 guns a month, and they're running 32. Things just keep happening. They're afraid it's saboteurs, but they're not sure. They may be wrong, and that's the reason they don't want to call in government men just now. But here's the layout. . . . ."

Detectives had been assigned to work in the plant and discovered nothing. Yet misadventures kept occurring under their very noses.

"Some clever operator is responsible," Allen continued. "Our men in the plant haven't found a clew. But some one is getting orders from somewhere, and in every chain there must be a weak link—if we can only come across the chain. We've investigated everybody from the president of the company on down. You can take the reports along, but they won't help much. Apparently we'll have to work in from outside the plant. Go down there and learn what you can."

Danny took the next train for the plant. Garbed in slacks and sweater, her long curls about her shoulders, her anklets and low-heeled saddle shoes belying her years, she began a tour of the taverns in the neighborhood of the plant. She wanted men to look twice at her, to find her old enough to be interesting and young enough to be harmless. Her costume, she thought, would mark her as a girl easy to know, even if a man was in overalls and grimy from the shop. She wanted men to talk to her, to ply drinks and ask for dates. She wanted them to pose and boast and perhaps drop their secrets.

So Danny visited the taverns, sipped drinks and dated, cultivated bartenders and workmen and traveling salesmen. She even sold a few subscriptions for the magazine distributor she claimed to represent. But she learned practically nothing. Some of the men talked about the troubles at the plant, but it was easy to [illegible] bosses and the managers who [illegible] the guns there. The plant never seemed to break a few production records, and it couldn't even get started. Most of the men worked 12 hours a

1 Jo Hayden (Judy Garland) and Red Metcalf (George Murphy) are a vaudeville team playing the small theaters in the middle west of 1915. Jo has two ambitions: to play the Palace theater, New York, and to send her brother thru college.

2 Jo meets Harry Palmer (Gene Kelly), a cocky young actor, who persuades her to leave Red and team with him. Red, who loves her, convinces Jo it is the right thing for her to do.

3 The new team of Palmer and Hayden, too, have one desire—to play New York's Palace theater. But two years pass and they are still on the small time.

4 Harry doesn't return Jo's love and gives her many unhappy moments when he meets and falls for Eve Minard (Marta Eggerth), a successful French stage star touring the United States.

5 Eve is fascinated by the fast-talking, handsome actor and offers him the chance of touring with her troupe and playing the Palace, but without Jo. Harry, in telling Jo, realizes for the first time that he loves her. They plan to be married the day they play the Palace.

6 While playing a small theater near New York City, Harry and Jo are a sensation. As a result they are offered a contract to play the Palace, and decide to celebrate.

7 In the midst of their gay celebration, Harry receives his draft card, and this ruins their chance to play the Palace, the goal that was the answer to all their ambitions.

8 Determined to let nothing stand in the way of playing the big time, Harry, by ruse, succeeds in obtaining a deferment. Jo finds this out and leaves him, going out on her own.

9 Heartsick over Harry's lack of patriotism, Jo goes to France to entertain the soldiers and becomes the darling of the armed forces.

10 Harry realizes his mistake and tries to enlist in the army, but now is turned down. Unable to locate Jo, he joins the YMCA and sails for France. Here he meets Jo entertaining the soldiers in an army canteen.

11 Harry vindicates himself and proves to be a real hero by saving the lives of a company of soldiers caught in a German bombardment. He, Jo, and Red are reunited after the armistice, and it isn't long, of course, before they make the grade and get a date at the Palace. (THE END.)

Women at Work

ENCORE!

It is not unusual for the connoisseur who smokes Dutch Masters cigars to buy three, four or five of these fine cigars at a time. Or even a whole box. He knows that one good smoke deserves another. And he looks forward to the constant repetition of the pleasure he got from his first Dutch Masters.

LADIES HAVE THEIR DAY!

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

(Copyright: 1942: The Chicago Tribune.)

HOLLYWOOD'S most pressing problem today is what to do about the leading man situation. Producers sit with pencils poised over casting lists, but before they can check a name the actor's whisked off to the army, navy, air corps, or marines, and they have to start all over again. Gone are the good old days when every lot had a stable full of "comers" under stock contracts, more often than not callously held back while the studio heads extracted the last drop of box office from their first string players.

But, like all Hollywood headaches, the present one will yield to sensible treatment, and already the problem's being worked out. The gals are taking care of it. They're playing the queen over the jack and taking plenty of tricks, if we can judge by the crop of new pictures in the making.

The most outstanding is "Stand By to Die," the story of a woman round-the-world flyer, played by Rosalind Russell and rumored to be the life of Amelia Earhart, tho the studio vigorously denies it. Time was when the helmet and goggles were exclusively masculine props, but not any more. And when this legend reaches the screen you'll find Roz as convincing as any male hero. (Anna Neagle's completed the life of Amy Johnson Mollison, "Wings and the Woman," which is another to effectually dispel any lingering ideas of a "for men only" sign on aeronautics.) Helping herself to a male rôle is nothing new for Roz. In "My Girl Friday" she took Lee Tracy's rôle in "The Front Page" and turned it into a girl star reporter with great success.

Screen writers have been quick to seize the cue and are turning out scripts in which women are given parts men used to play. Producer David Hempstead has "Government Girl" coming up, and in her next, "Lady in the Dark," Ginger Rogers plays a magazine editor. In "Woman of the Year" Katie Hepburn was a writer-lecturer celebrity who placed her co-star, Spence Tracy, in a part formerly reserved for frustrated wives. And Joan Crawford, as the hard-boiled head of a trucking business in "They All Kissed the Bride," left little to be desired of the male lead. Joan will do "Women in Uniform," a story of the new femme army, from which you can draw your own conclusions.

Charles Rogers is making "The Powers Girl," an all-woman cast with the exception of George Murphy, Dennis Day, and Alan Mowbray. Some excepting! And "The Cover Girl," with Jinx Falkenburg and 15 lovelies, will be along the same lines, totally swamping two lone males, not yet found. "City Without Men" has one of the critters tagging along with Linda Darnell, Glenda Farrell, and eight other gals.

In "The Cat People" Jane Randolph designs ships as a naval architect, and in "Highways by Night" she was a transportation executive. In "You Belong to Me" Barbara Stanwyck played a doctor, as did Maggie Sullavan in "Appointment for Love." And Lupe Velez will tear thru "Ladies' Day" with the wives of 10 baseball players in hot pursuit. Too bad they didn't let Westbrook Pegler write that story. His sardonic slant on what happens to a ball club when you let down the bars and allow your wife to break down all rules, make up her own as she goes along, putting in every crackpot as she sees fit, has had millions of readers chuckling over their coffee cups. And 'twould be even funnier on the screen than it is in print—or have I gone overboard?

To me the whole male and female situation is rather frightening. I was never one of these gals who hold it's a "woman's world" in spite of what the Russian women are accomplishing today. That's all very well for Russia, where the situation up until a few years back was pretty gloomy for women. To be on an equal footing is a great step forward to them. But here, where our standard of living is the highest in the world, where women were given the vote and then did little with it, to be told that we'll have to "get out and get under" is pretty grim. And while I think it's grand to shout that women are men's equal, and isn't freedom wonderful, I don't mind telling you it will be tragic for me at least to have to live in a woman's world. Give me a man for the head of the family. Even tho I haven't got one, the idea still appeals to me and always will.

However, it's a welcome chance that a lot of our actresses will get today to show off their abilities to the utmost. But I still think life is much more satisfying on the stage and screen with plenty of Clark Gables, Jimmy Cagneys, Walter Pidgeons, Charles Boyers around. And then think how decorative they are! And I think the Greeks were right to worship the male form divine instead of the female. Some rabid suffraget will come along and try to knock my block off for that last one, I suppose, but at least I've had my say.

I know women are capable, efficient, look trim and smart in their snappy uniforms, make excellent mechanics and drivers and pilots and radio operators, lawyers, doctors, business executives. I know, I know—I admit everything. But I still like to see plenty of men around. I'm maybe just an old fuddle-duddle left over from the last, or lost, generation, but I'm tired to death of seeing women "doing anything a man can do." I'd a hundred times rather see them doing the things a man can't do.

• • •

And when this mess is finally cleared up, and our Jimmy Stewarts and Clark Gables and Henry Fondas and Ty Powerses and all the rest of them, God willing, come marching home, I'm going to be right down there at the depot in my best hat, with a brass band and a big red carpet with "WELCOME" on it in letters you can read a mile off! Because that's the way the good Lord meant things to be—and that's the way I like 'em. And not until the day of miracles, when men become mothers, will I admit that they're our equals—instead of our superiors. Now go ahead and shoot!

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

Paul Jones

JOHN PAUL JONES, colorful naval hero of the Revolutionary war, was born in the parish of Kirkbean, Kirkcudbright, Scotland, July 6, 1747, the fifth child of John Paul, a gardener. It was not until he was about 26 years old and a resident of Virginia that he assumed the surname Jones. The reason for this never has been publicly known.

When he was 12 years old he was apprenticed to a sea captain and taken on several cruises. These gave him an early knowledge of the sea that was to serve him well in later life. Obtaining a berth as acting midshipman in the British navy, he served in this capacity for a short while, and then thereafter sailed on slave ships for two years, first as a third mate and later as a first mate. The slave trade, however, proved disgusting to him, and he gave up his berth as first mate and sailed from the West Indies for England in the ship John. On this voyage the captain and the first mate of the John both died, and John Paul took command of the vessel and sailed it safely into port.

The owners of the ship were so well pleased at this that they made John Paul captain of the ship, which he sailed on several cruises to the West Indies. He then purchased the ship Betsey and set sail for the island of Tobago in the West Indies, where his crew mutinied. In a fight that ensued John Paul slew the ringleader of the mutineers. Rather than wait at Tobago for the next session of court to try him for this offense, he fled, and from that time on until 1775 his record is obscure. He is known to have resided in Virginia for a brief while in 1773, and there is a legend that when he was fleeing from Tobago he boarded a pirate ship and served upon it as a seaman for a short time.

In 1775 he appeared in Philadelphia as John Paul Jones and provided with a continental congress commission as senior naval lieutenant. As an American naval officer his first assignment was to arm the ship Alfred and enlist a crew for it. This vessel he commanded in an expedition against the British in the Bahama Islands. In the spring of 1776 he was given command of the Providence, and for several months he was engaged in convoying merchant ships bringing supplies into New York. Elevated to captain in August, 1776, he conducted raids against British shipping, and in the following November he sailed for Newfoundland as commander of his former ship, the Alfred. Blocked by ice, he turned to the coast of Nova Scotia, along which he made a series of raids.

In the autumn of 1777 Jones sailed for France in command of the Ranger. A new frigate built in the Netherlands was to have been turned over to him, but the British government protested to the Dutch against releasing the ship, and Jones was forced to remain on the Ranger. With this ship he surprised the port of Whitehaven, captured two forts that commanded its harbor, but failed in his attempt to set fire to the shipping in the harbor. A few days later Jones captured the British sloop Drake and took it to France as a prize.

The greatest exploit of Jones' career now was drawing near. An old merchant vessel had been refitted as a man-of-war for him, and he named it the Bon Homme Richard, in honor of Benjamin Franklin, author of "Poor Richard's Almanac." In June, 1779, the Bon Homme Richard sailed from France, accompanied by a new American frigate, the Alliance, and several small French vessels. The Alliance was under the command of a Frenchman, Pierre Landais. A plan to attack the port of Leith miscarried, but as the Bon Homme Richard and the Alliance were returning to France they encountered off the east coast of England the heavily armed British vessel Serapis, under Capt. Richard Pearson, and the sloop Countess of Scarborough. Landais left Jones to do the fighting.

In one of the most desperate battles of American naval annals the Bon Homme Richard battered the Serapis into submission. The American ship was so badly damaged that it sank a few hours after the fight, but Jones took his crew and his prisoners safely back to France in the captured Serapis. The king of France gave him a gold-hilted sword and made him a chevalier, but he was to see no more action in that war.

The American congress awarded Jones a gold medal in 1787 for his distinguished service. The next year he entered the naval service of Catherine the Great of Russia, was given an admiral's commission and employed in directing the Russian naval campaign against the Turks on the Black sea. Jealousy of Russian naval officers, however, deprived him of credit for his victories over the Turks, and he finally returned to Paris to live in retirement.

He died in Paris on July 18, 1792, at the age of 45, and was buried there in the St. Louis cemetery for foreign Protestants. His remains were removed to America in 1913 and placed in a crypt in the chapel of the naval academy at Annapolis.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self addressed envelope.

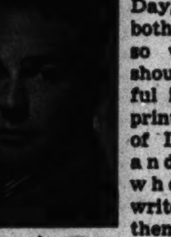
Dear Miss Tinée: Last night I saw "Kings Row" for the third time, and each time I see it I like it more. I think it is one of the most excellent and powerful pictures I have seen in years. Everything about it was superb.

As for the characters of "Kings Row," to me the most outstanding in the whole picture was Kaaren Verne. I have been a great admirer of Miss Verne ever since I saw her in "Underground." Could you please print something about her in your column? I know that's asking a lot, but I would appreciate it so much. Also could you tell me where I could write for her picture?

Orchids to Kaaren Verne for—well, just for Kaaren Verne. And orchids to you, Miss Tinée, for one of the finest columns in this paper.

Gratefully, TOM GRAY.

Dear Mr. Gray: You and I don't agree about "Kings Row," but that's our American privilege, isn't it? As to Miss Verne: She was born in Berlin in 1918. Her overwhelming urge for the theater led to phenomenal progress. Her stage career started in Germany, then a year in Denmark and for shorter periods in Holland, Norway, and Sweden. England was the next step. Before she had time to try the British theater Warner Brothers' English studio signed her for a lead in a film made there. Shortly after England entered the war she went to Hollywood and has appeared in several productions. Her address is Warners-First National studio, Burbank, Cal.



Lew Ayres

Dear Miss Tinée: I saw the picture "Fingers at the Window," with Lew Ayres and Lorraine Day, and I liked both performers so well that I should be grateful if you would print a picture of Lew Ayres and tell me where I could write to both of them.

Thanks a lot.
MARJORIE J. LYMAN.

Dear Marjorie: I guess we can oblige. You can write to Miss Day and Mr. Ayres in care of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Culver City, Cal. Lew Ayres is in the army, but it is possible his mail will be forwarded to him. You're very welcome!

UNDERGROUND! Poland's Unseen Forces Act

● This is the second of a series of articles on the underground movement in occupied countries of Europe. Last week the activities of Poland's guerrilla fighters under Major Kalina were recounted. Material for this series has been obtained from underground newspapers and radio broadcasts or from refugees. No material is used that will in any way endanger persons still active in occupied Europe.

"On July 4 the Gestapo surrounded one of the villas in Czerniakow. An SS detachment armed with machine guns also arrived. In the villa they found our printing plant, which had recently been transferred from Mokotow, where the situation was beginning to be dangerous. When the Germans got no answer to their knocking on the doors, they shattered windows with their hand grenades and fired into the building with their machine guns. As a result two of our people were killed and two others died of wounds in the hospital. The owner of the villa, Michael Kruk, his wife and two sons, aged 15 and 17, and all the inhabitants of the nearby villas were arrested and shot. Altogether 83 persons perished."

The attempts of the Germans to exterminate all persons connected with the publication of the Voice of Poland did not delay the next issue of that paper by a single day. Nor did the execution of 120 persons for their connection with the Dziennik Polsk (Polish Daily) in Warsaw have any deterring effect on the Poles in the underground. The publication of illegal Polish newspapers has increased until at present there are almost 100 being issued.

These fighting newspapers are the backbone of the underground movement in Poland. They provide for communication among the secret organizations and with the Polish government in exile. They deliver instructions to the coöperating civilian population, and keep up morale by acquainting the various, scattered underground units with the progress of the struggle in other parts of the country. They gibe and mock their German tormentors: The humorous paper Lipa wished Hitler a merry Christmas and "as many allies as possible, each of them as useful as Mussolini." Most important, they debunk Nazi propaganda and bring to the people the forbidden news of the world. So long as the Polish underground newspapers continue to circulate, the people of Poland can know that they are not alone in their battle.

The effectiveness of the underground press was demonstrated on Sept. 1, 1940, the anniversary of the German invasion, when Polish government officials abroad issued a proclamation urging Poles to remain indoors from 4 to 6 p. m. that day as a demonstration against the Germans. The message was carried by the underground press. Promptly at 4 o'clock the streets of the cities of Poland were deserted. The Nazis paraded their military might, but there were no Poles to see them. At 6 p. m., however, the Polish people issued from their houses, marched to the sites of the various national monuments the Germans had destroyed, including the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Warsaw, and paid tribute to the honor of their country with wreaths and flowers. They were set upon by the Nazi police, and many of the leaders were arrested and beaten.

This demonstration of the power of the underground was a complete success. Even the Germans were forced to admit it. The following year they raided widely in advance of the anniversary, searching for the ubiquitous newspapers. They found nothing. In Poland, possession of such publications means death.

Since Gestapo, Elite Guards, and regular troops are constantly watchful, the publication of an underground newspaper is a hazardous business. All supplies must be obtained secretly, in a country that is a vast concentration camp. Editing and printing must be accomplished in hiding—in attics, cellars, and barns. The staffs must move their equipment frequently, to escape detection and for the protection of persons whose property is used as a hideout. Once the paper is published, the problem of distribution is great.

Following is a report from an underground paper:

"In August, 1940, two girls were seized in a street of Warsaw, one 14, the other 16. Illegal journals were found on them. They were both taken and held in prison for three weeks, then they were shot and their mutilated bodies handed over to their parents."

And another:

"In Poznan, a Pole named Nurzynski, caught distributing a bulletin with wireless information, was sentenced to death by beheading. The sentence was carried out. Some 100 people were arrested as suspected recipients of the bulletin."

On June 8, of this year, 15 persons accused of distributing the forbidden newspapers were hanged in a public square in Poznan. The Germans refused to allow the bodies to be taken down before 48 hours had elapsed, intending that the grewsome sight should be a warning to the populace.

Because of the circulation difficulties, underground papers publish small editions, usually two or three thousand copies, and the pages are about 5 by 7 inches in size, making them easy to conceal. Primary distributors are trusted agents of the underground, who pass out packets of the papers to their close friends. The friends in turn continue the distribution to leaders of the various underground "cells," and every member of a cell in turn may read them. In this way a score of trusted persons will see each paper. No circulation list is ever kept, for the discovery of such a list by the Nazis would prove fatal to every person whose name is on it.

The Germans have made desperate efforts to stop the publication of underground newspapers. But neither death nor torture have proved effective. As fast as one printing plant is destroyed, another begins operation. The Germans attempted to learn the names of persons willing to receive such newspapers by issuing some of their own and distributing them in the market places. All persons accepting the papers from the Polish speaking agents were shortly afterward arrested. Consequently, not only must the distributors of the journals exercise great care, but the recipients must be equally wary.

In spite of the great difficulties, the underground papers circulate widely, one of them alone publishing a weekly edition of 12,000 copies, which are read by more than 100,000 persons. By short wave radio they obtain the news of the world, and they get it to their readers quickly. Wiadomosci Polskie (Polish News) published Prime Minister Winston Churchill's Jan. 27 speech only two days after he delivered it.

The Polish underground press, together with the short wave radio stations, are the forces that keep up Polish courage and enable almost the whole of the population to resist the Fascist invaders. But it is the fierce guerrilla bands and the daring saboteurs who inspire their countrymen with deeds of violence against the Germans.

After Maj. Kalina was ordered to disband his forces operating near Kielce in April, 1940, his men dispersed in small groups to resume their operations in various parts of the country. Three large bands were formed in western Poland, near the Russian occupied territory, and these partisan fighters have continued for three years to harass the Germans. Following the German invasion of Russia, they obtained new supplies of arms and ammunition, and they now are assisted by Russian guerrillas.

These forces, called "brigands" by the Nazis, live off the country, raid isolated German garrisons, smash communication systems, destroy military supplies, and generally hamper the German effort against Russia. On one occasion, these guerrillas captured a German locomotive and crashed it into an oncoming Nazi troop train. On another they connected a power line with a German military telephone system, holding up enemy operations for hours and, it is reported, electrocuting some German officers when they picked up their telephones.

The object of these fighters is to destroy supplies and never to permit the enemy to rest. The ceaseless sniping, the quick, stabbing raids, the traps and ambushes get on the nerves of the disciplined Germans. For every man actually killed by the Polish partisans, scores are immobilized by the constant need to protect the supply lines.

On some occasions the Germans have gone into the swamps in search of their tormentors. Such expeditions have proved disastrous. The Polish partisans wait in ambush, kill off their pursuers and take their equipment, or, if the enemy is too formidable, prudently retreat until the Germans are exhausted by the hunt.

But it is the support provided the underground by the Polish civilian population in general that has made German occupation so difficult. Shortly after their victorious invasion, the Nazis sought to force the Polish farmers to produce grain for the troops, and they began establishing factories in Poland, expecting to use slave labor in the production of war materials.

Soon the sign of the turtle replaced the Polish eagle in the public places of the country. It is the sign of the slow down. The underground, thru its press, urged Polish workers everywhere to sabotage the German

MOVIE STAR ALBUM

Special
Section
Oct. 4, 1942

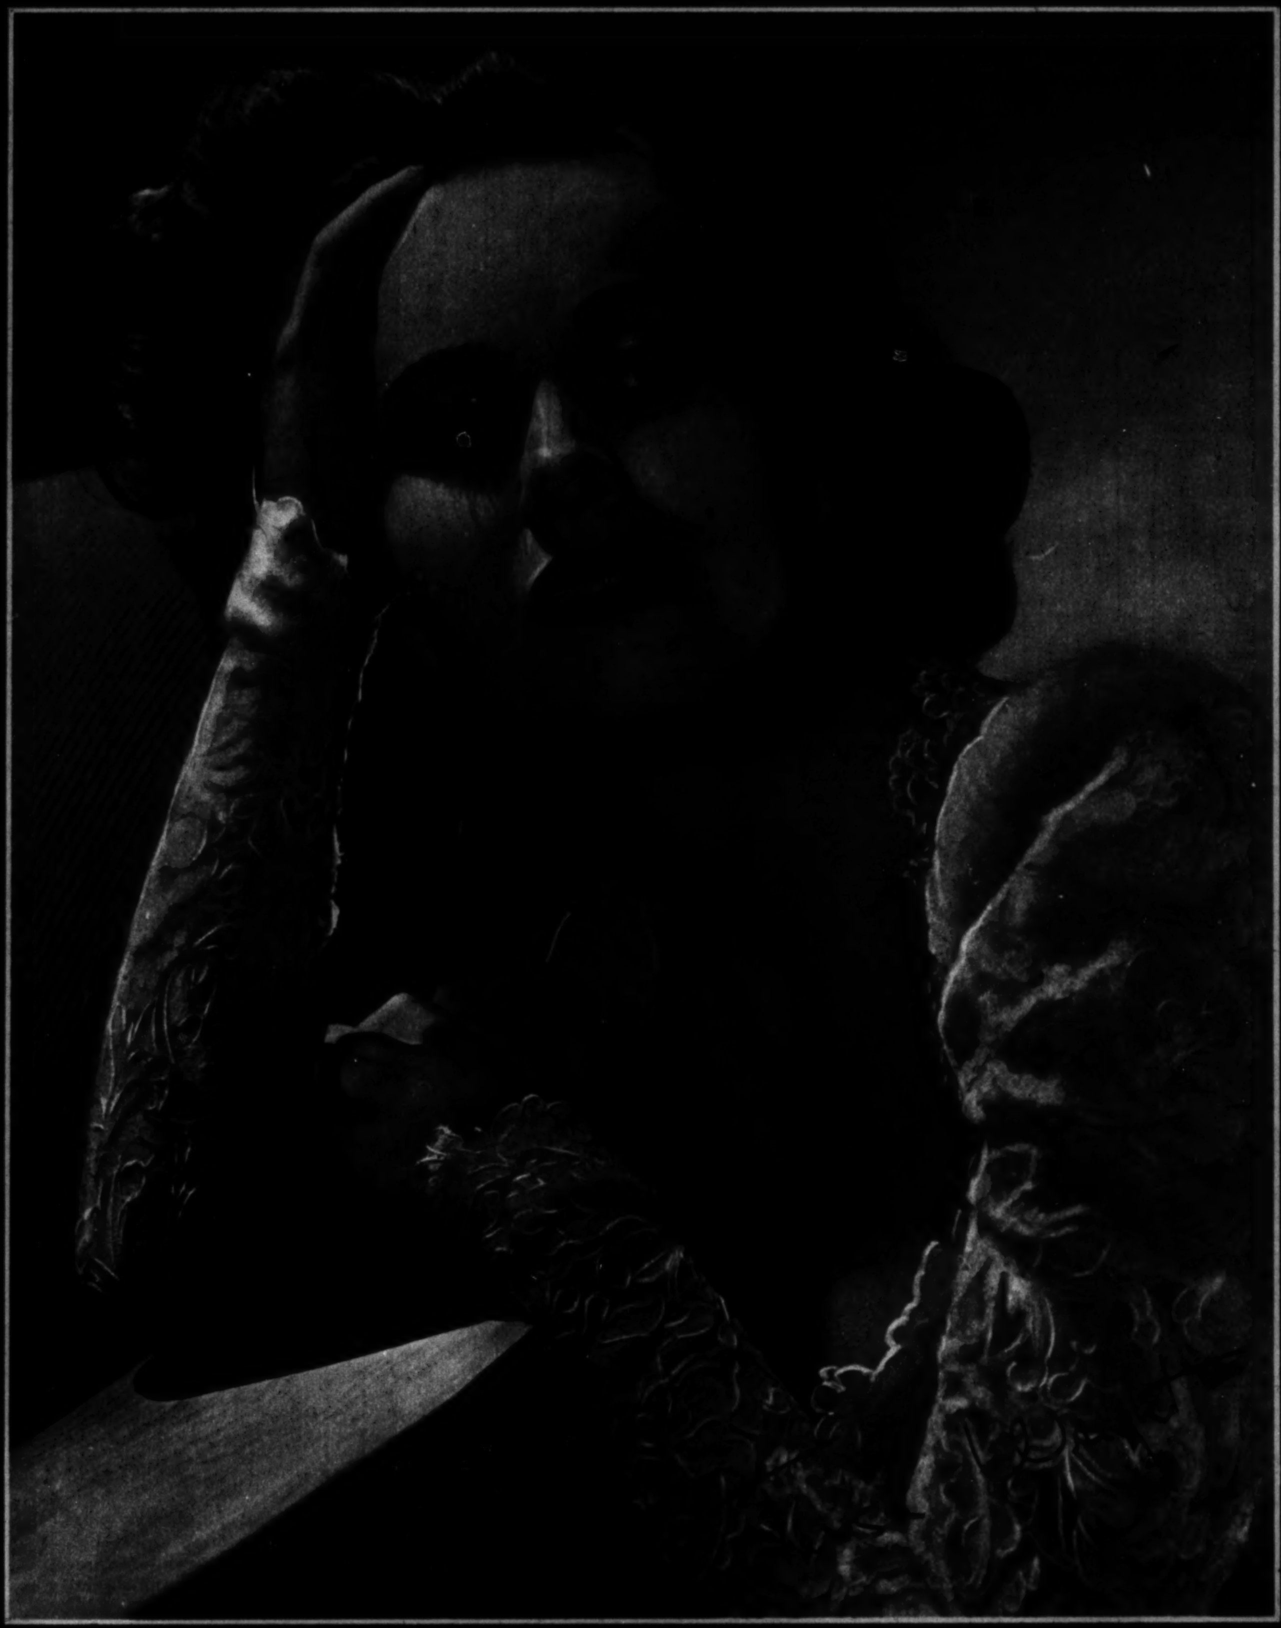
Miss Wright was almost as bad, she continues, when Sam Goldwyn proffered her first rôle in Hollywood, as Bette Davis' daughter in "The Little Foxes." She scored heavily in that important part, followed it with a performance that stole the picture in "Mrs. Miniver," then won the rôle of Lou Gehrig's bride in "Pride of the Yankees."

Teresa began studying to be an actress with her teacher of public speaking at Maplewood, N. J., High school. For two summers she trained at the Wharf theater in Provincetown. She got her first legitimate job in the lead in a road company of "Our Town," went back to the straw hat circuit for a summer in New England, and then in 1940 achieved the goal of every young actress' dreams, success in a Broadway hit. The play was "Life with Father"; it was her performance in this that prompted Goldwyn to employ her.

With all good wishes
Walter Pidgeon



ON THE FOUR PAGES of this special section are portraits, autographs, and career stories of 49 of the featured players who make movies in Hollywood for your pleasure.

Similar special sections will appear on coming Sundays. They will include the entire galaxy of Hollywood stardom and near-stardom. By the time you turn to the last page of the final special section you will have an album containing portraits, autographs, and life stories of well over 200 film actors and actresses, and it will call the roll of virtually all players whose names are familiar to movie fans.

In the portraits to be presented you will meet old acquaintances whose careers date from the era of the silent movies. For example, Norma Shearer, who has been in the films since 1920; Edmund Lowe, since 1923, and Joan Crawford, since 1925. But, since art usually is fleeting for picture stars, many of those who appear will be comparative newcomers, and some will be very new.

These pages, therefore, will afford you a timely reintroduction to the players of Hollywood.

Mickey Rooney

Born in St. John, N. B., Walter Pidgeon journeyed to Boston after the World war and found a job as a bank runner. He played briefly in stock, toured as a singing partner of Elsie Janis, and won quick stardom on Broadway. His early appearances in Hollywood were in musicals; he interrupted these to play on Broadway, and when he returned to movies in 1936 he stipulated that he would sing no more. Pidgeon and his wife, the former Ruth Walker, reside in Beverly Hills. He is 6 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 195 pounds, has black hair and blue eyes.

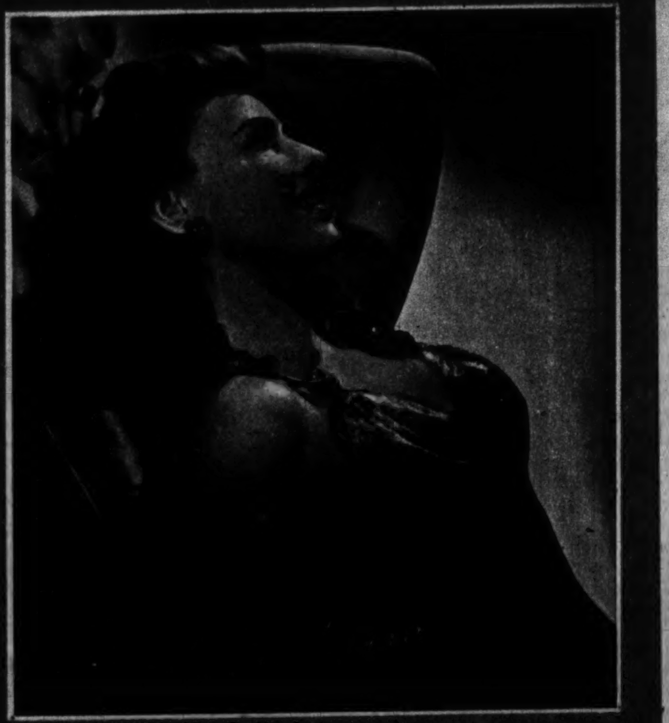
An old trouper at 21, Mickey Rooney has been rated the most popular screen star at the box office for three years and more. Originally he was Joe Yule Jr., son of veteran troupers. He made his first stage appearance when he was 7 months old, sang across the footlights when 15 months old, made his first appearance in movies when he was 5. Before he was 6 he had been in 46 pictures, 40 of them Mickey McGuires; since then he has been in twoscore more. Mickey is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has blond hair and blue eyes.

You remember, of course, that it was the daring European film "Ecstasy" that broke up Hedy Lamarr's first marriage and won a Hollywood contract for the alluringly beautiful Viennese. Her first American picture, "Algiers," with Charles Boyer; her most recent, "Crossroads." Hedy was married briefly to Gene Markey. She will be 27 next month, is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs some 120 pounds. She is fond of green salads, walking, skiing, swimming, tea, camellias, and going to movies.

Iowa—that's where the tall corn grows—and Donna Reed. Born and reared on a farm near Denison, Donna got into a quivering jaloppy in 1938 after her graduation from high school and drove to Los Angeles to go to business school. She was chosen campus queen and offered a screen test, which in 1940 took her into the movies. She is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, has brown hair and eyes.

Olivia De Havilland is her real name. She was born in Tokio on July 1, 1916, educated in California. She won a scholarship at Mills college, which she by-passed to take a part in Max Reinhardt's Hollywood bowl production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." A success as Hermia, she was given the movie rôle and a long-term contract. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 107 pounds, has reddish brown hair and brown eyes. She likes sketching, writing poetry, playing the piano, swimming, riding, cold French lamb chops dipped in salt

The Top Stars of the Movie World



Paulette Goddard learned a [illegible] [illegible] to persevere thru her early stage and screen experience. When she was 14 Flo Ziegfeld gave her her first theatrical job—sitting in a prop moon and being sung to in "Rio Rita." Archie Selwyn gave her the lead in "The Conquering Male," and in three weeks it folded. Hal Roach employed her for six months, during which time her legs were photographed once as she sat in a prop automobile. Then Charlie Chaplin made her his leading lady in "Modern Times." Times were looking up. Three studios gave her featured roles, and then she got the part in which she finally arrived—Bob Hope's leading lady in "The Cat and the Canary." Paulette is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 110 pounds, has dark hair and blue eyes.

Jane Withers was born 16 years ago at Atlanta, Ga., and was a radio entertainer at 3. Mother took her to Hollywood in 1932 and Jane made her film debut in the meanie role of a Shirley Temple picture, "Bright Eyes." She's been a regular in films ever since, coming to stardom in "Ginger." In 10 years she has been in more than 30 movies. Jane is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 114 pounds, has dark brown hair and dark blue eyes.

When he was 10 years old Tim Holt made his movie debut in the same picture with his father, Jack Holt. He grew up and was graduated from Culver Military academy before appearing in his next film, "Stella Dallas." Now, in his 24th year, he is training to become a pilot for Uncle Sam. Tim, of a family that has Chief Justice Marshall and General Pickett among ancestors, was born in Beverly Hills and attended grammar schools there and in Hollywood. He had a brief respite from horse operas to play a leading role in "The Magnificent Ambersons"; then, as if with his second wind, he turned out six westerns in 70 days. This young cowboy hero is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, has brown hair and eyes.

William Powell, suave sophisticate, carries off an acting role with a polished precision that bespeaks thoro seasoning in his craft; that he attained before he appeared in his first Hollywood picture ("Sherlock Holmes," with John Barrymore) in 1921. Out of high school, he took a $50-a-month job, hoping to save enough to go to a dramatic school. At the end of five months he was $50 in debt. In New York, a $700 loan from an aunt disappeared in six months; Powell was to be 13 years discharging that obligation. But now he was on his way. He toured for 40 weeks of one-night stands, appeared in stock in more than 200 plays, and came at last to Broadway stardom. In Hollywood, his first "Thin Man" role came in 1934. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 160 pounds, has dark brown hair and blue eyes.

Dorothy Lovett's early experience was providential; in Providence, R. I., she was born on Feb. 16, 1915; appeared on the stage in stock when 5 years old; grew up, was graduated from Pembroke (women's division of Brown), and went into radio work, conducting a cooking school and a series of fashion news broadcasts. In 1937 she journeyed to New York in search of a wider stage and spent a year modeling. In 1938 she sought a movie test, was given a contract, and went directly to Hollywood. Her first picture was "The Flying Irishman"; her last appearance under contract was in "Sing Your Worries Away"; she now is free-lancing. Dorothy is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes.

At right: Anne Baxter is a daughter of Michigan City, Ind., whose family moved to Rye, N. Y., when she was 4 years old. Anne always wanted to be an actress. At 13 she appeared in "Seen but Not Heard," a Broadway play with Frankie Thomas as its star. Subsequently she had a part in "There's Always a Breeze," played summer stock, and appeared with Eva Le Gallienne in "Madame Capet." She made her Hollywood debut in 1940. She is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 111 pounds, has brown hair and eyes.

At right: Until 1938 MacDonald Carey traveled an orbit confined to the Mississippi valley, with plenty of room to spare. He is a native of Sioux City, Ia.; he was graduated from the University of Iowa in 1935, acted in tabloid Shakespeare with the Globe Players at the Texas Centennial, and spent some three years in radio soap operas, mostly in Chicago. Then in 1940, while he was in summer theater in the east, he was chosen to be Gertrude Lawrence's leading man in "Lady in the Dark." Almost immediately he had his reward in Hollywood. Carey is 6 feet tall, weighs 170 pounds, and is skilled in fencing, his favorite sport.

Ray Milland had the curious experience of making three highly ballyhooed grand entrances and three unobtrusive arrivals in Hollywood, all of which flopped; and then, when nobody expected it, clicking at the box office with disconcerting suddenness. Born in Wales, he broke into stage and screen work in London. Spotted by an American film scout, he was employed as leading man in a film opposite Constance Bennett. It was in "The Doctor Takes a Wife," in which he co-starred with Loretta Young, that he at last won recognition.

At right: They say in Hollywood that if it hadn't been for the war Alma Carroll might never have been in movies. She was living in Los Angeles and had just finished high school, intending to be a schoolma'am, when a beauty contest was held in Venice to select "Miss National Defense." Alma won the contest, toured army camps, went into modeling, was recruited for the movies, and has appeared in "He Kissed the Bride" and "Parachute Nurse." Alma is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 118 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes.

Patricia Dane, born in Jacksonville, Fla., took dancing lessons as a child, and in school she showed marked talent for sketching. At the University of Alabama she studied art, designing, and music. From there she went to New York to model and design for a fashion house for a year and a half. In 1940 she took a plane for Hollywood. A week later she joined a line of girls at a casting office where a chorus was being selected for "Ziegfeld Girl." She appeared in the picture. Since then each of her films has brought her a more important role. Patricia is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, has dark brown hair and eyes.

Probably most of the 135 million Americans have heard Irene Manning sing; she has been heard over radio, in light opera road shows, in the St. Louis Municipal opera, and as a night club entertainer. As a singer she was Hope Manning; she changed her name on entering the movies. Her first film job was to play and sing the role of Fay Templeton in "Yankee Doodle Dandy." She weighs 112 pounds, is blonde and blue-eyed.

Ginny Simms was born in San Antonio, Tex., on May 25, 1915. The family moved to Fresno, Cal., when she was 8 years old; Ginny attended school there, graduating from Fresno State Teachers' college, where she majored in music. She planned to teach music. But she began singing in radio and at a San Francisco night club, and the direction of her career was settled before she realized it. She was soloist with Kay Kyser's band from 1938 until the summer of 1941, when she signed a long-term movie contract. Before that event she had played in three Kay Kyser pictures. Ginny is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. She swims and takes regular setting up exercises and eats anything she pleases, especially enchiladas.

Take equal parts of beauty, brains, and talent, add a dash of iron resolution, and you have a Rosalind Russell. Let her begin life in a wealthy and fashionable environment, as did Rosalind at Waterbury, Conn., but you won't necessarily have a social butterfly. As a matter of fact, at the gilded private school where she was a student Ros was the loudest and she played all athletic games the hardest. After extensive travel in Europe our young Yankee decided she'd go in for acting, made a slow start in stock, and came up on Broadway with a good part in "Talent," starring Mady Christians. Her second Broadway play was "The Second Man," with Bert Lytell. And then movie scouts whisked her to Hollywood, where she has been ever since. Rosalind is tall and brunette, with black eyes. She has appeared in more than a score of pictures, in which she has demonstrated an uncommon gift for change of pace.

Curvaceous Peggy Diggins danced her way thru high school theatricals into a night club job and thence right into the movies. Given a long-term Hollywood contract, she has made a promising start in "Honeymoon for Three" and eight other pictures, the last of which was "Yankee Doodle Dandy." While dancing in night clubs Peggy also worked as a model. She was born at New York on Oct. 17, 1921; she is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 118 pounds, has black hair and blue eyes.

Brenda Marshall was born in the Philippines, where her father was manager of a sugar plantation, and when 14 was sent to Texas to complete her education. While a student at Texas State Teachers' college she developed an interest in dramatics that took her to a New York dramatic school and thence into acting roles in little theaters and on Broadway. She was starred in her first Hollywood picture and has remained a star. She is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 103 pounds, has brown hair and eyes.

Ava Gardner never has been a job hunter but once; that was when she first went to New York, fresh from graduation at Atlantic Christian college, Wilson, N. C. Even that search was brief; she had gone to the city intending to become a model, and did. After that the job sought Ava, with a movie talent scout as its emissary. Two days after her arrival in Hollywood she met Mickey Rooney at lunch. Mickey coached her for her film debut in "We Were Dancing," starring Norma Shearer. Last January the two were married; they now are estranged. Ava appeared in her second picture last year, in her third and fourth this year. She is 19 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 118 pounds, has brown hair and green eyes.

At left: This is one of those real life stories of a five-and-ten Cinderella who became a glamorous movie star, and its heroine is Ellen Drew. Daughter of a barber, she was born in Kansas City. When Ellen was 4 years old the family moved to Chicago. At 16 she left Parker High school to support her mother, first working in a loop store and later in a $10-a-week job at the jewelry and baby clothes counter of an Englewood store. She left that to hunt the end of the rainbow in Hollywood, but all she found was another job—as waitress in a candy shop. An actor's agent, her Prince Charming, found her there and got her an audition and a stock contract. It was two years before she won her first starring role; now she is one of Hollywood's busiest actresses.

Momentous events in the life of William Post Jr. have curious quirks. He got his first stage job in stock from an agent while they stood talking at the corner of 44th street and Broadway, New York. After the stock company folded he entered into conversation with the man in the next seat in a theater, who turned out to be a Hollywood figure; and Bill was on his way into the movies. In his first picture he was murdered in the first reel. That was enough of such doings. Bill headed back to New York and spent 10 years in the theater, which the lead in "My Sister Eileen" brought to a close. He went back to Hollywood to be Gracie Allen's husband in "Mr. and Mrs. North." Post is 6 feet tall, weighs 170 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes.

Born in the great open spaces of a Montana ranch, youngest of a family of 15 children, George Montgomery was 20 years a cowboy. Learned to ride, rope, break broncos, and drawl western songs. But he wanted to be a movie actor. Until 1938 his ambition was ungratified except for appearance in one film as a stunt man. Then an actor's agent got him a contract. Finally his studio starred him in "Ten Gentlemen from West Point." Montgomery is 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 195 pounds, has dark blond hair and blue eyes.

Tough product of New York's lower east side, ward of a school for delinquent children, John Garfield liked to argue. He became a debater in the school, won a state contest, and from that day was an actor. He studied dramatics, found unsalaried work in a little theater, saw America from beneath freight trains, worked as a farmhand, made his way back to Broadway, and gradually fought his way to success. His first movie role, as Mickey Borden in "Four Daughters," won him stardom in Hollywood. He is now 32 years old.

Marsha Hunt

Marsha Hunt, born in Chicago, was studying dramatics and working as a model in New York when, in 1935, she visited Hollywood. Her goal was the stage, not movies; but the offer of a contract induced a change of mind. In the seven years since she has played in more than 30 pictures. Marsha is married to Jerry Hopper, a studio executive. She studies singing, likes to sketch, swim, and play ping-pong. She is 5 feet 5 inches tall, has brown hair and blue eyes.

At left: John Wayne went from the University of Southern California football team, where he played tackle, into the movies to be a property boy. He was plucked from that job to be the leading man of "The Big Trail," a movie which didn't come off. Subsequently he managed to hang on in westerns, built up a following, and then turned in a fine performance in "Stagecoach." He had two more years of westerns before he definitely won recognition, but when that came it came with a rush. He has had recent roles in "Seven Sinners," in which he co-starred with Marlene Dietrich, and "Shepherd of the Hills." Born at Winterset, Ia., Wayne grew up on a California ranch. He is 6 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 200 pounds.

Virginia Weidler toddled right out of the stroller into movies. When she was 2 years old, in 1930, she appeared in "Moby Dick," starring John Barrymore; in 1932 she made her stage debut; in 1933 reappeared in the celluloids; and she has been in steady demand ever since. Now 14, Virginia puts up her hair like a grown-up lady when going to a party, but at home she still is a tomboy in slacks.

Renee Haal

The "perfect curve girl," Renee Haal, was a much-sought camera model even before she was graduated from high school in New York; her expressive hands and shapely legs especially were photographed. In 1938 she spent the Florida season singing at a Miami hotel; in 1939 sang nine months at Dorchester House, London. In the British capital Hollywood scouts signed her to a long-term contract. She has been seen in "Dangerously They Live" and "Highways by Night." Renee was born in New York on Sept. 1, 1918. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 116 pounds, has chestnut hair and grey-blue-green eyes. Her hobby is collecting pictures of Joan Crawford, of which she has more than 2,000. She is married to Peter Godfrey, director of her first picture.

At left: Linda Darnell, born in Dallas, Tex., was acting in little theaters when, in 1938, a movie scout sent her to Hollywood for a test. She went home without a contract, but the next year she was sent for to play the feminine lead in Elsa Maxwell's "Home for Women." So she starred in her first picture; co-starred with Tyrone Power in her second ("Daytime Wife"); has appeared in seven other films. She is 5 feet 4¾ inches tall, weighs 108 pounds, has black hair and brown eyes.

At right: Susan Hayward is a girl who literally almost starved for art; before she got a Hollywood contract she lived for a time on breakfast cereal—without milk. In Brooklyn High school a happy accident befell Susan when a fellow pupil splashed water on a design she was preparing for a competition. She embellished the blots and won a $75 prize. Susan invested her winnings in a dramatic school course, became a model, was sent out to Hollywood when a producer saw her picture on a magazine cover, and gradually worked her way up from bit parts to stardom. She is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 108 pounds.

Many an actress gets on in Hollywood because somebody saw her on the stage. Ann Sothern reversed the procedure when Flo Ziegfeld saw her in a minor role in a movie and in 1924 gave her a part in "Smiles." Subsequently she appeared in "Everybody Welcome" and "Of Thee I Sing," then was invited to Hollywood and given the lead in "Let's Fall in Love." Her real name, Harriet Lake, was changed to her present screen name in a contest following this movie role. In 1939 she won stardom as a dramatic actress in the first of the "Maisie" films. Granddaughter of Simon Lake, the submarine inventor, Ann was born at Valley City, N. D. She showed early musical talent and while in college sang on tour with her mother, Annette Yde-Lake. She recently was divorced from Roger Pryor, son of Arthur Pryor, the bandmaster. She is 5 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 112 pounds, has blonde hair and blue-gray eyes.

Veronica Lake, she of the honey blonde peekaboo bang, wanted to be a surgeon, not an actress. In fact, she got into pictures accidentally some three years ago when she accompanied a friend to a studio for an interview. A director, looking at Veronica, said she'd do for a bit. So she appeared in a picture, liked the business, went to drama school. Several unimportant roles followed, and then, for the first time in a movie, a director let her wear her hair down over her right eye, as she liked to do. That made history. Veronica was given the hot vampire part in "I Wanted Wings"; was a sensation. Indeed, still is. Born in Lake Placid, N. Y., Nov. 14, 1919, Veronica grew up in that place, Miami Beach, and California. She is 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 92 pounds. She is married to John Detlie, studio art director; they have a 13-month-old daughter.

Jean Arthur, young New York model, renounced an ambition to become a language teacher when movie talent scouts offered a contract, as what girl wouldn't? But, dissatisfied with the comedy and ingenue roles she drew in Hollywood, she went back to New York and in two and a half years appeared in 11 plays, four of them on Broadway. Then Hollywood beckoned again, this time to stardom. Jean is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 110 pounds, has blonde hair and gray-green eyes.

Born in London, Wendy Barrie spent several years with her family in Hongkong; attended finishing school in Lausanne, Switzerland; made seven trips around the world; entered the movies in England in 1932; came to the United States in 1934 and was given a Hollywood contract 10 days later. This charming cosmopolite is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 110 pounds, has bluish green eyes and light brown hair. She is an enthusiastic sportswoman; she plays tennis, cricket, and badminton; rides, skates, and skis.

Movie Star Album

From the day she made her Hollywood debut as a 14-year-old, seven years ago, Deanna Durbin's screen career has been tailor made; she is the first movie star to grow up on the screen thru a series of hits, each written and produced to fit her age at the time. Deanna was born in Canada; when she was 1 year old the family moved to southern California. She began to sing almost as soon as she began to talk; it was childhood voice training and singing at neighborhood functions that brought her to the attention of the movie makers. Deanna's favorite sport is swimming, she reads avidly, and she has a pet mongrel, Tippy, which she bought because of his fondness for peanuts. She is married to Vaughn Paul, now in the navy.

Seventeen-year-old Nancy Gates had been in Hollywood only two weeks before RKO-Radio signed her on a long-term contract. She was born in Dallas, Tex.; nine months later the family moved to Denton, Tex. (Ann Sheridan's home town), where Nancy attended school, meanwhile studying music, singing, and dramatics. Since she was 4 years old she has appeared in amateur theatricals. When she was 12 years old she was mistress of ceremonies of a Dallas radio station for almost a year. When 13 she toured in vaudeville. Last year she and her mother visited Hollywood on a vacation, and her present studio, on the advice of scouts, looked her up and signed her then. Nancy is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 109 pounds, has brown hair and brown eyes.

Best Wishes
Frances Rafferty

As the press agent explains it, Frances Rafferty's beauty and charm are such that she had only to appear at a studio commissary for lunch to win a long-term contract. She was signed the next morning. Frances was studying to become a nurse when her dancing talent won her a place in the chorus of the Los Angeles Civic Opera company. But an injury to a ligament forced her to give up dancing for a time, so she entered a drama school, meanwhile making a livelihood as a secretary for the 4th interceptor command. She is a native of Sioux City, Ia., is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, and has auburn hair and hazel eyes. One of her greatest enthusiasms is her pet alley cat, Pico.

In Los Angeles high school work is still one of 17-year-old Joan Leslie's major preoccupations; she has gone ahead that fast. This Detroit-born beauty came to Hollywood via vaudeville, night clubs, and modeling. Her first picture was "Camille," with Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor. She was Gary Cooper's leading lady in "Sergeant York," and many other important roles have been coming her way. She enjoys athletics, horse races, baseball, dancing, junk jewelry, Irish stew. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 118 pounds, has hazel eyes and auburn hair.

A native of Nebraska, Henry Fonda majored in journalism at the University of Minnesota with an ambition to become a reporter, in which he later found Omaha newspaper editors uninterested. He then served a strenuous apprenticeship in little theaters, tallying 150 roles of all sizes and ages. At last he came to stardom on Broadway in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," and Hollywood bid for his services. He was prepared to discourage Walter Wanger with a demand for $350 a week when Wanger offered him $1,000. So Fonda took the $1,000. He is 34 years old, 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 185 pounds, has dark brown hair and blue eyes.

Leslie Brooks

Leaving out adjectives, an inventory of Leslie Brooks' charms includes a face, a figure, blue eyes, Titian hair, and a smile. These made her a much-sought fashion model and magazine cover girl and won a dancing role for her in "Ziegfeld Girl," in which she made her Hollywood debut in 1940 in competition with 500 other beauties. Daughter of a radio engineer, Paul Gettman, Leslie was born at Lincoln, Neb., in 1922 and spent much of her girlhood with relatives in various small towns. Eventually the family moved to Hollywood, where Leslie attended high school. She played on the girls' basketball team and sang with the glee club, singing Sundays with a church choir. It was at this point that the young beauty began winning recognition as a camera model, an experience which finally led her to a long-term movie contract. Leslie likes flying, classical music, ballet, tennis, swimming, and collecting (coins, stamps, odd jewelry, hooked rugs). She is 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 125 pounds.

Dean of the stars of Hollywood, Lionel Barrymore has lent the distinction of his great talent to the screen and therefrom derived added distinction. Beginning in 1909, he made several tentative ventures into pictures, and in 1926, at the peak of a brilliant stage career, definitely forsook the theater for the movies. Since then he has appeared in scores of films. This eldest member of the royal family of the theater was born April 28, 1878. He now lives in the San Fernando valley, where he raises flowers, Indian corn, and razorback hogs; and he would rather talk about his pigs than his profession.

Red-haired Maria Montez has found the mileposts of life far separated in space. She was born in the Dominican Republic, where her father was a Spanish consul; schooled in a convent in the Canary Islands; employed as model, her first job, by McClelland Barclay in New York, and in 1940 accepted for stardom in Hollywood. Her first movie was "Boss of Bullion City"; you have seen her recently in "Mystery of Marie Roget" and "Arabian Nights." Her enthusiasms are writing poetry, playing the piano, swing, opera, riding, swimming, astrology, and palm reading.

At left: A Hollywood veteran at 15, Gloria Jean (family name Schoonover) was appearing in a radio-vaudeville act at 3½. She was born in Buffalo, N. Y., but spent her early childhood at Scranton, Pa. In 1938 she sang opera in New York; the next year, at the age of 12, she was given a Hollywood contract and appeared in her first movie, "The Under-Pup." Not too surprisingly, her pet food is ice cream, her pet aversion spinach. She likes frilly dresses; her favorite color is blue.

NEXT WEEK

At right: Victor Mature is a young man who wanted to be an actor badly enough to wash dishes, polish automobiles, and clean wall paper while he studied for four years at the Pasadena Playhouse. Even after his last role there attracted the attention of a Hollywood studio and won a long-term contract, in 1939, he wasn't too sure his luck wouldn't run out. For months he lived in a tent in a friend's back yard. Mature is 25 years old and 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 198 pounds.

One way to get on in Hollywood is for studio officials to hear your voice on the radio, see your printed picture, invite you out for a screen test, and put you in a film. It doesn't happen often, but it was that easy for Lillian Cornell. Born Lillian Michuda in Chicago on June 2, 1918, she attended Ladywood school at Indianapolis. She studied music under a tutor in Chicago and later at De Paul university until she found a place in radio. She sang and acted in "Buck Benny Rides Again," her first picture, and had a featured role in "Las Vegas Nights." Lillian is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 117 pounds, has brown eyes and hair. Her favorite sport is horseback riding.

Last year a film scout discovered Adele Mara in a dancing and castanet routine with a night club orchestra in New York. Within three days the 18-year-old starlet was en route to Hollywood to sign a long-term contract, and she is now being groomed for work in films. Born Adelaide Delgado in Dearborn, Mich., she is the daughter of an employe of an automobile manufacturer. She began studying dancing when she was 5. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 108 pounds, and has raven hair.

ALICE FAYE, 5 feet 5 inches of singing personality, began her professional career as a dancer in a New York theater when she was 14 years old. Her voice on a phonograph record intrigued Rudy Vallee, and to that circumstance she attributes her subsequent success. At that time Alice was a chorus girl in George White's "Scandals of 1934," and Vallee's orchestra was in the same show. Rudy gave Alice a featured singing spot with his band and later took her along to Hollywood for the screening of the "Scandals." Before the cameras began to grind Alice had been chosen for the starring role of the film. Now, a veteran of the movies, Alice looks back on stardom in 27 pictures, one for each year of her age. One of these she holds particularly memorable—"In Old Chicago." She weighs 112 pounds.

MARJORIE REYNOLDS enjoys the unusual distinction of having retired from the movies three times before she attained stardom. She entered a drama and dancing school when she was 4 years old and soon was appearing in films with such stars as Viola Dana, Norma Talmadge, and Ramon Novarro. Marjorie first retired when she was 8 to spend her entire time in conventional schooling, with a continued dash of drama and dancing; emerged briefly from seclusion to play the ballerina part in "Wine, Women, and Song," with Lilyan Tashman and Lew Cody; then again forsook the sets for her studies. Graduated from Los Angeles High school, Marjorie danced in several pictures, spent a year in westerns, and then went into retirement No. 3. She came out of this sequestration to do four "Tailspin Tommies" and several other films, one with Boris Karloff. Now the gods decided to make a darling of this young actress. A dancing partner was needed for Fred Astaire in the superdance film "Hollywood Inn." Marjorie was proposed, given a test, and tried out by Astaire in the difficult routine. The great dancer approved her, and forthwith she was whisked to stardom.

MARGUERITE CHAPMAN has led a model life, a Hollywood press agent points out punningly. Before she won a place in the movies she was successively a hat model, an artist's model, a photographer's model, and a dress model. Howard Hughes, impressed by reports of her glamor, gave Marguerite her first Hollywood assignment. She made her debut in "The Jones Family on Their Own," following this with a featured part in "A Guy, a Girl, and a Gob." She was one of those gorgeous sextet girls in "Navy Blues," and her latest role is in "Submarine Raider." Marguerite, daughter of a civil engineer, was born in New York City and reared in White Plains, N. Y.

GENE AUTRY is the hero of one of Hollywood's most famous success legends, which runs in this wise: Will Rogers, hearing the young telegraph operator strum his guitar and sing in the railway station at Sapulpa, Okla., urged him to make it a career. "Thousands of young fellers can plink on this here thing," Will observed, pointing to the telegraph sending key, "but darn few can plink on a guitar and put a song over the way you can." Acting on that advice, Gene got himself aired over an Oklahoma radio station. First thing he knew he was master of ceremonies of a famous program sent out from Chicago over a nation-wide chain; next thing he knew he was the most famous horse opera star who ever pulled on a fancy shirt in Hollywood. Autry's films run into the scores. But he still has had energy left to travel far and wide, to operate a rodeo, and to buy an enormous ranch near Berwyn, Okla. Grateful Berwyn changed its name to Gene Autry, Okla., and so Autry has become not only a national institution but also a place on the map.

ON THE LAMB

By MARY MEADE

LAMB is the most plentiful meat right now. There's a large supply available, but even so you may not find it as reasonably priced as you would in normal times. Bargains in meat are hard to come by these days.

Lamb shanks are one of the most economical of lamb cuts, and they may be prepared attractively enough for serving to guests. Most lamb cuts are cooked by broiling or roasting, but shanks will be more tender and savory if you cook them in moist heat.

STUFFED LAMB SHANKS

6 lamb shanks
2 tablespoons lard
2 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ pound rice

Brown shanks in hot lard. Add water and seasonings. Cover and simmer until tender, about 1½ hours. Remove meat from broth. When cool enough to handle remove the bones. Cook rice in lamb broth, adding water as necessary. Stuff boned shanks with cooked rice. Place in kettle and heat thoroly. Remove to hot platter and thicken broth for gravy.

The cooking water may be seasoned with more than salt and pepper if you like. An onion, a bay leaf, a pinch of thyme, and a fourth of a cup of lemon juce may be added.

For a really elegant lamb dinner, crown roast of lamb with mint apples is your dish. A crown roast comes from the rack of lamb, that section between the shoulder and the loin. The ribs are shaped into a crown and the ends are "Frenched," meaning that they have the meat trimmed away for the sake of appearance and to permit adding frills.

A crown roast is very easy to carve, which fact will make the man of the house happy.

Place a cube of salt pork on the end of each rib to prevent charring. Roast the meat on a rack in an open roasting pan at 300 to 325 degrees, about 30 minutes to the pound. When done remove the salt pork and place a frill on each bone. Fill the center with your cooked, buttered vegetable and garnish with mint apples, allowing one to a person.

By ALFRED TENNYSON (reprinted by request)

  On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
  The thoughts that arise in me.
O well for the fisherman's boy,
  That he shouts with his sister at play!
O well for the sailor lad,
  That he sings in his boat on the bay!
And the stately ships go on
  To their haven under the hill:
But O for the touch of a vanished hand,
  And the sound of a voice that is still!
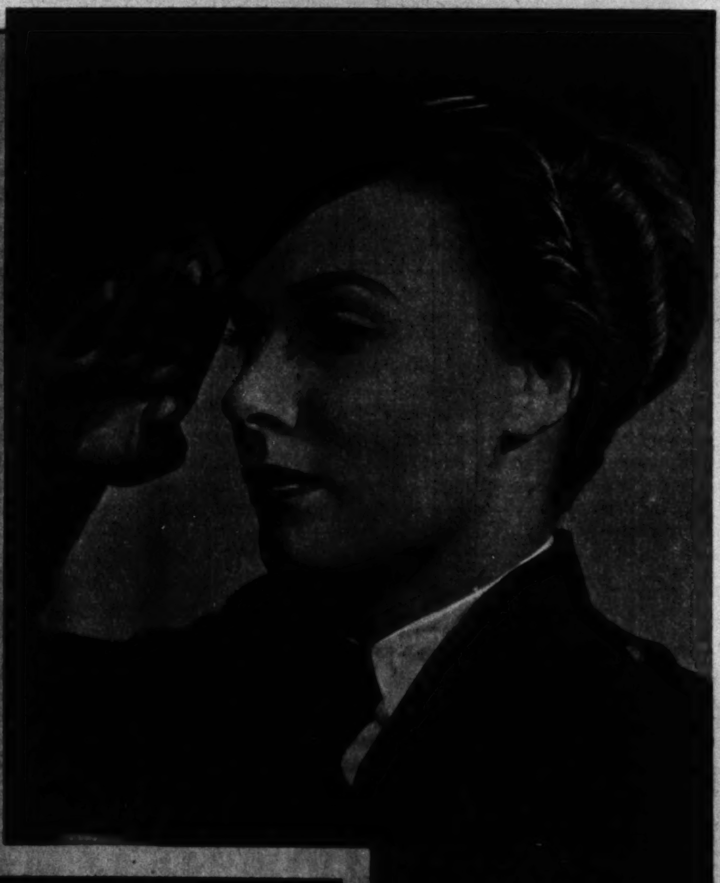
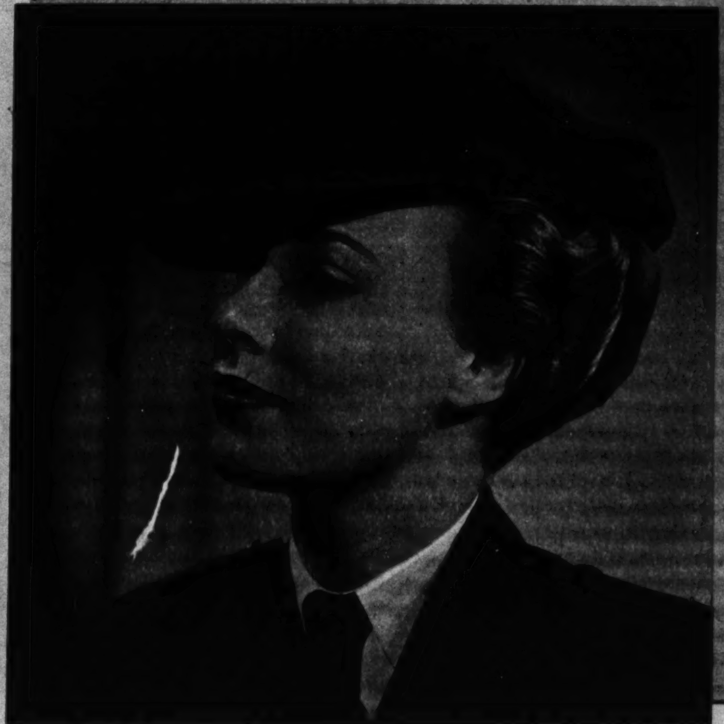
But the tender grace of a day that is dead
  Will never come back to me.

WAVES FOR WAR WEAR

By ELEANOR NANGLE

ONE OF our most competent hair stylists, particularly noted for his fidelity to beauty of line as adapted to individual contour rather than preoccupation with the flat dictates of any style for one and all, has established a new trend in hair arrangement that is wonderfully well suited to wartime costumes and conditions. It's waves, madame, instead of curls!





Soft waves, sleek waves, preferably with hair off the neck, are the perfect solution to the hair problem presented by the military cap. The overseas cap and the visored hat, plus all variations of either, demand trim hairdress. Sausage curl clusters or locks that dangle down to the shoulder blades are utterly incongruous not only with the line but with the basic character of the hat that accompanies any uniform, whether it be WAVE, WAAC, nurse, or messenger girl!

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

ALL DURING the recent decades, when most colleges, denominational or otherwise, felt they must liberalize or lose their enrollment, Wheaton college at Wheaton, Ill., has adhered strictly to its "conservative" Christian principles of faith and conduct. And it increased its enrollment from 100 in 1915 to 1,200 in 1942! Even in this year of widespread decrease in the size of college student bodies Wheaton can boast an increase of 5 per cent.

Standards of conduct for the students are unique, at least as compared with those that prevail on the average campus. Every student signs a written agreement, one that is renewed each year, to abstain from the use of liquor and tobacco, to refrain from dancing, card playing, and attendance at the legitimate theater or moving pictures. Few of the girls use makeup, and Wheaton is a school where that familiar campus vehicle, used by girls and boys alike, the bicycle, is as often as not bedecked with religious exhortations. Where the usual collegian's jaloppy is embellished with wisecracks in campus slanguage, that of the Wheaton student frequently bears stern admonitions urging repentance.

More than 30 Protestant denominations are represented in the student body, which is drawn from just about every state in the country and from Europe and the orient. Many are the sons and daughters of missionaries. Claralice and Rosemary Hanna, for example, twin seniors, lived in Lampang, Thailand, until they came to Wheaton. Ruth Bell, another senior, gives as her address Tsing Kiang Pu, Kiangsu, China. Most of the students plan to enter the field of religious work.

The vast majority of students at Wheaton are there by choice and are completely happy in its atmosphere of enthusiasm for the unequivocally conservative interpretation of the Christian life. The academic standards are high; Wheaton is accredited by the Association of American Universities and is a member of the North Central association.

Social life, in the sense of dating and dancing, is of course nonexistent, but social life of a character preferred by Wheaton students is abundant. An old custom on the campus is Tuesday night prayer meeting, entirely student organized. There are no sororities or fraternities, but in their place are social and cultural societies which organize recreation, debates, and various kinds of intramural competition.

In contrast to the average college of equal or greater size Wheaton college is phenomenal in more ways than one.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

BY BOB BECKER

A SENSIBLE and versatile breed, the springer spaniel hasn't had much difficulty in getting the attention of the dog owners who want a good looking dog as a companion or a hunting partner capable of finding and retrieving both feathered and furred game.

The "first" spaniel is one of the oldest if not the most ancient of all gun dogs. No one knows when it originated, but we always get a thrill when we read the description of the spaniel written by Dr. Caius in his "Treatise of Englishe Dogges" in the year 1576.

In the early days, of course, the "setting" spaniel was a very highly prized dog. It "set" game much like our modern setter. This breed was trained not to flush birds. Later came the "springing spaniel" or springer. The duty of this dog is to make game get up and move. In other words, the springer is supposed to flush the game it finds. However, we have seen springers which did a pretty good job of pointing when on game.

"No man can be without this dog on a rough shoot, and it is well known that the English springer is the best type of gun dog to answer that purpose. It must be said that the springer is an asset that cannot be passed over by any shooting man. In fact, as an all-rounder it cannot be beaten for show, shooting, or disposition."

This head study of Bimi of Whitegates, a champion springer spaniel, shows how this breed often is marked by a mixture of brown and white or black and white.

It is affectionate, smart, and understanding, so when not busy during the hunting season it is a delightful dog in the home for both children and adults. When autumn comes and it's time to hunt, the springer becomes a still different type of all-rounder in the field. It can be taught to range ahead of the gun and flush game within range. It will work both feathered and furred game in this way and retrieve neatly and speedily to hand either in the water or on land. Where water retrieving is not too arduous a springer can do a serviceable job for the waterfowl hunter.

Like the cocker, the springer comes in many different color combinations, such as liver and white, black and white, tan and white, black, white and tan, or even solid colors like roan, black, and liver.

day, seven days a week. Danny's tavern visits were limited to night, so she decided to make use of her mornings and afternoons. She consulted her list of factory employés and, using the directory of executives and engineers, began to pay visits to their wives.

Danny quickly exhausted the list of suburban homes and was among the engineers in the apartment neighborhoods one Saturday morning when she came to the name of Mr. G. He was unmarried, so the record stated, and probably would not be at home. Still, even engineers had to rest some time. She ignored the desk clerk in the lobby and took the automatic elevator to the sixth floor. Mr. G. responded promptly to her knock. He was a tall, thin, swarthy man, and he seemed much annoyed by her summons.

"What do you want?" he demanded.

"Mr. Nelson sent me," lied Danny, naming one of the plant vice presidents. "He liked my gardening magazine so much he gave me the names of others who might be interested. And you, Mr. G.——"

Mr. G. was impressed and for a moment interested. His first job in America had been gardening on a Long Island estate. "Won't you come in?" he asked.

"Thank you. Might I have a drink of water, please? It's so terribly hot."

Mr. G., still in doubt, yielded nevertheless and went to fetch a drink. Danny glanced quickly about the apartment. It was severely yet tastefully furnished. Only the telephone excited her special notice. It was not one of the usual house phones, but evidently operated on a private wire. Why should Mr. G., who in his work normally would have contact with few people, possess special telephone facilities? Danny shook out her curls, inspected her makeup, and regretted she had not worn something more feminine than a tailored suit.

"This time of day! I never drink until night," Danny assured him. Mr. G.'s brows lifted slightly. He grinned. "Mr. Nelson gave you my name?" he asked.

"Yes, yours and several others. He's a nice man, isn't he? You know, in this business you have to make friends and have them help you. I wouldn't make a sale otherwise."

Mr. G., enchanted with the colorful beauties of Formal Gardens, took a subscription and suggested a cool drink, not water. When the conversation ended Danny had agreed to meet him the following evening.

It was a date she could break if it didn't show signs of being profitable. She visited the rest of the apartments in the building, marveling that some one didn't ask the desk clerk to toss her out. People were not so talkative as in lesser neighborhoods, and they knew little about Mr. G. except that he rarely had a day off and received few visitors, all of them men.

"Germans, they are," whispered a neighbor knowingly. "Spies, I betcha. They drink beer. I seen whole cases goin' up."

"Do you know," Mr. G. asked indulgently as he called for her in a cab, "this is the first time I have gone out with a young woman in years?"

"You're unfair to us girls," Danny replied. "I'm glad you made an exception yesterday. You know, it's funny. In my work a girl gets lots of invitations, but I don't accept them. But—well, it just seemed when you asked me——"

He smiled at the implied flattery. They went to a movie. A spy film was showing. Diana wondered uncomfortably if Mr. G. might be playing cat and mouse with her. Still she accepted his invitation to his apartment. He wasn't very gallant, she thought. He might at least have offered supper. But in the lobby he excused himself, and she heard him ordering food and champagne. The evening, it seemed, was young.

Shortly after they reached the suite his telephone sounded. He answered crossly, but immediately turned polite. Danny could make nothing of his monosyllables, but she knew he was annoyed. When he returned to her he smiled elaborately and shrugged.

"I'm sorry," he said. "A man from the plant is coming up. It's an emergency. I can't ask you to compromise yourself by remaining. He—might not understand. I am really sorry. I will call a cab for you if you will please wait in the lobby a moment. Perhaps I can call you soon?"

A man from the plant, said Mr. G. Danny didn't believe him. In such case he would have put the visitor off. But if he was actually a spy, and his chief was paying a visit, he could not afford to have it known that he was friendly with a woman. Such affairs too often proved dangerous. Danny wanted to wait, but she was sure Mr. G. would check with the cab driver to see whether he delivered her home.

If she made the trip she could not return in time to see his visitor. If she returned and climbed a fire escape she might set off an alarm. There was nothing to do but ride home in the cab and return in her car, hoping to pick up the trail of the visitor when he left. But how might she know which man among those leaving the building was G.'s visitor?

The problem was quickly solved. Before her cab arrived a man entered the lobby and went directly to the elevator without stopping at the desk. He was Boerzer, the owner of one of the taverns she had visited. She thought he was bound for G.'s suite, and a quick check convinced her. She remembered that the automatic elevator clicked as it passed the various floors. She followed the newcomer to the shaft and listened as the cage lifted. Five clicks, and the door opened. G.'s apartment was on the sixth floor. There was no need to follow the visitor now. She knew where to find his tavern.

Danny was sure that Mr. G. was somehow connected with the sabotage ring. And now she had become even more interested in the man who was probably his superior, Boerzer, the tavern owner. It ought not prove difficult to watch Boerzer—if she could just get a job in his tavern.

From her frequent visits she knew Charley, one of the bartenders, and some of the girls. She doubted that Boerzer had any spies working in the tavern; it would be too dangerous. Undoubtedly the workers knew less than she did about his real business. She suggested to Charley that if he could get her a job as a hostess or 26 girl her gratitude would be boundless.

"Th' old man don't go for hostesses," Charley said. "He's th' old-fashioned kind. But listen, baby, if you need a job I can get you one. Th' old man don't object to good lookin' barmaids. Leave it to me."

"I'm tired of peddling magazines," Danny told him. "You get me a good steady job that'll pay my room and board and I'll take it in a minute."

Two days later Danny was hired. The job didn't help her much. Boerzer kept to his office at the rear of the tavern and was careful never to leave it unlocked. The conversations that took place frequently in the office Danny couldn't understand, and she couldn't leave her work to follow his visitors. She didn't dare to be too friendly with the few who loitered in the tavern, for Charley kept a watchful eye upon her.

On the 10th day of her job in the tavern Boerzer showed signs of unusual activity. He sent out numerous telegrams and received several telephone calls he was careful to take in the privacy of his office. When he told Charley that he would be away for the evening Danny concluded that he had arranged some sort of meeting and that it was time for action, if ever. She pleaded ill, went to her room, changed her costume, rearranged her hair, and donned a pair of plain glass spectacles. Then, in her car, she returned to the tavern in time to see Boerzer leaving with two companions. She followed them to a red brick residence on the edge of town, where a party was evidently in progress.

Danny parked her car two blocks away and returned to the rear of the house. Inside were sounds of music and laughter, and thru the windows she could see groups of men and women about card tables. It wasn't a gambling house, she concluded, or they wouldn't be so blatant about it. Perhaps the affair was what it seemed, a neighborhood card party. Still Boerzer needn't have been so secretive about that. She tried the rear door and found it unlocked.

A darkened passageway led past the kitchen and opened onto a stairway. Danny darted up and into a bedroom where ladies' coats and hats were strewn across the twin beds. She intended, if seen by any one but Boerzer, to pass herself off as one of the guests. The room was empty, and she concealed herself in a clothes closet, leaving the door ajar. By standing among the slippers on the shoe rack, behind a screen of gowns, Danny was effectively shielded from all but most careful inspection, and yet she could peer into a long mirror and survey not only a part of the room but a bit of hallway at the head of the stairs.

Two women entered the bedchamber, passed a few uncomplimentary comments about their hostess while freshening their makeup, and then left. Beyond that Danny heard nothing. She was about to slip out again, but held back when she heard heavy steps on the stairs. The heads of two men appeared in the mirror, then other pairs, until eight had passed en route to the room adjacent to her closet. Danny started as she recognized the last two, not only Boerzer, but Mr. G. with him.

She waited quietly as the men arranged chairs, rattled chips, and prepared for a poker game. That, she was certain now, was a blind. The game went on quietly for a few minutes, and by listening carefully she could make out bits of the conversation. She heard a low voice she recognized as Boerzer's.

"There is going to be war," he was saying. "Then our work will not be so easy, and we must do more work and do it better. Franz, I do not like these reports. The plans were good, yes, but your production is down only 15 per cent. Now, Kurt, here, let him speak. He is a man who is doing the work!"

Danny heard Mr. G. speak. "Production has been held down to one-third," he said in an easy, conversational voice that would not have excited a casual eavesdropper. "Vigilance is increasing, and our plant is being very careful about saboteurs. There is a good bit of dissension between the workers and the management. Each blames the other for the accidents." He lingered ever so slightly on that word, and there was an appreciative chuckle from his listeners. "It won't be long now," he continued "until a strike will stop production completely."

"There," said Boerzer with satisfaction. "You see what can be done. Bohles himself will hear of this when the plant is struck. You do well, Kurt. On the whole we are all doing well, but we must do much better. Now, Franz . . ."

"Bohles?" Danny mulled the word. Sure, that might be Ernest Wilhelm Bohles, head of the Nazi foreign organization in North America. Undoubtedly these were dangerous men, and while Danny wanted to hear more, she thought it best to get out as quickly as possible. Once the poker game ended, she might have no chance to escape.

She stepped carefully into the bedroom, judging the position of the floor joists to avoid creaks. Boerzer continued talking, and Danny rumpled the clothing on the bed. If caught she preferred to have them think her a thief, altho if Boerzer and Mr. G. saw her there was small chance of that.

Then Danny walked boldly thru the bedroom and into the hall. Boerzer stopped abruptly as he heard her, but her back was turned to him, and she went quickly down the steps. She heard a chair scrape the floor in the room above and knew that some one was investigating.

Downstairs some of the players looked up from their tables as Danny entered the living room. "I think I'll have a breath of air," she said calmly to a man who stepped aside to let her pass. "So much smoke gives me a headache."

He murmured something politely as Danny reached the entrance. Then there was a shout upstairs. Quickly she flung open the door.

"Stop that woman!" a man yelled. It was Boerzer's voice. Some one thundered down the steps. Danny sped to the porch and out into the darkness.

Danny can run, and that night she ran for her life. Boerzer was on the porch before she was 25 yards away. He carried a gun, Danny knew. But he didn't shoot. The trick with the coats had worked after all. If they had guessed she was spying on them the whole pack would have followed her, and they might have risked shooting.

Danny telephoned her office with a report on the evening's activities. Allen was familiar with the case, for each night she had dispatched to him a written report of her movements.

"O.K.," he told her. "Good job. Take the first train out. No, wait. You'd better go back to the tavern and work a couple more days. Then pick a fight with your bartender and leave. I'll call the FBI. They'll grab these people red-handed. Your job's done. Air mail your written report first thing in the morning, and for heaven's sake don't arouse Boerzer's suspicions. When you get back we've another hot one for you up in Michigan."

BLUE-JAY

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph.D.
Managing Editor, Popular Photography Magazine

THE candid camera craze of a few years ago has died down considerably, yet the fact remains that thousands of photographers prefer candid photography to any other type of picture taking.

Contrary to popular belief, a picture is made candid not by the camera with which it was taken but by the selection of the picture subject and the method used in obtaining the picture. Just about the best definition of a candid picture is that it is an unposed photograph taken without the knowledge of the subject.

To this must be added that some of the best and most successful candid pictures are not candid at all in the strict sense of the word. They merely appear unposed, but in reality they are carefully rehearsed. This is easily understandable when you consider that any good photograph must be well composed, sharply focused, and properly exposed. The trick here is to get the candid, unposed effect. This is usually achieved by having the subject do something instead of looking at the camera. This effect can be strengthened if the subject does not merely hold a pose for a relatively long exposure but if she or he is actually doing something and the action is photographed at the required shutter speed.

While both real and posed candid shots can be made with any kind of camera, it is true that certain cameras are more suitable for this type of photography than others. The so-called miniature cameras—small hand-held amateur cameras—are better for the job than cameras above the size of 4x5.

The main reason why candid photography has lost some of its popularity is that many amateurs have carried the stealing of candid pictures far beyond the limitations of good taste, while others have turned out thousands of truly candid but equally boring pictures.

As to the technique of candid photography, if you want to take pictures unobserved you must be obviously ready to click the shutter when you approach your subject. Before you turn toward your subject, adjust the camera for the distance from which you plan to shoot, set the shutter and diaphragm, and figure out the best camera angle. Then stalk your subject carefully.

Because most people cannot imagine that you are taking their picture if you are not facing in their direction, certain gadgets help in taking candid shots. An angle view finder allows you to center the camera on the subject while you are seemingly looking away at a 90-degree angle. The same stunt is possible with a reflex camera.

UNDERGROUND!

program. The workers responded. Skilled technicians left their home cities and applied for work elsewhere as common laborers. The Germans began training them for jobs they already knew how to do. But these Poles, the Germans found, were slow to learn. They broke things, they had endless accidents, they damaged critical tools. In one Polish factory, production under German management was one-tenth of that under previous Polish guidance. The Germans threatened and punished, but the situation grew no better. When a factory finally began to approach its German quota, saboteur bands slipped in to smash it.

On the farms the Poles became confirmed arsonists. They burned the fields and barns of German owned villas, they even burned their own acres to keep the grain from going to the Nazis. The German reprisals are terrible, but still sabotage and destruction continue.

When Polish patriots risked death to call a strike in a big railway shop in Chrzanow, near Cracow, the Gestapo broke it by force of arms. Many persons were killed, but production was held up for weeks. When the Germans got the powder mill at Pionki to functioning properly, it was blown up. When German railway transportation in Upper Silesia suffered from an acute shortage of labor, the government general of Poland was required to supply 1,200 Polish railway workers to help. This was an unwise step. The Poles went to work and the accident rate on the German lines became the highest in their history.

Sabotage of the German war effort extends beyond the farm and factory. The Nazis have put war taxes on tobacco, cigarets, alcohol, and theater tickets. The Poles refuse to buy. The Germans attempted to collect furs and woolens from the Poles for the supply of troops fighting Russia. The Poles, at the suggestion of Biuletyn Informacyjny and other underground papers, burned their furs and woolens, rather than give them up. "The German soldiers must freeze in Russia," said the underground paper, "and we should help them to do so as far as possible."

Poland has become a hunting ground for impoverished Nazi politicians who have gone there to build their fortunes. It is such men who are chiefly responsible for the vicious cruelties to the population and who are draining the nation of its resources. These carpet baggers flaunt their alleged superiority with signs in parks, restaurants, theaters, and street cars, reading: Nur fur deutsche (for Germans only). The Poles, oppressed and punished tho they are, have not lost their sense of humor. They also prepare signs: "For Germans Only," and hang them on trees and cemetery gates.

On the walls of buildings in the cities the Polish victory sign PW—Polska Walczaca (Fighting Poland) constantly appears, and also slogans saying: "Only swine go to the movies." If a Pole should forget himself, and venture into the German taxed cinema, he is likely to be reminded of his transgression by having acid poured into his pocket when he emerges. The underground is on watch. Most Polish patriots will not even smoke, because of the war tax on tobacco and cigarets. The slogan of the underground is: "Every cigaret—a new German bullet."

The Nazi politicians in Poland search for Quislings to assist them in the government. They have found few, and those traitors have not lived long. The underground has special squads of expert assassins. The most a Quisling could expect is a few week's work and an obituary in a German newspaper.

When Germany invaded Russia, Adolph Hitler thought that he at last could obtain co-operation from the Poles. Germany offered Poland wide slices of Russian territory, in exchange for that taken from Poland in the west, if the country would disband the underground and provide 150,000 soldiers to help the Germans. The Polish answer was a wave of sabotage and guerrilla warfare so intense that it became necessary for Heinrich Himmler himself, the chief of the Gestapo, to go to Poland to direct repressive measures.

The cruelty of the Germans in this campaign of terror exceeded anything they had done before. But it stopped nothing. Guerrilla bands increased their operations, venturing into the heart of German held territory. During the night of June 20 of this year, Polish railway saboteurs derailed a strongly guarded train loaded with supplies at Kamien-Pomorski near Sempolon in north Poland. Three German railway guards were killed and 10 wounded. Most of the valuable freight was destroyed, and traffic on the line was interrupted for two days. The Germans immediately searched the countryside and offered a reward of 250,000 marks (about $100,000) for information leading to the arrest of the saboteurs. In Poland thousands of persons are starving for want of opportunity to earn money to buy food. But not one Pole offered information. Despite the daring of the attack, in the heart of a military crossroads, all of the saboteurs escaped.

Not only in the homeland does Poland fight the Nazi aggressor. More than 200,000 troops are continuing the battle in foreign lands, some 40,000 of them in the Polish army in England and Scotland, 12,000 in the Polish air corps in England, 60,000 in the Polish army of the near east, including the famous Carpathian division, and about 90,000 with the Red army in Russia. Other thousands have been training in Canada.

"Always I must fight Poles!" exclaimed a German officer taken prisoner by Polish forces in Egypt. "I fought them in Poland, I fought them in France, I met them when they raided Narvik, and now I must fight them in Africa. You can never defeat people like that."

The formation of a fighting army abroad after the homeland had been overrun is a miracle which has been credited largely to the Polish prime minister, Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski. Following the defeat in October, 1939, more than 50,000 troops escaped over the Polish frontiers. They joined thousands of their countrymen from all parts of the earth to form an army in France. In addition, important units of the Polish navy escaped and joined the British.

Gen. Sikorski organized the army in France, under the direction of the Polish government in exile. When the French lines began to crumble, Sikorski hastened to his friend, Gen. Weygand, and begged him to continue the fight. "Things looked blacker at the gates of Warsaw in 1920 (when the Russian bolsheviks were beaten back) than at the gates of Paris in 1940," Sikorski urged. But Weygand replied resignedly: "The French army has lost faith in the efficacy of resistance."

Again the Polish army was in grave danger. Sikorski communicated with Winston Churchill, flew to England and obtained Churchill's promise that England would resist the Nazis to the end. The Polish troops were evacuated with the British from Dunkerque, save for those who were cut off by the Nazis and who fled to Switzerland. The Polish forces in French Syria crossed the border into Palestine and became part of the British army in the near east. The Polish government moved to England.

Again Poland took up the fight, in Egypt and Libia, in Syria, in Persia, in the raids on Norway. The Polish air force participated in bombing raids on Germany, and has been credited with bringing down almost 20 per cent of the Nazi planes hit over England. Said British Gen. Cunningham of Polish flyers in Egypt: "Give me three Polish pilots for every squadron."

When Germany invaded Russia the Russians released thousands of Polish war prisoners from their concentration camps and these soldiers, captured when Russia invaded Poland, promptly prepared to fight beside the Russian troops in the war on Hitler. Gen. Wladyslaw Anders, freed from Lubianka prison, was appointed by Sikorski to command these forces. A tattered, ragged army he had. Fifty thousand men, lacking not only military equipment, but even shoes and clothing. But Gen. Anders began building, expecting to eventually create an army in Russia of 150,000 Poles.

After three years, Poland still fights. She was the first to brave the Nazi might. Her land is a vast concentration camp, her men are exported into slavery, her women and children starve, her troops can drill only on foreign soils. But still Poland fights.

An angel, sent to report on the affairs of earth, returned to heaven with the following observation:

"Everybody in Britain wears frock coats and sports clothes and talks about the war, in Germany everybody walks about in uniforms and talks about peace, but in Poland everybody is in concentration camps and prisons and shouts: 'We shall triumph!'"

PRIVATE FAY ON PARADE!

In camp, on the march, deep in his fox hole, Pvt. William C. Fay, formerly a member of the sports staff of The Tribune, doesn't forget to give up his notes on army life. Private Fay is a man who can think well of a sergeant, find natural beauties along the last half mile of a 20 mile hike, or grow philosophic over scrambled eggs in the rain. This is another of his reports on his life in the army.

By PVT. WILLIAM C. FAY

NOBODY likes a parade more than the stray dogs which roam army camps. The other day, for instance, our battalion practice-marched around the divisional area—five miles on black-top road. We had stepped off only two blocks when three canine recruits slipped out of the bordering woods and fell into step behind the captain at the head of the column.

We marched company by company, companies split into platoons. Four of us, acting corporals, were abreast in the front rank of the first platoon, three paces behind the dogs and six behind the captain. At each intersection a private dropped from our platoon to act as road guard, staying at his post until the battalion passed, then falling in at the rear, almost a quarter mile from the head of the column. Entering the last half mile we had lost 30 privates but had added 11 dogs to the original trio, which made our platoon strength 1 lieutenant, 1 sergeant, 4 acting corporals, 2 privates, and 14 dogs representing at least 60 breeds.

Our 15th recruit, more bird dog than anything else, joined up less than 100 yards from barracks, ambling out of the woods and across the road, barely escaping the front wheels of a regimental supply truck. The sergeant promptly nicknamed No. 15 "Mom," because it was obvious she soon would be. The lieutenant remarked on the possibility of the platoon picking up five or six additional recruits in the last 50 yards. The captain said he hoped not.

We swung into company street while the rest of the battalion marched on, accompanied by the dog squad. Only Mom stayed loyally at the captain's heels.

We passed the mess hall. Mom came to a perfect point as the mess sergeant stepped out on the side porch (kindly mess sergeants are the meal ticket of every stray).

"Get Mom a bone, sergeant," the captain ordered. He halted the company and bent over to smooth Mom's ears. "Old girl," the captain added, "if that supply truck had hit you back there on the road it would have been a massacre."

After practice hikes come overnight hikes, which begin, oddly enough it seemed to me, at 5:30 a. m. You grab a hasty breakfast, shrug on your pack, and march 7 to 15 miles to your bivouac area. Then—simulating combat conditions—you immediately dig a slit trench for protection against artillery fire and aircraft strafing; then you erect your tent.

On our first overnight Private Rutgers, never a man to stay on his feet longer than necessary, got his tent up in a hurry, then sat down on his pack and found a patch of blue sky to contemplate. Along came the sergeant.

"Comfortable, Rutgers?"

"Yes, sergeant."

The sergeant told the recumbent Rutgers that he might not be so comfortable some day if he continued to sit on his pack instead of camouflaging his tent and trench from Jap planes. The sergeant suggested Private Rutgers get back to work—quick.

Private Rutgers did. He gathered staggering armfuls of brush, turf, and scrub oaks. He piled them high over and around his tent. He did a masterful job of camouflage, so masterful that at 2 o'clock that night, after he had gone a block away, he spent half an hour on the way back, groping thru every tree clump in the company area, before he could find his tent in the darkness.

Of course he woke everybody up, including the sergeant. But it could have been worse, as somebody pointed out. The sergeant might have detailed Private Rutgers to camouflage the latrine.

Getting up at 5:30 your first morning in the woods is not exactly the way Browning pictured it. The lark may be on the wing, but so were the mosquitoes since midnight; the hillside may be dew-pearled, but your tent is plenty damp for the same reason, as you discover when you try to roll your pack. God's in His heaven, all's right with the world, but you're not so sure about the scrambled eggs. The rest of the breakfast is hot cereal, nameless in the half-light, but posthumously identified as Tom Mix's favorite, and fried potatoes and coffee.

The ground is cold and wet. The front fender of the supply truck makes a convenient table. What if light No. 20 oil gets into your coffee? It's better than no cream. You cleanse your mess kit in the big pot of boiling soapy water, grab your pack, and fall into ranks. The platoon leader signals forward. It is still dark. The uniforms blend into the blackness. This is Sherwood forest, and the scout who steps silently from behind a tree is Robin Hood, if you can imagine Robin chewing tobacco, needing a shave, and wearing a sergeant's chevrons.

Great Medical Discoveries
For the control of disease and the relief of pain

1796—Why did milkmaids never get smallpox?

What magic charm spared the milkmaids' lives when plagues of smallpox ravaged a town... when guards with warning flags quarantined house after house? In 1796, a young English doctor, Robert Jenner, found the answer.

Milk cows frequently suffered from a mild form of smallpox, called cowpox. While milking an afflicted cow, a girl contracted this milder disease. As a result, she acquired an immunity to the more deadly form—smallpox. Unconsciously, the milkmaid had vaccinated herself!

Today, through Dr. Jenner's brilliant discovery of vaccination, no mother need fear that her child will be killed or disfigured by smallpox!

TODAY, through another great medical discovery, the discomfort of common colds, headaches and everyday muscular aches and pains can be relieved. In 1898, a group of brilliant scientists discovered a remarkable relief from the pain of these maladies that cause more suffering and loss of time than all the serious diseases put together. They discovered Aspirin.

Whenever men of medicine fight pain, Bayer Aspirin is known and trusted for its swift, dependable results. So when you want fast relief from headaches, the painful discomfort of colds and muscular aches and pains, get Bayer Aspirin. Ask for it by its full name and be sure the tablets you buy are stamped "BAYER"—the famous name in Aspirin!

HEADACHE—Next time a headache comes, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a little water. Relief follows quickly. Economical to use. Try it, too, for fast relief of neuralgic pain.

COLDS—To relieve headaches, pains and aches from colds, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a glass of water. Repeat in 2 hours. For a sore throat from a cold, dissolve 3 tablets in ⅓ of a glass of water and gargle. Soreness is quickly eased.

BAYER

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

In 2 to 3 seconds after a Bayer Aspirin Tablet touches water, it is disintegrated and ready to start work. That's what happens in your stomach when you take Bayer Aspirin.

Why Let Wartime Living Drag You Down?

I KNOW, HELEN. WE GOT TO WORK HARDER THAN EVER, BUT I FEEL SO DRAGGED OUT. NO LIFE AT ALL!

SURE PUTTING IN THE OVERTIME THESE DAYS!

NO WONDER Jane is bogged down! Look at how she lives these days. Irregular hours, unaccustomed hard work, too little sleep have changed her whole way of living. Particularly in her eating! She's apt to eat meals that aren't properly balanced—and neglect the important matter of "bulk."

ANOTHER PIECE OF PIE?

AND LACK OF "bulk" is one of the common causes of constipation. In such cases, medicinal laxatives are not the solution—they give only temporary relief, do not get at the cause! But, eating crisp, golden ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water is the answer to Jane's constipation.

GOT TO FEEL YOUR BEST TO DO YOUR BEST!

THIS DELICIOUS cereal supplies needed "bulk," corrects the cause of constipation like Jane's. Why not start eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN yourself if you lack "bulk" in your diet? Now more than ever, you know, your country needs you willing and able to do your best!

A HIGHLY NUTRITIVE FOOD, TOO

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is more than a source of needed "bulk." For it contains valuable carbohydrates, proteins, minerals and vitamins. Every ounce serving supplies 2½ times as much iron as whole wheat, 4 times as much phosphorus and 4 times as much niacin, in addition to 7% of an adult's daily need of vitamin B_1.

Overnight to the Jungles...
SPARKIES FOR BREAKFAST!

Captain D. W. Pippinger, veteran Pan American Airways' pilot, is one of many Clipper Captains who think nothing of crossing the ocean while most folks are getting their night's sleep. And the breakfasts that await Captain Pippinger in the far places of the earth get off to a delicious start with Sparkies. "It's smart to eat Sparkies since they bring you the two most widely missing health elements in America," declare Pan American's personnel. In the four corners of the world you now find the red and blue packages, as smart Americans everywhere demand these new-day cereals with their great new energy and growth bonus!

PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS

NEW! QUAKER PUFFED WHEAT SPARKIES

Wheat Sparkies are So Delicious..

Why Not Give Your Family These Widely Missing Health Elements?

Widely Missing GROWTH ELEMENTS!

Overwhelming proof has piled up that Vitamin D is seriously deficient in American diets, yet children cannot grow tall and strong, cannot develop good bones and teeth, without plenty of Vitamin D.

Children adore delicious Sparkies. So millions of smart mothers already take the Sparkies way to give a liberal extra supply of Vitamin D daily—actually 40% of the average child's daily minimum needs!

Widely Missing ENERGY ELEMENTS!

Now it is proved that haggard fatigue, poor nerves and lack of vital energy can result from too little Vitamin B1—the very vitamin that is most seriously deficient in American diets!

Everyone loves delicious Sparkies. And now Quaker has added a bonus of Vitamin B1! If you are not among the millions who have discovered Sparkies for breakfast, order Sparkies today—get this extra needed energy element!

Could anything be more wonderful than these natural snowy grains of rice and rich whole wheat grains...when they become, like magic, the luscious toasted grains of Wheat Sparkies and Rice Sparkies?

Just pitture . . . a giant steam explosion takes place, right inside each grain, by Quaker's famous grain-exploding process. It blasts each tiny food cell within each grain . . . cooks it wholly, makes it completely digestible!

Yet, the shape of the natural grain is left untouched. Just like the natural grains of wheat and rice . . . only big, airy, crisp! No other process has ever turned natural unground grains of wheat and rice into a breakfast food so utterly delicious!

But remember, only the Quaker new puffed wheat and rice brings added healthful benefits of value to all Americans. See the panel at the left. Only in the red and blue packages with the word Sparkies on the front. So be sure to ask for Wheat Sparkies and Rice Sparkies by name—today!

Bang! Bang!

THE Old Soldier with the wooden leg was always the first Teenie Weenie up in the morning. He usually climbed out of his Teenie Weenie bed at daybreak. He then built a fire in the Teenie Weenie cook stove, put on a 10-drop kettle of water for the breakfast tea and called the Cook.

Just as the Cook entered the kitchen one morning he heard a loud bang and, immediately afterward, another bang. "What's that noise?" he asked as he reached for his Teenie Weenie apron.

"Sounds like a big folk's gun," answered the Old Soldier. "I believe the hunting season opens today."

"I hope nothing happens to our friends," said the Cook, taking down an acorn mixing bowl.

The Cook did not sing as usual while he was getting the Teenie Weenie breakfast that morning. It made him feel sad to think that the hunting season was on, for the Teenie Weenies had many friends among the squirrels and rabbits throughout the neighborhood. He put on some frog ham to fry, and he had just finished mixing a batch of pancake batter when there was a loud knock on the kitchen door.

"Come in," he called.

The door opened and a frightened chipmunk popped his head through the opening and began chattering at a great rate. Now, the Teenie Weenies can make out much of what the animals say, and the Cook understood that Nick the squirrel had been shot.

The Cook immediately notified the General and the Doctor, for Nick was a close friend of the Teenie Weenies.

"We'd better go to him at once," said the Doctor. Grabbing his tiny medicine case, he rushed off after the chipmunk, who led the way to where Nick was hiding from the hunters.

A crowd of Teenie Weenies followed and soon they came to a big bush under which the squirrel lay. The Doctor quickly examined the wound and then, turning to the General, he said, "He's pretty badly hurt. We must get him to some place where he will be protected from the weather. He can't climb up the tree to his home, and he's too heavy for us to get him up there."

"We could build a shelter out of birch bark for him," suggested the Cowboy.

"That's a good idea," said the General. "Some of you men bring tools and we'll get to work at once."

THE DOCTOR VISITED HIM TWICE A DAY.

"I'll need a lot of hot water," said the Doctor, "so you had better bring over a pot and some water."

In a short time the little men came back with the tools and the necessary pans and pots. The Old Soldier soon built a fire and hung over it the metal cap of a soda mint bottle which the Teenie Weenies used for a kettle. The kettle had to be filled many times, because the Doctor kept sending for more hot water.

The Teenie Weenies found a big piece of birch bark and some poles. With these they quickly built a roof over the wounded squirrel. The Dunce and the Policeman brought in armfuls of soft moss and carefully placed them around Nick. The Lady of Fashion brought some Teenie Weenie sheets which she tore up into long bandages. The little lady is an excellent nurse, and she kept the Doctor supplied with acorn bowls of hot water while he dressed the wound.

The Doctor removed two small bullets from the squirrel. That must have been very painful, but Nick never uttered a single sound.

The Teenie Weenies watched over Nick very carefully. Some of the little people were with him day and night for over a week. They brought nut meats to him, and saw that he always had a fresh supply of water on hand. The Doctor visited him twice a day, and under his watchful eye and the good care of the Teenie Weenies, Nick's wounds began to heal nicely.

Rice Krispies, as you know, are famed for their mellow flavor and lasting crispness. There's a "crunch" in every spoonful, first to last. They're so crisp you'll hear them snap! crackle! pop! in milk or cream.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes are something everybody likes. Their distinctive flavor has made them America's largest ready-to-eat cereal for more than 35 years. They sharpen your appetite—make you want to eat. And they're wonderfully economical!

But flavor goodness and crispness aren't the whole story on these two leading breakfast cereals. They're downright good for you!

As recommended by the U. S. Official Nutrition Food Rules, Kellogg's Corn Flakes and Rice Krispies are restored to whole grain nutritive values through the addition of thiamin (Vitamin B_1), niacin and iron.

Everyone needs Vitamin B_1 every day for the maintenance of normal appetite and growth, and for the normal functioning of the nervous and digestive systems. Niacin helps keep tissues in good tone. Iron helps build red blood.

Redeem your Money Saver Coupon at your food dealer's now. And let the family enjoy both Kellogg's Corn Flakes and Rice Krispies.

Ann Hare

—beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emlen Spencer Hare of Park Avenue, New York—engaged to Walter Wooster Richard of New York and Long Island.

ANN AND HER FIANCÉ at the famous Stork Club before Wooster was called to active Navy duty. Ann is Navy-minded, too, works hard with Bundles for Bluejackets and the Navy Relief Society.

*She's Engaged!

She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!

ANN'S RING is lovely—a large marquise-cut diamond that reflects light with sparkling radiance. A baguette diamond is set on each side of the solitaire.

ADORABLY YOUNG AND LOVELY—there's a rare-orchid charm about Ann's blonde young beauty, and her exquisite skin has a luminous, satin-smooth look. Of her complexion care Ann says: "I just use Pond's Cold Cream every day. Pond's is so light and silky my skin just loves it."

This is her simple daily skin care: She slips Pond's all over her face and throat. She pats with deft little pats to soften and release dirt and make-up—then tissues off well. She rinses with more Pond's—for extra softening and cleansing. Tissues it off again.

Do this yourself—every night, for daytime clean-ups, too. You'll see why society leaders like Mrs. John Roosevelt, Mrs. Ernest Biddle, are so devoted to Pond's Cold Cream. Why more women and girls everywhere use Pond's than any other face cream. Ask for the larger sizes when you buy Pond's Cold Cream—you get even more for your money. Popular in price. At beauty counters everywhere.

MARRIED! The sudden leave of Ann Hare's Navy fiancé put their wedding ahead of schedule. Like so many girls who marry service men on wartime notice these days, Ann did not wear traditional white satin and lace, but she looked adorably bride-like in a simple daytime frock of powder blue with a tiny ribbon hat and veil to match.*

THE JAPS KEEP A MAN AT THEIR CONTROL CENTER, WITH A RECEIVING SET TUNED TO THIS BAND, 24 HOURS A DAY! THE SENDING SET NEED ONLY BE ON FOR A FEW SECONDS...
AS OUR BOMBERS LEAVE HERE, THE SPOTTER THROWS HIS SWITCH, SAYS ONE CODE WORD—INDICATING NUMBER, DIRECTION AND SO ON... —THEN HE GOES OFF THE AIR!

DEMOCRAT LEADERS DESERT SCHUETZ

YANKS ASSURED FLOOD OF GIFTS FOR CHRISTMAS

Northwest Side Busy Buying, Wrapping.

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Christmas shopping has already started thruout the northwest area as entire communities and mothers, fathers, wives, and sweethearts begin wrapping gifts with holly tissue and Santa Claus seals for the men serving their country overseas. The Chicago postoffice has announced that packages destined for foreign ports must be in the mail this month and the earlier the better. Nothing mailed after Nov. 1 will reach the men by Dec. 25.

Mothers who only a few years ago planned Christmas with sleds, filled cooky jars, and loaded stockings hung above the home fireplace are wondering today what the climate is like in India, Iceland, the Egyptian desert, or New Caledonia. Will Christmas find their boys watching the snow or traveling over deserts? Will there be poinsettias, holy wreaths, and stuffed turkey or canned corn beef and the bareness of Christmas in a military outpost?

Families Study Maps.

This year mothers whose sons are overseas must wrap Christmas into a package weighing not more than 11 pounds. Postoffices will not accept any overseas mail weighing one ounce over this limit. The packages must be no longer than 18 inches.

However because of the urgent need for shipping space to transport materials directly essential to the war effort, the war and navy department are urging the public to voluntarily restrict the size of Christmas packages to that of an ordinary shoe box and the weight to not more than 6 pounds. Postal authorities also have given suggestions for wrapping. Gifts must be placed tightly together and packed in substantial boxes.

The outside wrappings must be sturdy enough to withstand the weight of piles of mail that may be placed on them. Sharp edged gifts such as knives or razors must have edges and points protected so that they will not cut thru the package and damage other mail or injure postal employés.

Censor to Take a Look.

Each parcel will be subject to censorship and Christmas gift senders are urged to wrap the packages so they are easily opened for inspection. Mothers are urged not to send perishable foods or clothing. No intoxicants or inflammable gifts will be accepted at the postoffices. Currency is not allowed, either.

Gifts suggested are toilet articles, candies, cigars, cigarets or leather goods. Candies should be packed in wood, metal, or corrugated pasteboard boxes. Cigars and cigarets may be left in their original cartons and wrapped with sturdy outside coverings without changing their mailing classficaton.

One of the most extensve community projects is being carried out for men in service by the residents of Prospect Heights. Nearly $100 was raised for the "Our Boys in Service Fund" from the sale of tickets to a benefit softball game held recently at the Prospect Heights Recreation field sponsored by the Merchants' association. Bottles have been placed near the cash register in every store in town and patrons are asked to contribute to the fund.

Aid "Bundles for America."

Arlington Heights is taking an active part in the Bundles for America, Inc. The Chicago headquarters of Bundles for America is opening a kit packing division on the 18th floor of Mather tower, where bags for all men in uniform will be packed. The sailors' kits are of blue sailcloth with "Bundles for Bluejackets" stenciled in white. The soldiers' kits are of olive drab stenciled "Kits for Khaki." One dollar buys one of these kits and donors may specify whether it is to go to the army or navy.

The bulk of the Christmas gifts is being packed by the individual families who have had letters from their sons. Many mothers wrote to their sons asking what they want for Christmas, but as yet have had no reply.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Duncan of Palatine must choose a gift for their son, Staff Sergt. Burton Duncan Jr., stationed at New Caledonia.

Winter Season Now.

Sergt. Duncan wrote home recently, "We are having our winter season here, but the lowest temperature so far has been about 40 degrees."

Mrs. Emma Weisgerber of Arlington Heights has an idea, too, of the climate of Egypt where her son, Sergt. George Weisgerber, is stationed. He wrote, "Had a ride in a rickshaw pulled by a big Zulu. We are out on the desert. It is hot, but the heat is dry and much more pleasant than the heat of Louisiana."

Well liked Director John F. Andersen, Skokie, turns a sheet of the fast moving score. Helen Maynard, pianist, is tensed for her cues. Shirley Wulff acts as "page turner." Four cornetists, Jack Ristow, Paul Schmidt, Dan Schneider, Art Thake, enjoy a pause. Fred Hoeppner and Marjorie Soper are the cello players in the picture at the right. There are three pianists in the orchestra.

The junior miss in her smart middy is Lois Redden, violinist. Mrs. Raymond L. Carlson shows delight in her son's and husband's absorption in the bass viol score. Young Carlson is Raymond Jr., Ernest W. Yeaman, Mrs. M. K. Soper, and Mrs. Yeaman are spectators. Mrs. Carlson is president, Mr. Yeaman is vice president-treasurer, and Mrs. Soper is secretary of the parents' group formed this fall for an administrative role.

Visit to an Old House Recalls Era Gone by

P. T. Tiedemann.

There is an escape from the warring present. It is a visit to the 11 room Tiedemann house at Addison and Green streets, Bensenville, whose heavy double pine doors open into a cool, spacious yesterday of carved mahogany, Bissel carpets, intricate late patterned curtains and fancy engravings.

Jacob T. Tiedemann and Miss Emma Tiedemann, who occupy the house, arrived in Bensenville 65 years ago this month. Their father, P. T. Tiedemann, a pioneer merchant, a Republican and churchgoing man, built the sturdy house in 1885. Its foundation was dug eight years after he moved his general store from Carpenter road and Milwaukee avenue over the Irving Park road to Bensenville to better serve the farmers who traded with him.

Mr. Tiedemann lived to see his 95th birthday in his house, sat at the sitting room window thru the years in his reed arm chair, watched the lilacs bloom on the sprawling bushes and saw the apples redden on the gnarled fruit trees near the side veranda. He died in 1928.

Wanted no Remodeling.

"No one will ever tromp over my head," the aged merchant would say when his daughter Emma would suggest converting the upstairs rooms into a modern apartment. After his death his sons, Jacob and Thomas, ran the business, selling out only two years ago. Paved roads had long ago taken away the mud and automobiles had replaced the farmers' buggy. The Tiedemann store was competing with State street.

The house, however, remains almost the same as the day when P. T. Tiedemann, merchant, proudly moved his wife and his seven children into the white frame home with its important entrance ways, its sweeping stairs and lofty ceilings. The old oil lamps gave way to brass chandeliers. Some years ago Miss Emma had a half bath built on the first floor. The funeral for Mrs. Tiedemann was held in the formal parlor as early as 1896.

But for this and a few years that slipped by somehow, it could be the

Medill-Tribune Legion Post Installs Officers Saturday

Medill-Tribune post of the American Legion will hold a grand installation party at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night at the Svithiod Singing club, 624 West Wrightwood avenue. There will be a musical program, and a smorgasbord supper will be served. Members of the post are requested to contact their division or department comrades for tickets.

ADD 6 MEMBERS TO NORTH PARK COLLEGE STAFF

Six new faculty members have been added to the staff of North Park college for its 52d year of educational service. The Rev. Elmer W. Fondell, former pastor of the Mission Covenant church at Paxton, Ill., has been appointed acting director of the Bible institute.

New teachers in the junior college and their subjects are: Miss Alice Swanson, secretarial; Herbert C. Hansen, social sciences; Harold Swanson, physical education.

Additions to the academy teaching staff bring to the campus Miss Dorothy Brandes, Latin, and Jay M. Conrader, biology and general science. An administrative change has placed Oscar E. Olson of the music faculty in the position of admissions counselor for the school.

Tuberculosis Institute Sets 2 Northwest Area Clinics

A clinic will be held from 10 to 12 o'clock Monday, Oct. 19, in the Des Plaines Health center, 1561 Ellinwood avenue. The Elmwood Park-Leyden township clinic will be held from 10 until 3 o'clock Wednesday, Oct. 28, in the Municipal building.

BARTELL, GODEK URGE SUPPORT FOR MORELAND

Hold Incumbent Has Failed Voters.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Two Horner-Courtney leaders in the big Democratic split in the 1938 primary were among the Democrats who announced last week that they are switching their support in the 7th district congressional fight from the incumbent, Leonard W. Schuetz, to his Republican rival, former Ald. James C. Moreland.

They are Fred E. Bartell, 4379 Elston avenue, a leader of the 1938 insurgents in the 39th ward, and Michael Godek, 3901 Schubert avenue, a leader in the 35th ward. The 39th was the home of Schuetz before he moved to the 35th. Both gave heavy Horner-Courtney majorities in the 1938 primary balloting.

Bartell said he is now backing Moreland as the fittest of the two candidates to represent the largest congressional district in the nation.

Wants Representation.

"I am supporting Moreland and am urging that all my friends do likewise," Bartell said. Tho this district is the largest in the United States, it has practically no representation in congress.

"The present congressman has been elected six times in Democratic landslides. He has always managed to squeeze thru, by ever narrowing margins, by hanging on the coat tails of the head of the Democratic ticket.

"It is time we Democrats seize this opportunity to get rid of this ineffective congressman. During his 12 years he has accomplished nothing for the people of his district or for the nation. He has been content to sit and sit, drawing his salary and allowances and doing nothing.

"He is hard to approach and is evasive when asked to do favors for his people. He has actually rebuffed delegations from his district. As a result the citizens of the district are a forgotten people.

"Let's now repudiate him and join in the popular surge to elect Jim Moreland, who has a record of efficiency and attention to detail. Moreland will support the people, so let us support him."

No Use for Pretense.

Godek criticized Congressman Schuetz for bidding for both the German and Polish nationalistic groups' support with shifting claims as to his origin.

"We Polish-Americans are naturally proud of our ancestry and ordinarily support our own people provided they are true Americans. We have no use for those who pretend one thing today and another tomorrow.

"Leonard Schuetz plays up his name. He wants us Polish-Americans to believe he is a Pole. Sometimes, when it will serve his purpose best, he claims he was born in Germany.

"Just what he is makes little difference to us now, because we have lost faith in him. Many are joining me in disowning him and making a determined effort to defeat him.

"We are supporting James C. Moreland because he has shown that he is fair to the Polish-Americans. He has sponsored Polish-Americans for office. This year he is behind Michael Rudnik for county commissioner, one of the two Polish-American candidates on the Republican ticket.

Schuetz Stays in Race.

"We Polish-Americans, Republican and Democratic alike, feel that we will be better off with Jim Moreland as our congressman. It is our privilege as free Americans to vote for him and finally rid ourselves of this misrepresentative, Leonard W. Schuetz."

From the Democratic camp it was denied last week that Schuetz, who is in ill health, might be induced to withdraw from the election race, his place to be taken by Ald. Walter J. Orlikoski [35th]. Schuetz is reported to have assured the party leaders that his health would not prevent him from spending most of his time in Washington if he is reëlected.

It was recalled that while the regular Democratic slate was being made up for the April primary the city hall leaders seriously discussed replacement of Schuetz on the ticket. Their reason was said to be threefold.

Loses Ground Steadily.

Most important, the reports said, was the fact that Schuetz, a notoriously poor campaigner, has been giving ground in the elections at such a rate that the Democrats fear he is about to lose the district. Another was that Schuetz's illness began long before the primary. A third was that the congressman, in spite of the fact that he has been the least self-assertive of the Illinois rubber stamp congressmen, had unwittingly offended labor elements in his constituency by his votes on the floor of the house and by his failure to vote on labor bills the administration regarded as important.

Of the five Illinois congressional districts the Republicans are hopeful of recapturing this year the 7th is expected to return the widest G. O. P. margin. The others are the 1st and 3d in Chicago and the 22d and 23d downstate.

NEW OFFICE AIDS G. O. P. NOMINEES FOR LEGISLATURE

Republicans See Gain on Northwest Side.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

The new office to assist Republican candidates for the state legislature, created with Gov. Green's approval, has invited the 25th district G. O. P. nominees to call at the La Salle hotel this week to plan their campaign. The 25th district covers most of the northwest side.

Nominees are Frederick B. Resag, young attorney, for the senate, and Rep. Elroy T. Sandquist and Eugene L. Nusser for the house. Democrats have chosen Sen. Frank J. Huckin Jr. for reëlection, and Rep. Stanley R. Kosinski and Jacob A. Mueller for the house.

In charge of the new office in G. O. P. headquarters are Senators William Knox of the north side 6th district and Arthur J. Bidwill of the country towns 7th district.

Seek Majority at Springfield.

Sen. Knox suggested to Gov. Green that practical help might be necessary to assure a G. O. P. majority in the legislature for the 1943 session. Indications now are that the project—an innovation—will render substantial aid where it is needed. Where necessary, inexperienced nominees will be tutored in speaking and other personal contact features of campaigning. Direct mail methods will be explained to some.

In the districts where Republicans might lose a house seat thru poor teamwork of the two G. O. P. house nominees, stern warnings are expected to be issued. There have been elections in which the Democrats got two of the three house seats in a district by making their men run neck-and-neck, while one Republican so far outdistanced the other that the predominant G. O. P. vote was wasted.

In 1934 and 1936 the Republicans sought only one house seat in the 25th district. On the first occasion the Democratic vote was almost twice the Republican vote, and on the second, about five to three.

Cite Republican Gains.

However, in 1938 each party ran two men, and the Democratic vote for the office was about 4 to 3 against the Republican. The G. O. P. loser was about 12,000 votes behind the low Democratic winner.

In 1940 further improvement was shown by the Republicans, who this time were topped by only 11 to 10 for the office. The vital margin, between the losing Republican house nominee and the low Democratic winner, was about 7,400 straight votes. This G. O. P. candidate was separated by about 6,000 straight votes from his winning teammate, Rep. Sandquist. Altho 6,000 straight votes would not have put Sandquist's running mate into office, this bracket of figures from the last election illustrates the danger of one house nominee running too far ahead when the party vote is close.

Largest District in State.

Resag is urging voters to realize that theirs is the largest district in Illinois—600,000 population—and that in Sen. Huckin's 12 years in the senate "whoever heard of anything that he did there?"

"All we know of the incumbent's presence in the senate is that he rubber-stamped every request made by his boss, the Kelly-Nash machine," Resag said. "Not in all his rubber-stamping did he attract any attention, but we know what he was doing because we know who put him there."

Resag said he would keep punching away for economy in state government if he is sent to Springfield.

Pledges Study of Problems.

"I will show the people of my district that I am interested in their problems," he said. "I will work. I will study. I will listen. And I will act to give my big district the representation is deserves."

Sen. Huckin is 50 years old, has four children, and was educated in the Chicago public schools. After employment in the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago he became chief deputy clerk of the Superior court, a position which leads his opponent to term him "Two Job" Huckin. In 1923 he was elected commissioner of the old Portage Park district and was reëlected in 1929. His home is at 4305 North Milwaukee avenue.

Early Bensenville Home

P. T. Tiedemann, pioneer merchant in Chicago and Bensenville, built his home on a firm foundation 57 years ago in Bensenville when the village boasted a couple hundred residents. Today the house, shown in a wintry scene, still stands amid horse chestnut trees, apple trees, and lilacs, wearing its same expression of the 1880s. When Father Tiedemann died in 1928 the old home was kept in the same tradition by his daughter, Miss Emma Tiedemann, and his son, Jacob. Only changes in the spacious old house are electric lights, a half bath on the first floor, and a "For Sale" sign on the railing of the front porch.

VISIT TO AN OLD HOUSE RECALLS DAYS OF 1880S

Bensenville Home Is Refuge from War.

year 1885 in the Tiedemann house. Young people could play the huge grand piano sitting demurely between the heavy carved mahogany legs. As they sing Mr. Tiedemann would shake heads with his neighbor in the sitting room over President Cleveland's desire to placate his party, the need to salve the growing social unrest thru the country, the need to stop all the strikes. They could shake their heads too over the trusts and the rising cost of living.

Mrs. Tiedemann could look out the curtained parlor windows at the horse chestnut trees silhouetted in the twilight. The family Bible could lie open on the marble topped table.

Today the marble topped table stands in the same place. The same mottled finish is preserved on the pine doors. The same Bissel carpet, the pink roses faded only a little in its design of green leaves, is on the parlor floor. The parlor wears the same cool dark atmosphere in the restful style of the 1880s and the sitting room beyond is as charmingly liveable. The wide kitchen has the iron pump in its same place at the sink and places are set at 6 o'clock on the kitchen table just as tho old Mr. Tiedemann would stride in for supper with another day's business behind him.

Mark of an Era.

The Tiedemann house is more than a frame building with a strong foundation and solid framework. It is the middle west at the turn of a century. It is respect for solid things, well stocked fruit cellars, ample pantry shelves, a much used cook stove, quiet leisure and fearless men who paid their honest debts and reared their families to fear God. The Tiedemann house, now lost in a small town at a busy crossroads of two Chicago highways, is history.

Maybe it, too, will soon have to change. There are portents of things to come. Today the house wears a war sticker in its front parlor window and a "For Sale" sign is tacked to the railing on the front veranda. Miss Emma says, "It's so big for us and it costs a lot to heat."

DEAN NAMES FIVE TO DIRECT WRIGHT COLLEGE ROUTINE

Dean William H. Conley of Wright Junior college, 3400 North Austin avenue, has appointed a committee of five administrative leaders to direct the routine of the college while he is on leave, serving in Chicago as director of publications for the United States navy. The change was also necessitated by the retirement of Jerome C. Isenbarger, assistant dean. New directors are Alice J. Griffin, Josiah L. Geist, Joseph C. Novak, Everett R. Hutchinson, and Richard H. Bostrom.

Dean Conley.

Miss Griffin, as director of personnel, will act as chairman of the administrative group when the dean is absent. She will have full responsibility for the admission, attendance and graduation of students and will be in charge of the operation of the central office.

As director of instruction, Mr. Geist will act as chairman of department heads. He will aid the librarian in the solution of library problems and will plan faculty meetings of which he will be chairman.

Mr. Novak will officiate as director of programs and office equipment. He will plan the scholastic program, registration, supervision of stockroom, administration of the military reserve program and will coöperate with the engineer-custodian in carrying out the regulations of the board of education.

In charge of activities is Mr. Hutchinson. He will be responsible for all extracurricular activities, athletics, dramatics, music and the maintenance of the activity calendar. Mr. Bostrom will be director of finance, controling the board of education budget and accounting procedures for the school.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Oct. 5

The best way to keep hardy chrysanthemums over winter is to heel them in in the coldframe and utilize the single shoots for planting. Do not transplant in fall unless the plants are well protected. Fine effects can be obtained by careful selection of colors.

Never use wet soil when potting plants and never use dry soil. If it is too wet mix dry soil with it until it is of the proper consistency; if it is too dry sprinkle it and work it over with a spade, trowel, or hands until it is crumbly and moist.

Plant bulbs for indoor use, water and cover with soil and straw or similar material. If a cool cellar is available and dark simply place the pots on the floor or shelf but watch that they do not dry out.

Tuesday, Oct. 6

Pot paperwhite narcisii for Thanksgiving bloom. The amaryillis should enter a period of rest from now until spring. Simply withhold water and when the leaves turn yellow and die down place pot and bulb in the basement until spring or when it becomes active, then bring it to the window.

Go over walks and drives, repairing or constructing any that need attention. Evergreens should be transplanted as soon as possible to enable the plants to be established before severe weather. Do not plant evergreens too close to a building and especially those which become quite large.

Wednesday, Oct. 7

Planting deciduous shrubs [those that drop their foliage in fall] with evergreens forms a pleasing contrast, and gives variety. Evergreens are for warm winter effects, but when planted under certain conditions they may become dull and uninteresting. Use shrubs of fine texture and small leaves, such as box barberry, pointella, hypericum.

Tall kinds of evergreen that grow out of bounds should be replaced with more suitable kinds. One of the finest shrubs where a specimen plant is needed is the beauty bush [kolhwitzia amabilis]. It grows to a height of 8 feet or more and 6 feet across.

Thursday, Oct. 8

Protect roses by hilling up soil around them. Simply draw the soil as high as possible from between the plants and later cover the area with straw and strawy manure. The tops will stick out above the plants, but they will need pruning in spring; they serve to hold the mulch in place.

Finish planting narcissi bulbs. Tulips now can be planted. Try a few tulip species in the rockery. If an even growth is desired, excavate the bed to a depth of eight inches and place the bulbs in position by hand. Cover gain with soil.

Mulch after the ground is frozen. Plant colonies of tulips in the perennial border. The catalogs will give full information as to color and height. By a careful selection, a tulip display can be had over a period of two months, but even a few brighten up the garden.

Friday, Oct. 9

It is a fine time to cut out deadwood from shrubs. Tender water lilies can be easily carried thru the winter when allowed to remain in their containers and placed in a basement. Cut back the leaves, place on the floor and examine them occasionally that they do not become so dried out they shrivel up and are seriously injured. To prevent this simply water the soil but not sufficiently to cause reawakened activity.

When growing peonies, which can be transplanted now, be sure to include the lovely tenuifolia, brilliant crimson and officinalis, double crimson. Both flower earlier than the more commonly known varieties. Transplant hardy phlox for divisions of onliy a single stalk will develop the following season.

Saturday, Oct. 10

The daylilies are attracting more and more attention because of ease of culture. They like full sun, but will endure partial shade. The plant will establish itself along the roadside if given the opportunity and there are many varieties in new shades.

Glass gardens offer the person who lacks outdoor facilities for a garden an opportunity to work out a most interesting minature garden. Select the container and place a layer of coarse sand or gravel over the bottom. Over it place a layer of half sand and peat, or leafmold and rich garden loam. The soil buildup can be arranged in the shape desired by the builder.

ARMY OUTLINES 7 POINT OFFER TO MECHANICS

Will Follow Their Usual Civilian Routine.

Help wreck the axis with a wrench was the substance of a plea from the 6th service command last week. It stressed immediate and acute need for men with mechanical ability to volunteer for the army air forces, the signal corps, and the ordnance department.

The army has a gilt edged proposition, army spokesmen said, for any man who has worked as an auto mechanic, gunsmith, electrician, radio repair man, filling station attendant, in plumbing work, at machine trades, or in any other work where ability with his hands was an asset. Age limits are 18 to 44, but the air forces are accepting men as old as 50, it was reported.

Pay Up to $138.

1. A man who joins this service has the same status as any other army volunteer. He begins as a private, but can look forward to rapid advancement to noncommissioned grades, with pay as high as $138 a month, plus rates, quarters, and family allowance.

2. He continues in the army to do the same sort of work he has been doing in private life. He will not drill.

3. He will be accepted if he passes oral examination as to experience and ability at mechanical trades and minimum physical tests. The average mechanic will have little difficulty passing, it was said.

4. He will be at work within a few days after he is accepted. From Chicago he will be sent to a regular army induction camp, from where he will be assigned to a flying field or other station.

Few Moves Assured.

5. He has reasonable assurance that he will not be shifted from camp to camp. He will simply have a job, but it will be at an army center.

6. In the air service as well as signal corps and ordnance, he will be paid while he is trained for work which should be worth thousands of dollars to him after the war. Airplane mechanics will be in demand after the war, it is commonly predicted.

7. He will be serving his country as surely as do the men on the front lines and in the bombers.

The 6th service command is enlisting men from Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin for these vital jobs. Specialists in mechanical trades have been brought to the Chicago recruiting office to explain to applicants the qualifications, duties, and future in these jobs.

What They Need.

In the air forces recruits are needed to become aircraft armorers, mechanics, welders, metal workers, radio mechanics, and operators. Technicians may be assigned also to flying duty, which brings a 50 per cent increase in their base pay.

The signal corps is enlisting specialists for telephone cable splicers and installers, radio and telegraph operators and mechanics.

Chicago applicants should report to the United States army recruiting office at 515 South Franklin street.

Each room will serve as a city ward with block captains, zone captains, air raid wardens, fire marshals, and messengers.

The officers will wear the insignia of defense workers and will be responsible for the obedience and safety of the students in emergencies.

Dedicate Service Flag to 12 on Avers Avenue Today

Chicago Foursome Keeps 'Em Flying

A last minute tune-up for an army air forces training plane is applied at Kelly field, Texas, by these four men from Chicago, who are in a branch of the service that is sometimes called the right arm of the air force. Left to right are Staff Sergt. Charles W. Moss, Pvt. E. R. Christopherson, Pvt. Matthew Block, and Staff Sergt. Arthur F. Mied. Moss is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Moss, 7049 Indiana avenue; Christopherson is the son of Mrs. Karen Christopherson, 1522 North Spaulding avenue; Block is the son of Herman Block, 7242 Bennett avenue, and Mied is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mied, 4355 Hirsch street. The army needs many more men like these, it was announced last week.

ORCHESTRA OF 50 YOUNG ARTISTS OPENS 5TH YEAR

Coming from all parts of the northwest side, including Park Ridge and Des Plaines, the 50 players have state and national stars in their midst. Lloyd Silver, Park Ridge, holds state ranking with his French horn; Hubert Andersen, a former member, was national marimba champion in 1939 and 1940; and Art Thake, cornetist, won a championship recently in the Chicago parochial school contest.

High hopes are held for Franz Benteler, 5854 Manton avenue, violinist. Franz is concertmaster of the northwest orchestra and assistant concertmaster in the orchestra of Lane Technical High school.

Belong to High School Groups.

A number of the musicians also are members of their high school musical groups, and what is leisure time to most young people is practice and rehearsal time to the musicians.

The youngest member of the junior symphony is Billy Beard, 9 years old, of 6064 Newburg avenue, who entered the violin section this fall. Formerly the age minimum was 17.

The orchestra director, who has the affectionate regard and respect of his band, started the group five years ago with 13 players. There are 50 today, with an eventual 60 expected to make a complete symphonic unit. Mr. Andersen has built up a competitive spirit which keeps every player on his toes. For perfect attendance the last two years, Jack Stoffregen, 6938 Hobart avenue, has won permanently the silver attendance cup. Another trophy will be displayed for this year's winner.

Three Principal Concerts.

Three main concerts are given each year, one in December, one in May, and that which opens the summer series of concerts in Norwood Park each year. The community symphony orchestra presents a dignified appearance in public concerts — white blouses and black skirts and trousers.

Because Director Andersen gave up his music school on the northwest side this summer and moved to Skokie, the parents of the orchestra members formed the Northwest Junior Symphony Orchestra Parents' club to carry on administrative duties, such as transportation, raising of funds, and parties. A closely knit group of about 50 families, the young and older people enjoy family movies, picnics, and winter parties together.

A public card party will be given by the parents' group on Friday, Oct. 23, in the fieldhouse. The project was decided at the second meeting held last Monday evening, attended by 22 parents.

Officers and committee chairmen include Mrs. Raymond L. Carlson, 6709 Oconto avenue, president; Ernest W. Yeaman, 6147 Newburg avenue, vice president and treasurer; Mrs. M. K. Soper, 6114 Newburg avenue, secretary; Mrs. Charles McCormick, 5837 Newark avenue, social chairman, and Mrs. William H. Kasch, 6016 Nassau avenue, chairman, ways and means committee.

60 Years Together

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kiessling.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Kiessling, 2521 North Campbell avenue, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary recently with relatives and friends. Their anniversary date was Thursday, Sept. 17. The Kiesslings have resided on the northwest side all the 60 years. Mr. Kiessling, who is 86 years old, was born in Bensenville in 1856. Mrs. Kiessling, 80 years old, was born in Germany in 1862 and came to the United States when she was 19 years old. Their three daughters are Mrs. Robert Panzke, Mrs. R. B. Fiedler, and Mrs. Frank Bitter. Attending the celebration were eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

TAKE GOOD CARE OF APPLIANCES—NEW ONES SCARCE

Hints Given to Keep Them Going for Duration.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to shop carefully for household appliances that are still available for many of our best domestic "helpers" are made of critical materials that have been drafted for our war production.

Now is also the time to keep our household appliances in tiptop shape so that they will function and stay "on the job" for the duration; insurance against a day when we may be told that "there isn't any more."

Our family vacuum cleaner will work longer and give us better service if we keep it well lubricated, empty its bag after each cleaning, keep the nozzle and brush well adjusted, and avoid running over pins and metal objects.

Our electric fans, before storing away this fall, should be oiled and cleaned and wrapped in paper. And during seasons of use, they need occasional lubrication and oiling.

Keep Heating Pads Flat.

Our heating pads should be kept flat when not in use. When in use they should not be creased or immersed in water or have any pin thrust into them.

Our refrigerator should be checked occasionally by an expert to see that its mechanism is performing properly. It should be defrosted according to manufacturer's instructions and if one has lost the instructions on the general care of the refrigerator it would be well to get another copy.

Keep the rubber door gasket well cleaned and dust with talcum to avoid sticking. Wipe up any vegetable juices or fruit juices immediately to keep the finish in good condition, and do not overload the shelves.

Our electric irons should never be dropped as this can damage a vital part. If the iron is not automatic, don't let it get overheated and at any sign of overheating in the cord, have a competent service man check cord and iron.

Tips on Care of Washer.

Our washers should never be overloaded, dirty suds should never be left in them, and after using a washer it should be drained thoroly. Wringer rolls should be rinsed and wiped dry and connecting cord should be wiped dry.

Our ironers should be kept covered when not in use and if an ironer is kept in a cold room in winter it should be taken into a warm room for at least an hour before using. If starch sticks on the ironer shoe a mild silver polish will remove it. A good bleach should remove stains if they are not too serious. An ironer should never overheat, as this can shorten the life of its heating elements.

Our ranges should be cared for according to the manufacturer's directions. Range surface and oven should be cleaned only when cool and no spilled food should be allowed to dry or harden on the range.

Don't Overload Circuit.

Our electric fuses protect any electrical equipment that we have and if they give evidence of too frequent burning out, a reliable electrician should be consulted. Every care should be taken not to overload a circuit or to use wiring and cords that have become defective.

Our toasters and grills, our mixers and coffee makers and waffle bakers deserve redoubled care these days since the service they will render depends on proper care and use.

Keep an electric toaster free of crumbs, oil according to manufacturer's direction when toast raising mechanism demands it, see that wiring and heating units are kept out of water.

Never let left-over coffee stand in a coffee maker and when cleaning the unit be sure that the heating element doesn't get wet. Wash filter cloth after each using and the bowls as you would glassware.

Corporal's Bride

JUDGE OF BOYS COURT TO SPEAK AT ST. JULIANA'S

Judge Charles S. Dougherty of the Boys court will be the guest speaker at the opening meeting tomorrow night of the Holy Name society of St. Juliana Catholic church, Touhy and Osceola avenues. The judge will speak on juvenile courts, a subject now a national issue because of increase in juvenile crime due to war conditions.

Judge Dougherty has seen crime from the defending side of the lawyer's table, as a prosecutor for more than 10 years and now as a judge presiding over the Boys court. He will be introduced by the Rev. Father Francis Young, poet priest, who is pastor of the church.

A veteran church worker will be honored by fellow members of the Holy Name society at the meeting.

George Loacker, 6619 North Oliphant avenue, has been a member of the society since it was organized in 1928, and was four times elected its president—in 1934, '34, '40, and '41. He was recently appointed assistant director of district 3 of the archdiocesan union of the Holy Name society. He is also dean of ushers at St. Juliana Catholic church.

Roosevelt High Reunion.

John L. O'Brien, principal of Roosevelt High school, 3435 Wilson avenue, invites all alumni to a reunion in the auditorium Friday, Oct. 23. Social dancing, ROTC color guard, the marching unit, choir, orchestra, and former class officers will be on the program.

PUT WAR SERVICE TO FORE IN 7TH DISTRICT CLUBS

Delegates Meet Thursday in Revere Park.

A minute of meditation and prayer will open the first district meeting for the year of the Seventh District Federation of Women's Clubs. WOMEN RESUME SUBURBAN HOME STUDY SESSIONS

10 Units Meet Monthly in Members' Homes.

Mrs. Marie Cornelius [Normandie studio].

Housewives in 10 northwest communities have mapped a winter program of home improvement that will cover everything from the worn upholstery on their chairs to the imperfections of their own figures. The Cook County Home bureau, which was organized in January, 1941, is studying under Mrs. Marie Cornelius, home adviser.

This month's meetings for the ten northwest units in members' homes will deal with "Understanding Youth" and "Recreation in the Home." The topic will also be discussed at a meeting open to all units on Nov. 12 and 13 in the Des Plaines Junior High school by Miss Fannie Brooks, health educator from the University of Illinois who served overseas in the last war as a nurse.

IT'S GOLDEN YEAR BOTH FOR PASTOR AND HIS CHURCH

Dual Observance Opens This Morning.

A double anniversary will be observed this month in Christ Evangelical and Reformed church of Des Plaines when the golden anniversary of the founding of the congregation and the golden anniversary of the Rev. George W. Goebel's ordination to the ministry will be commemorated.

The first of the services will be held at 10:15 o'clock this morning when Dr. Louis W. Goebel, president general of the Evangelical and Reformed church and a cousin of the pastor, will speak. The evening service at 7:30 o'clock will be the 50th anniversary of the pastor's ordination.

Brother to Speak.

The Rev. John Goebel of Kankakee, Ill., brother of the pastor who took part in the ordination service a half century ago, will be the speaker. In charge of the service will be the Rev. George P. Ellerbake, president of the Arlington Heights regional conference, of which Christ church is a member.

The other three Sundays in October will be observed as men's Sunday, women's Sunday, and youth Sunday. Nov. 1 will be family consecration Sunday with the celebration of the communion. A golden jubilee banquet will be held on Thursday evening, Oct. 29.

Christ Evangelical and Reformed church was organized as a mission on Aug. 8, 1892, with 20 charter members. The present church building was dedicated Dec. 26, 1892, on land donated by the Brock Land company. During the 50 years the congregation has been served by six pastors. Three still living are the Rev. E. Bloesch, Dyer, Ind.; the Rev. August Fleer, Chicago, and the Rev. H. H. Bierbaum of Alexandria, Ky. The present pastor has served the congregation since December, 1919.

Events of Same Hour.

The two anniversaries are celebrated together because at the same hour and day that the founders of Christ church met and decided to build, the pastor was ordained to the Christian ministry by his father, the late Rev. Peter Goebel, in St. Luke's Evangelical and Reformed church, Louisville, Ky.

The Rev. Mr. Goebel is a graduate of Elmhurst college, attending school there at the time his father was the college president.

Typical Freshman

Miss Frances Emsley, 18 years old, 3122 North Olcott avenue, has been selected by the staff of the Wright college newspaper as the tpical freshman woman. She is a graduate of Steinmetz High school, where she was a member of the National Honor society, the Dardanelles club, the Junior Service club for school projects and the Girls' choir. Miss Emsley is a liberal arts student at Wright and will major in music.

NO. 1 WAR MOTHER OF ITASCA LENDS FOUR TO SERVICE

The Last—and Youngest—Joins the Marines.

Mrs. Jeanette Schneider, a widow, is Itasca's No. 1 war mother. This distinction came with the enlistment in the marines last month of her fourth and youngest son, Mels, 24. He was sent to San Diego, bringing the Schneider family representation in California to two. John, 26, is an air cadet at Camp Haan, California.

Lawrence, 30, is stationed at Camp Stuart, Georgia, and Ronald, 28, is in Ireland.

The father of the family, who was a collector for the internal revenue department, died last November. Mrs. Schneider, and Alice, 18, the fifth Schneider to graduate from Bensenville High school, are now left at home.

Mels' entrance into war brings poignant memory, Mrs. Schneider recalled. "He was born three days after the armistice in 1918." A former fire insurance inspector in East St. Louis, Mels has been married for four years.

Ronnie in Ireland will open a gift box from his mother on Dec. 25, Mrs. Schneider promised. There will be a warm long sleeved khaki sweater, and toilet articles which are not easily procured overseas.

WHEN Readers BECOME Advertisers-

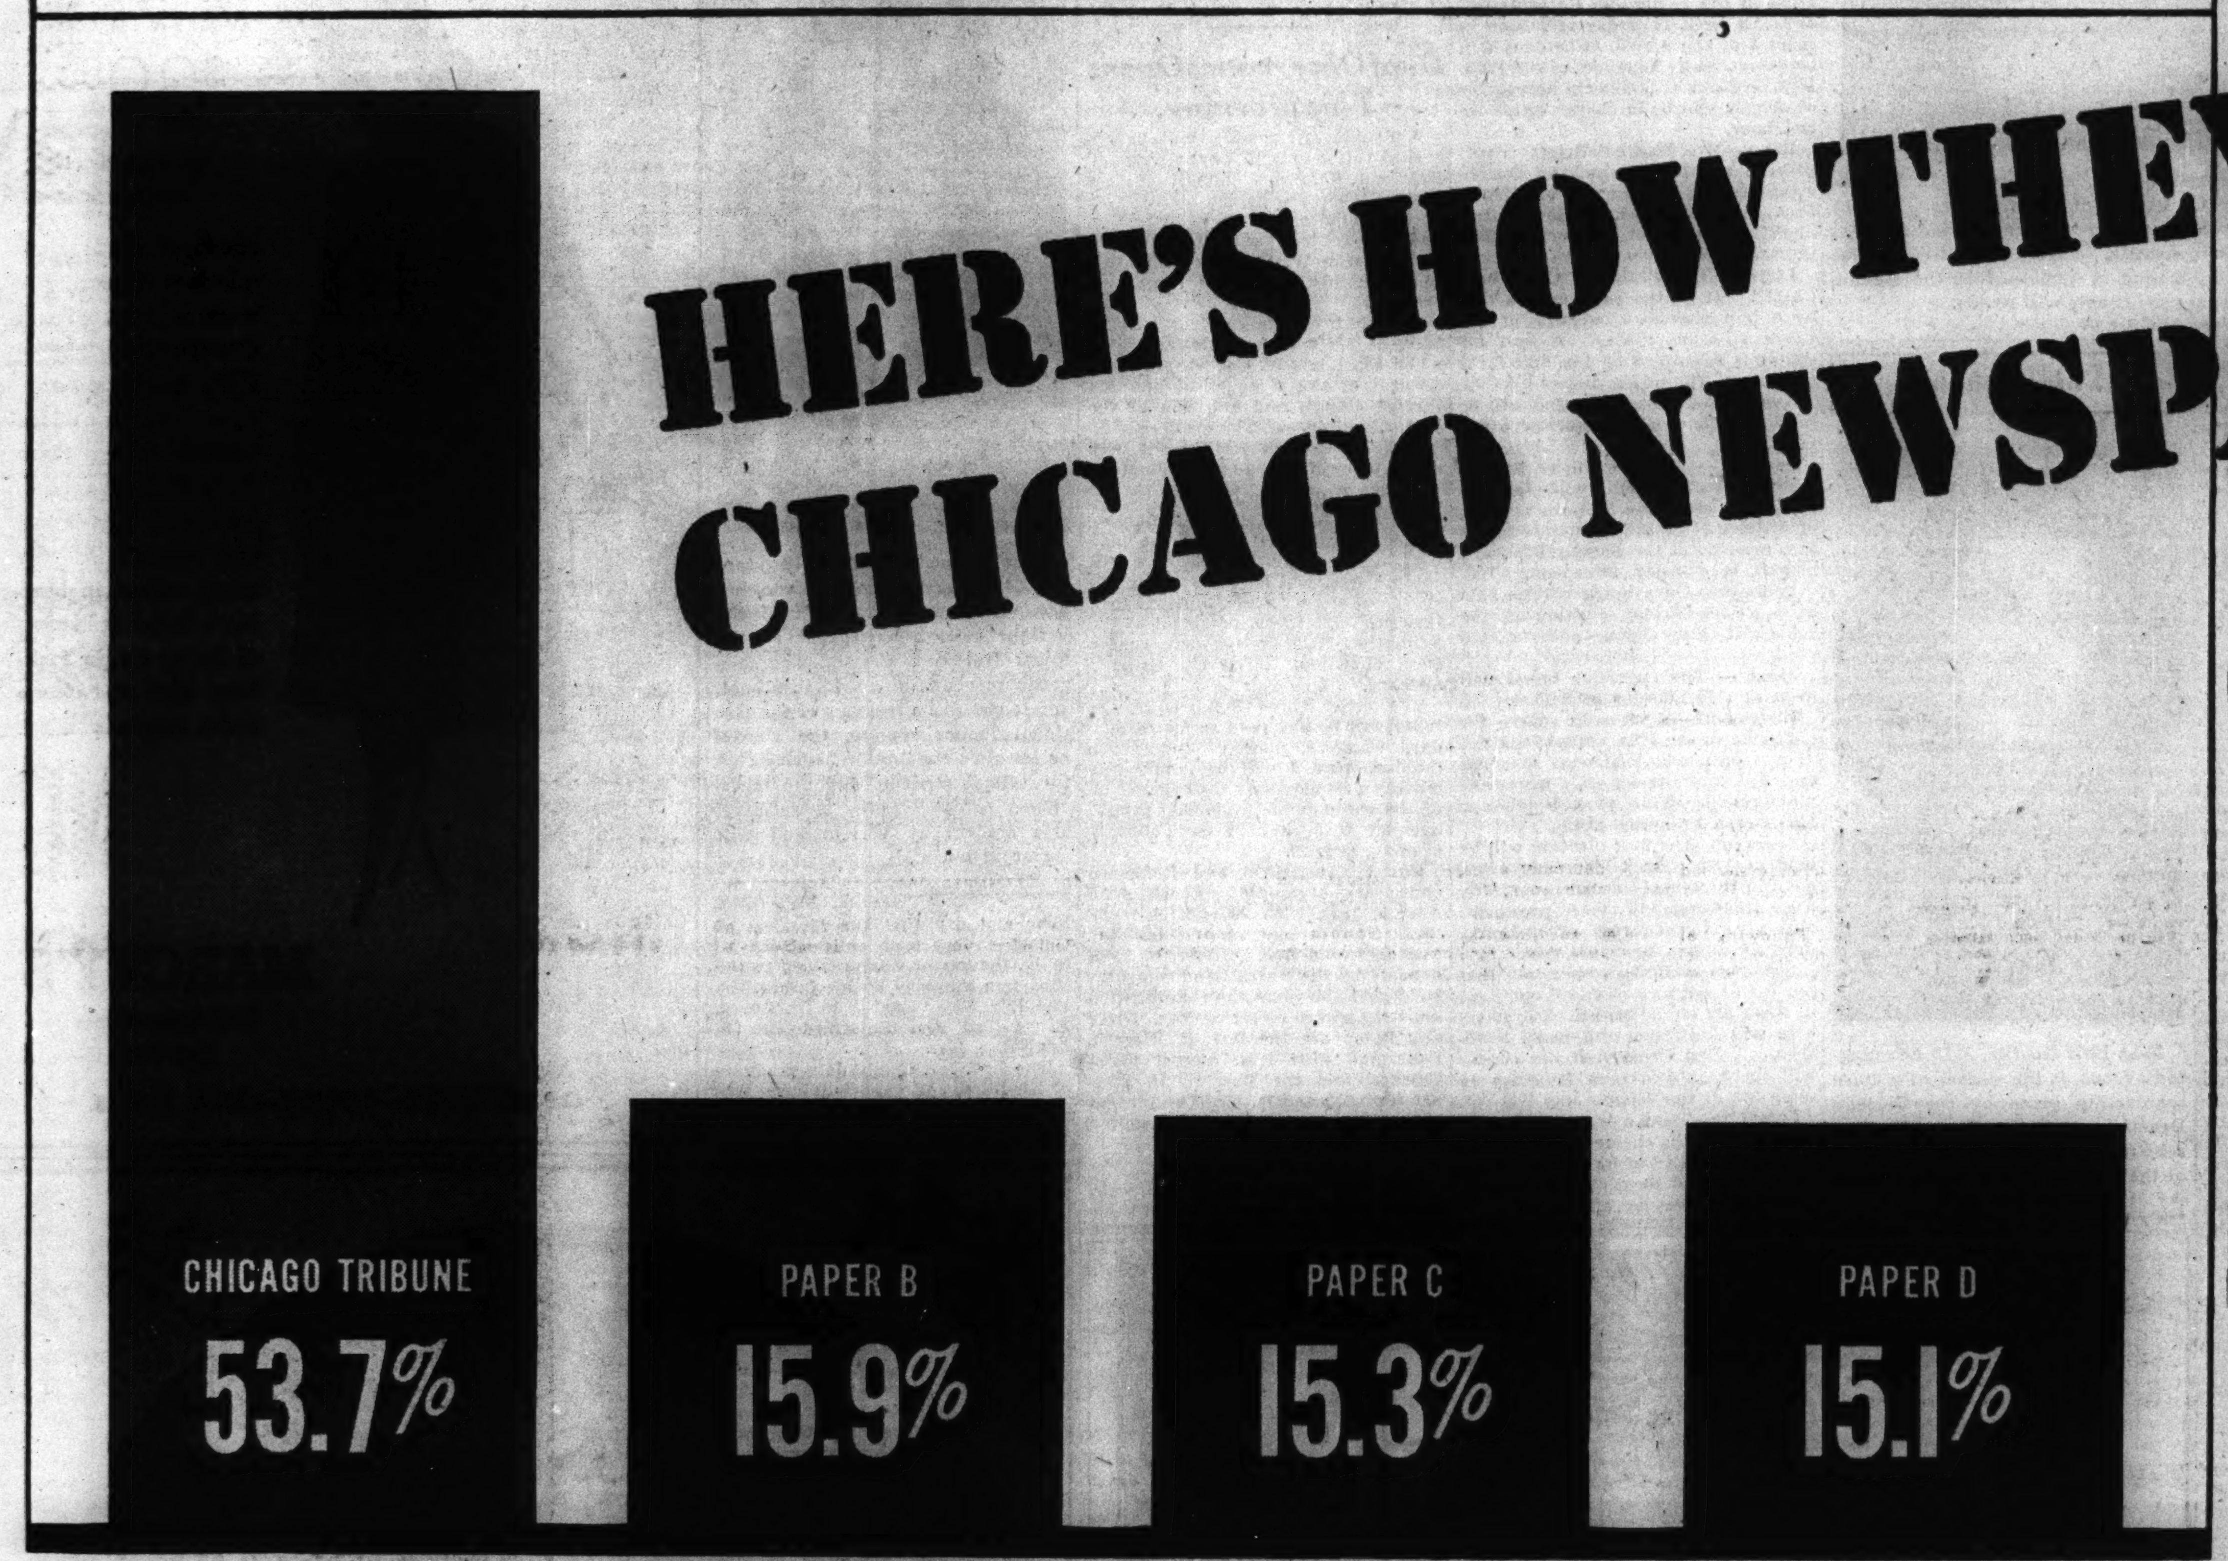
HERE'S HOW THEY RATE CHICAGO NEWSPAPERS

PERCENTAGES OF TOTAL WANT ADVERTISING LINAGE PLACED IN CHICAGO NEWSPAPERS

First 8 Months of 1942



Because they get better results, want ad users have increased the Tribune's lead in classified over the next Chicago newspaper from 145% in the first 8 months of 1941 to a lead of 238% in the like period this year.

WHEN THE PEOPLE spend their own money for advertising, the only yardstick of media values they respect is results. That is why the Tribune's mounting leadership in want advertising may be studied with profit by every merchant and manufacturer seeking maximum returns from his promotion funds in the Chicago market.

This was more than three times as much as they placed in any other Chicago newspaper—and more than they placed in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

They stepped up the Tribune's lead in classified over the next Chicago newspaper from 145% in the first eight months of last year to 238% in the similar period this year.

On Sundays alone, they placed more want ad linage in the Tribune than they placed in a full week's issues of any other Chicago newspaper, whether published six days a week or seven. And the Tribune's weekday total was more than double its Sunday linage volume.

No other kind of advertising is called upon day after day to prove its worth to so many different firms and individuals as is want advertising. By the widest margin in years, the huge multitude of space buyers represented by want ad users makes plain which Chicago newspaper delivers the most value to advertisers.

When you can have more, why take less? With hundreds of thousands more circulation, daily and Sunday, than other Chicago newspapers, the Tribune is the one medium which delivers the full-market, all-income coverage you need in order to achieve your advertising aims with greatest effectiveness and economy.

To get more response from more people, use the people's own advertising medium—the Tribune.

PERCENTAGES OF HELP WANTED ADVERTISING LINAGE PLACED IN CHICAGO NEWSPAPERS

First 8 Months of 1942

☆ The Tribune Prints More Than Twice as Much Help Wanted Advertising as All Other Chicago Newspapers Combined

With 71.2% of the total, the Tribune during the first eight months of 1942 printed more than six times as much Help Wanted advertising linage as any other Chicago newspaper—and more than twice as much as all other Chicago newspapers combined. Employers and employment agencies increased the Tribune's lead over the next Chicago newspaper from 349% in the first eight months of 1941 to a lead of 530% in the similar period this year.

STREET DANCES AWAIT VICTORY IN THIS BLOCK

Captain Refuses to Ask Cash Donations.

John J. Kelly, captain of block 6, zone 21, in the Belmont-Cragin community says street dances and beer parties have no purpose in the war work of civilian defense and should be saved until victory is won.

Mr. Kelly, who knows what war is like, spent four years in France in World War I. He was wounded three times and says, "Going off to war is no picnic and no reason for everybody to start dancing at home."

The partyless block 6 is concentrating on the fundamental purpose of civilian defense which is to organize groups of men and women to defend their homes against saboteurs. No one goes from door to door collecting money for anything in block 6. "Soliciting money in a block, I believe," says Kelly, "is taking away a man's liberty. The man naturally feels obliged to reach in his pocket at a neighbor's request."

Makes Honor Roll.

The neighbors work together in their common defense. Mr. Kelly made the red leather honor roll with gold lettering instead of holding a dance to raise the money to buy one. At a memorable ceremony each mother pinned the name of her soldier son on the honor roll and Mr. Kelly took motion pictures so the boys could share in the scene when the war is done.

Matthew J. Kilroy, 2258 North Le Claire avenue, donated the use of his basement as a refuge center. In case of a blackout, a man caught on the street could dash into Kilroy's basement. In time when the neighbors have found a bottle of iodine or a roll of bandages to spare, there will be a medicine chest in Kilroy's basement.

Foreseeing a possible time when an emergency might cause the water supply to be shut off with the accompanying débris in the water when it is turned on again, Mr. Kelly built a water filtering system which will serve his block.

Secretary Donates Time.

The refuge center has not been turned into a party place or a meeting place. It remains what it was intended for, a refuge center. All zone meetings are held in Blackhawk park.

Miss Mary Margaret McGonegle gives her time to do all of the block's secretarial work and the only gatherings in which the block shares are those designed to promote the sale of war bonds and stamps.

Two young boys who give their time as messengers for the work of civilian defense are Lambert Zulkowski and Casimir Zuranski.

Says Mr. Kelly of the partyless block, "Boy, are we going to throw a shindig when those boys come back."

Dedicate Flag to Beach Avenue Fighters Today

A flag in tribute to the eight in the block who are serving in the armed forces will be dedicated at 3 o'clock this afternoon at 3501 Beach avenue by block 7, zone 2, community 7. John H. Del Planque is block captain.

Paragraphs About People You May Know

POET, mother, law stenographer, Mrs. Malva Andre, 3607 North Sacramento avenue, recently collected her published poems into a small paper bound blue volume, the inner pages neatly mimeographed on rough grey paper.

Mrs. Malva Andre.

"Tattered Sails" represents Mrs. Andre's works which have appeared in THE TRIBUNE and other newspapers, magazines, and anthologies of verse.

Malva Andre at one time operated a handicraft shop for the handicapped while she herself was in a wheelchair. She is now a legal stenographer. Her foreword to the little volume reads:

Days have been dark upon life's sea,
But skies at last have cleared for me;
My ship, tho battered by the gales,
Has reached its port with tattered sails.

Roll Lists Block's Fighters

No gay street dance or party was held to raise money for this roll of honor for block 6 in zone 21 of the Belmont-Cragin district. Block Capt. John J. Kelly, who thinks street dances should be held after victory is won and who doesn't think money should be collected for anything that isn't civilian defense, made the roll of honor himself from red morocco leather. Parents of the boys in service placed their boys' names on the honor roll while Mr. Kelly took motion pictures of the ceremony. Mrs. Angeline Borek has two boys serving their country, Frank and Walter. At the left is her daughter, Miss Dorothy Borek.

11,039 ENROLLED IN CITY'S ROTC; MOST SINCE 1920

400 Youths Join Eagerly Despite No Uniforms.

BY JOSEPH GREEN.

More than 400 Chicago high school boys are so anxious to get into the Reserve Officers Training corps this fall they have signed up for study and drill despite no uniforms being available for them.

"We would prefer that they have uniforms," Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics and ROTC head, declared. "But the demand has been so great we have lowered uniform restrictions in some cases." The ROTC roll is full now, he said.

These nonuniform boys are in 27 high schools, where the entire issue of 8,035 uniforms was snapped up almost as soon as school opened this fall. In all, the ROTC has 11,039 cadets, greatest count since 1919 and 1920, just after World War I., which brought about organization of the public school units in 1918. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE was chiefly responsible for their inception.

Enrollment Is Voluntary.

Military spirit engendered by World War I. and the fact that the training was compulsory swelled enrollment in 1919 and 1920 to 14,500. This year the surge is entirely voluntary, perhaps engendered by Pearl Harbor of World War II.

The more than 400 patriotic boys who are waiting for uniforms—if they become available—are sophomores, juniors and seniors. Freshmen cadets, not eligible for uniforms until their second year, account for about 2,500 of the 3,004 nonuniformed cadets. In uniform are 8,035 cadets.

Army Needs Come First.

A few more uniforms were issued by the war department for use of the Chicago ROTC this fall, Col. Morrison said, but the need was far from filled—for the same reason that the rifles with which the cadets formerly drilled are no longer used. The combat forces come first.

Despite the increase the staff remains the same—40 regular army sergeants as instructors, with five division supervisors, each in charge of a group of schools.

Lane Tech Has 1,326.

Lane Technical High school again leads the city with 1,326 ROTC members. Crane follows with 586, and others with more than 500 are Lake View with 525; Austin, 517, and Senn, 512.

Foreman showed the greatest increase, from 186 last fall to 291 this fall, a gain of 105. Half a dozen schools showed small decreases, but at least slight gains were recorded at most schools.

Following are cadet enrollments for each school, with enrollment for last fall compared with that for this fall:

School—	Pres. term.	Sept., 1941.
Amundsen	309	302
Austin	517	434

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Leonard R. Kozlowski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ned Kozlowski, 3426 Potomac avenue, was commissioned an ensign in the naval reserve at Corpus Christi, Tex., this month and now is ready for duty with the United States fleet. Before entering the naval station in Texas, Ensign Kozlowski had received elimination training at Glenview. He attended Wabash college and was active in football, baseball, and wrestling. He is a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Ensign Kozlowski.

Second Lieut. Daniel Herbert Hepp, son of Detective Herbert L. Hepp, homicide bureau, was graduated from the officers' candidate school at Fort Riley, Kansas last month, and is stationed at Fort Bliss, El Paso, Tex., with the 1st cavalry division. While an ROTC student at Steinmetz High school, Hepp received THE TRIBUNE gold medal for military merit. In 1941 when the state reserve militia was organized, he signed up and served until last January when he enlisted in the cavalry. He studied traffic management and transportation law at the Chicago College of Advanced Traffic. The Hepp home is at 1245 North Mason avenue.

Within seven months, P. Jackson Hirsh, son of Mrs. Nell Hirsh, 6689 Olmstead avenue, has advanced from private to master sergeant. This rapid promotion took place at Fort Knox, Ky., where Hirsh was in the medical corps. He is now with the 13th armored division at Camp Beale, California.

Shortly after Raymond Wasik, 1042 North Winchester avenue, received his law certificate from the John Marshall law school this month, he was inducted into the army at Fort Sheridan. Wasik received highest sophomore rank while studying at the law school. Previously he had attended Herzl Junior college, Crane and Tuley High schools.

Appointed an ensign in the supply corps of the naval reserve, Raymond Irving Post, 3024 Haussen court, is awaiting orders to report to the supply school at Harvard university. Post was graduated from Northwestern university school of commerce last June. He had previously studied at Wright Junior college, where he was president of the senior class, and at Schurz High school. His fraternity is Sigma Nu.

A member of the military police at Camp Bruber, Oklahoma, Meyer David Lieberman, 4826 North Tripp avenue, has been promoted to the rank of sergeant.

Harry P. Burke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Burke, 3336 Natchez avenue, was promoted from private first class to staff sergeant at Camp Hood, Texas. He had been employed at the First National bank.

Pvt. Stephen Z. Cieslak, whose wife, Ann, lives at 1227 West Chicago avenue, has been appointed a corporal in C battery of the 906th field artillery at Camp Rucker, Alabama, according to an announcement received from Lieut. Milton L. Carr, battery commander. The new corporal will be a scout corporal.

Franklin G. Thometz, an engineer-gunner in a combat crew, has been promoted from corporal to sergeant in the army air corps, Gowen Field, Boise, Idaho. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Thometz, 1614 North Keeler avenue. Before enlisting in the army, Sergt. Thometz was employed by the Chicago Rug and Furniture company.

Among the last group of recruits signed up in the "Fly for Navy" drive were seven northwest side youths. A three letter man from Steinmetz High school, Eugene Goodrich, 2301 North 73d street, Elmwood Park, had studied for Annapolis before joining the navy air force. From Des Plaines, Curtiss Dax and Robert Rexses enlisted; from Arlington Heights, Paul Wulbecker, and from Chicago, Don Borgeson, 5817 North Talman avenue; John McLennan, 6538 Northwest highway, and George Petersen, 2134 North Melvina avenue.

Mrs. Anna Bista, Arlington Heights, was in Pearl Harbor when the Japs attacked. He will receive his gifts on Christmas in Hawaii.

Ponders Climate in India.

Mrs. Edward Gieseke Sr. says she has no idea what to send her son, Corp. John Gieseke, from their Wheeling home. John is in India and Mrs. Gieseke doesn't know whether the climate at Christmas would suggest a warm wool scarf or an electric fan. In one letter John wrote, "I'm impressed by the work turned out by the women while men stand by and give orders."

The Otto Utpadel family can't even consult a geography to help them out on the climate of the place their son, Pvt. First Class James Utpadel, is stationed. The last time they heard from him he was "somewhere" in the Pacific region.

Alec Tudyman, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Tudyman of Palatine, is in Australia. It already has been Christmas in the Tudyman home, for Alec sent the family carved ebony, ivory figurines, and inlaid belt buckles. He writes, "In the evening the boys gather around the campfire, sing, and bake potatoes and apples."

Has No Address.

Pvt. First Class Douglas Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Flois Adams, Palatine, is in Glasgow, Scotland. It is almost impossible for the Adamses to get packages and letters to Douglase because he is in the merchant marine which has no official postoffice address.

Mrs. Gus Dombrosky of Palatine received a cablegram a few weeks ago from her son, Sergt. Herbert Trow, that he has arrived safely "somewhere" in Great Britain.

No requests for anything special for Christmas has been rceived by Mr. and Mrs. William Beckman from their son, Pvt. First Class Norman Beckman, who is in Australia. He wrote that he had met Gen. MacArthur and is proud to serve under so fine a man.

Study Alaska Weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Freise of Palatine are studying Alaska climate in order to choose a gift for their son, Ensign Herbert Freise.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Haemker, Palatine, have packages ready to mail for their son, Lowell, who is in England. Mrs. Haemker packed linen handkerchiefs, candy bars, gum, and a special cooky that Lowell likes into her 11 pound package. She did it up in pretty seals and ribbon. Her son, Clifford, stationed in Virginia, will offer a real Christmas problem. He says he is about ready to leave the country and Mrs. Haemker is afraid she will not know his destination in time to send a package.

MEET YOUR NAVY! GREAT LAKES BID IS WORTH TAKING

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Meet Your Navy! That's the invitation the Great Lakes Naval Training station extends to the nation with its all-sailor radio show by that name, presented every Friday evening. It's a bid well worth accepting for every show from Great Lakes is great entertainment, reflecting the talent, the enthusiasm, and the fighting spirit of the bluejackets.

Rita Ascot.
Chief "Pretty" Officer.

When you Meet Your Navy in this fashion you get a glimpse of the human and personal side of the navy—a half hour of stirring music and salty laughter.

Great Lakes has some of the finest musical talent in the country. Bandmaster Frank R. Mattlach gets those thrilling airs out of his band in part because the personnel includes men from many of the top orchestras and bands in the country.

A New Chorus Monthly.

Then there's the mighty chorus, trained and directed by Chaplain Hjalmar Hansen. Chaplain Hansen knows his stuff. He has to. Every month or so he loses his whole choir and has to develop a brand new one out of the ranks of recruits. When we visited the broadcast the other evening Chaplain Hansen was breaking in a group that had not as yet received their full issue or had their hair cut. But in a half hour's drill before the broadcast they were singing "Anchors Aweigh," "Here Comes the Navy," and "Marching Along Together" like veterans.

Dynamic Eddie Peabody, the lieutenant commander who is in charge of music and entertainment at Great Lakes, not only organizes the whole program, but finds time to entertain the men—and the nation—with his banjo wizardry.

Then there's the Rhythm orchestra, which gives out swing in the authentic manner.

But much of the slickest entertainment comes from individual bluejackets themselves. Men with talent make themselves known to Producer Al Boyd and his assistants, who conduct auditions a week in advance.

The night we visited the show Billy Evenson, who used to work on Harold Teen and Citizens of Tomorrow on W-G-N as a civilian, created a laugh riot with a monolog of light satire on navy life he wrote as well as delivered. Bob Hope and Jack Benny never drew better applause from a service man audience than Billy.

Last Friday the show was enlivened by the singing of patriotic songs by Robert Morton of Berwyn, who appeared in the movie, "A Gay Señorita," starring Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire. Morton sang with Xavier Cugat's orchestra.

She's Chief "Pretty" Officer.

The show is the pride of Great Lakes. Adm. John Downes, commandant, has often spoken on the show and it is beloved by the men.

Actress Rita Ascot writes the scripts and sometimes appears on the show reading letters from home. Because of her contributions she has been designated Chief Pretty Officer of the post. Jack Stilwill is the narrator.

And there are many others that contribute to making this navy show the success it is. But it's impossible to capture the flavor of the show with words. You need to listen—9 p. m. Friday on WLS and the Blue network.

Spitalny Program.

Phil Spitalny's all-girl orchestra and chorus will present their weekly program from the San Diego Naval Training station at 9 p. m. today over WMAQ-NBC.

THEATER OF AIR STAGING STRAUS WORK SATURDAY

Feature Marion Claire, Knight on W-G-N.

Felix Knight, young American lyric tenor, will be starred with Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, next Saturday, when Oscar Straus' operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," is presented from 8 to 9 p. m. on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Knight, American born and American trained, has made rapid strides in the concert world. He was featured this summer on W-G-N and Mutual's "America Loves a Melody" concert series and has been guest artist on other network programs, including the Sunday afternoon symphony series and the Ford concerts.

Miss Claire will be cast in the rôle of Nadina, beautiful Bulgarian girl who is the leading character of the operetta. Knight will sing the rôle of Lieut. Bumerli, a young Swiss officer and professional soldier serving with the Serbian forces. Ray Charles will fill the third principal singing rôle as he will be cast as Alexius, a young Bulgarian hero.

The theme of the story is built around the romance of Nadina and Lieut. Bumerli. Serving with the Serbian forces, Bumerli is forced to flee a Bulgarian patrol and to save himself he climbs into Nadina's boudoir. He captivates the three women of the family by his suave manner and quick wit. At first his affair with Nadina is a mere flirtation carried on to save his life. Later, Bumerli falls genuinly in love with Nadina. She is engaged to Alexius, but she switches her affections to the lieutenant.

Musical background for the operetta will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and by the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor, W-G-N chief of production, will produce the program.

An outstanding dramatic cast will portray the speaking rôles. Much of the story will be told by narration so that as much music as possible will be heard during the program.

FUTURE CITIZENS SHOW OPENING IS NEXT SUNDAY

The first program of the fourth series of "Citizens of Tomorrow" will be aired from 1 to 1:30 p. m. next Sunday, Oct. 11, on W-G-N. The entertainment, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will feature high schools of Chicago and nearby Chicago. Philip Maxwell of The Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies, will have an added interest in the program this season, as his own daughter, Barbara, 14 years old, has just entered Evanston Township High school.

Kenneth MacGregor, production manager of W-G-N, has assigned Holland Engle to be announcer. It will be produced by Morrison Wood, who had charge of the entertainment last spring. Collaborating on the script will be Carlyle Stevens and Don Brinkley. Harold Turner will be the pianist.

19th Century Club.

Opening the fall and winter series of meetings of the 19th Century Woman's club, will be a dinner at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday evening at their Oak Park clubhouse.

42D WARD CHIEF HAS TOUGH FOE IN SENATE RACE

Boyden Out to Grab Connors' Toga.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

State Sen. William J. Connors, whose supporters say his heart is as big as he is, has a Republican opponent whose wiry leanness is startling in contrast—William C. Boyden of the "east end" of the 29th legislative district.

Sen. Connors.

The jolly boss of the "Roaring 42d" ward, despite his efficient Democratic organization, is in a real battle this time. The oddly dissimilar opponents will be trading punches in the midst of changing political sentiment.

Contrast in Rivals.

"Republicans are on the march," Boyden said last week in the first candidates' meeting in G. O. P. headquarters at 1023 North State street. "Not even the Democrats seriously contend that United States Sen. Brooks can be stopped."

William C. Boyden.

Campaigns in this near north side district are usually as colorful as Connors himself, whose resplendent wardrobe and cheery rotundity are symbols of his rule. Eight years in the senate have also clad Connors with a benign dignity, even if his earlier background gave him no such accent as that of Boyden, a product of Harvard law school.

Politics has also benefitted Boyden; knocking about with precinct workers has accustomed him to being called "Bill" by near-strangers.

Student of District.

Connors was never near Harvard, but his son plays polo at school. In fact, Connors' formal education was halted at an early age, but that doesn't mean he stopped learning. Spending all of his years in the district, he studied its facts and its foibles so thoroly that he is at home anywhere in it, and is hailed on the street about as often as some country politician.

In his 51 years he has been a state representative, deputy bailiff, chief deputy bailiff, superintendent of the city license department under Mayor Dever, chief investigator for the Chicago sanitary district law department, and nominee for the county board. He started his business experience as a newsboy, and at the age of 22 he was superintendent of the Creamery Package company, and a year later was sales manager.

Besides being 42d ward Democratic committeeman and senator, Connors is a member of the Chicago board of local improvements and has his own insurance business.

Monosyllabic But Firm.

He is not given to speech making, even on the senate floor, but tho he is assumed to have no high regard for fancy arguments he doesn't mind listening to a talk, if it is a good one. His supporters say that his "O. K." or "yes" mean just that, while his "no" is an ungilded final negative.

It may surprise some to learn that several "reformers" including the late Rep. James Weber Linn, University of Chicago professor of English, discarded their previous conceptions of Connors when they served with him in Springfield.

Incidentally, Connors voted last session for the Ashcraft bill making the givers of election bribes [including whisky] equally guilty with those who sell their votes. This was enacted into law and provides stiff penalties.

He is proudest of his own bill, now a law, which in 1941 eliminated the "tax on a tax" feature of the sales tax and benefitted retailers. He also has sponsored legislation increasing the penalties for sex criminals and requiring registration of firearms. In 1939 he was instrumental in blocking a drive to knock out the three day notice feature of the anti-gin mill marriage law.

Would Revive Parole Reform.

Last week Sen. Connors announced that if reëlected he will revive the original Ward-Schnackenberg parole reform bill. The Illinois Supreme court recently nullified the parole reform legislation enacted in 1941 in modified form.

It was the new feature of the law, giving state officials the power to change the minimum and maximum sentences imposed by trial judges, which caused the high court to hold the law unconstitutional.

"Judge Harold G. Ward, who as state senator sponsored the original bill and opposed changes offered by the Green administration, has agreed that my proposed bill would remedy defects found by the Supreme court," Connors said.

Green Backs Boyden.

Boyden last week was disclosed to have the special good wishes of Gov. Green in his efforts to oust Connors.

Letters from Home Keep Moving to Service Men from the 45th Ward Letter Club

ONE OF THE HARDSHIPS OF WAR

Ald. Meyer writes many of the letters, some of which he dictates to his secretary, Betty Hengels, 1829 Henderson street. Miss Hengels also is a member of the Write a Letter club and corresponds with many of the servicemen. The club recently mailed 2,100 letters, some of which came back because of incorrect or incomplete addresses. Ald. Meyer has been urging parents and servicemen to co-operate in furnishing correct addresses. (Story on page 2.)

Sports, community events and news of what neighborhood boys are doing in other camps are some of the topics the business men of the ward write about when they spend spare evenings at the center. Among those participating in the Write a Letter club are, left to right, Mildred Ross, 3508 Paulina street; Joseph J. Waller, 1720 Wellington avenue; Chris Christos, 3164 Lincoln avenue, and Daniel C. Waller, 1720 Wellington avenue.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

The already warm congressional campaign in the 9th [near-north side] district will take on new heat this week following the arrival from Washington of Congressman Charles S. Dewey, the Republican whose seat is threatened by Irwin N. Walker, the Democratic standard bearer, in the district's liveliest fight in years.

Dewey announced that the lower house would probably clear its calendar of all pending major legislation in time to enable him to open his personal campaign in the district just before the battle enters its final month. He will remain in Chicago as long as the legislative situation in the national capital permits.

Busy Days Ahead.

Little rest for him was in prospect for his home visit. His campaign leaders have arranged a long series of personal appearances for him at ward rallies, civic organization gatherings, and various open houses thru the district to be attended by Congressman and Mrs. Dewey.

Mrs. Paul Steinbrecker, head of the women's executive committee of the Friends of Dewey for Congress, announced that women's participation in war work will be discussed at these open house meetings.

Edward A. Pool, head of the men's executive committee, laid plans for the homecoming for Dewey that had all the elements of an old time political revival, with banners, brass bands, entertainment, and a "horse and buggy" style harvest barbecue. Other committee members are Harry L. Drake, Dr. James E. Fitzgerald, Harold B. Schradzke, and Charles M. Hofman.

Walker, who has been appearing before several hundred men and women almost every night of the week, has intensified his efforts to meet as many of the district's voters as time will permit.

Discus Club Backing.

A boost for his candidacy was contained in a full page advertisment in Discus, magazine of the Lake Shore club, contributed by some 30 business, professional, and industrial leaders. They include John H. Wigmore, dean emeritus of Northwestern university; Emmett Hartnett, tool manufacturer, and Edward Bessey, radio manufacturer.

Walker headquarters announced that among the women of the district's east side who are working for his election are Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, widow of the late United States senator; Mrs. Richard S. Folsom, Mrs. Joseph W. Cremin, and Miss Mary Agnes Amberg.

Large volunteer groups from both camps have been buzzing in and out of Dewey and Walker headquarters. Dewey headquarters have long been maintained at 2800 Sheridan road. Walker has been operating from the Democratic ward headquarters and from his office at 10 South La Salle street, but is opening a district head-

Robert C. Culp, 2248 North Halsted street, and Arthur L. Becker, 1718 Gregory street, were graduated last week from the army air forces' statistical school, conducted by Harvard university's business school, Cambridge, Mass., as second lieutenants.

Two young men who lived almost next door to each other without becoming friends before they entered the army have become famous as 'buddies' in Camp Grant, Ill. They are Frank Bucar, 2049 Bissell street, and Peter Montana, 2101 Bissell street. When they arrived, both were assigned to bunks on the second floor of one of the barracks and worked together policing the building and on general fatigue duty. Their coöperation was so outstanding and their work so efficient that they have been appointed leaders of floor one and two.

Arthur L. Becker was graduated recently from the army air force statistical school at Harvard university school of business administration in Cambridge, Mass. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Alois Becker, 1718 Gregory street, Becker is now a second lieutenant with the air force.

Rain Can't Stop Drive for Scrap in Ravenswood

BY EDWARD WILSON.

Twenty-nine dollars was added to the treasury of zone 2, Ravenswood community, in a civilian defense organization scrap drive conducted recently.

The drive came on a rainy day, but nevertheless was called a success. It brought in six old stoves and eight old beds, which helped swell the iron salvage to 2,105 pounds. The paper collection totaled 3,640 pounds; sheet iron, 1,825 pounds; rags, 225 pounds; insulated wire, 35 pounds, and miscellaneous metal, 25 pounds.

Typical in City.

This drive was typical of many drives thruout the city, in which volunteer workers spent many hours at hard work on organization. Zone 2 includes six blocks bounded by Ashland, Berteau, and Ravenswood avenues, and Irving Park road.

Work on the collection started more than a week in advance when the salvage wardens from each block met with their six block captains.

The salvage wardens are Mrs. Paul Valerius, 4116 North Hermitage avenue; Mrs. A. K. Gramling, 4145 North Hermitage avenue; Mrs. John R. Burdick Jr., 4107 North Paulina street; Mrs. Mildred Johnson, 4032 North Hermitage avenue; Mrs. Minnie Kluge, 4018 North Paulina street, and Mrs. Earle Ward, 4051 North Paulina street.

Letter Given Residents.

The salvage wardens drafted a letter to the residents of their blocks. The letter, which was printed for distribution, told of the need for scrap or junk of all sorts. It said a junk dealer's truck would tour the zone starting at 10 a. m. on the collection day and that it would pick up all junk piled in the parkways in front of the homes.

Salvage wardens either called personally at every home in their blocks and presented the letter and asked for scrap or left the letter at the door. Copies of the letter were also tacked on trees.

Children in each block were enlisted as junior salvage wardens and asked to help spread the news.

Each OCD block captain asked his several air raid wardens, fire watchers, and other wardens to help.

Wardens Meet the Truck.

On the day of the collection the salvage wardens and their helpers met the truck and toured the area picking up salvage at every home. It took several hours to load all the salvage piled on the parkways in the six block area.

The loaded truck, accompanied by several wardens, was driven to the junk yard. The wardens checked the salvage as it was unloaded and weighed by the dealer. They were paid for the junk at the prevailing market price for junk at the yard. Papers and various metals were separated by the junk yard workers before weighing.

SULLIVAN HIGH ACTING PRINCIPAL TO START ARMY SERVICE TODAY

Lieut. John Frederick Erzinger, former acting principal of Sullivan High school, will depart this morning for Columbus, O., to report for active duty in the quartermaster's corps. He has been a member of the officers' reserve corps.

Lieut. Erzinger has been affiliated with Sullivan High school since it was made a senior high school in 1933. He was an instructor of mathematics and economic statistics until his appointment as assistant principal in January, 1938.

He became acting principal last April when Herbert C. Hansen, now connected with the teacher training division of Lennox college, Ia., resigned. His successor has not yet been selected.

DOG BELIEVED A 'SEEING-EYE' HELD AT HAVEN

Has any one lost a seeing-eye dog? Supt. A. E. Roberts of Orphans of the Storm, animal haven in Deerfield, reports that a German shepherd was found in a northern suburb and turned over to the protective organization.

When found the police dog wore a harness typical of those on seeing-eye dogs. Roberts attached two reins to the harness and discovered the dog would lead him. It refused to walk on the grass, halted before crossing the road, and minded its own business, never moving its head from side to side.

If the owner is not found the superintendent plans to hold the dog and give him to a blind person. Even if he has not been specially trained, Roberts believes the dog would be of great value because of his unusual intelligence.

Gandhi to Her Still a Kindly Story Teller

BY MARY HOLSINGER.

Most Americans may think of Mohandas Gandhi as an Indian leader who rebels against the British and goes on long fasts, but Mrs. Olive Clemes Dutton of 1040 Lake Shore drive has a different slant on him. As a child she sat upon his lap and listened to him tell Indian myths.

Olive Clemes Dutton.

Mrs. Dutton, whose father is a missionary teacher, grew up in the northern interior near New Delhi. Until six years ago when she came to the United States to attend college she knew more about India than she did about America. She couldn't speak English until she was four when her grandparents, the late Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Norton of Chicago, visited her and she had to learn to talk to them.

Recalls Elephant Ride.

"I played with Indian children and it was natural that I should pick up their language," she says. Soon after her grandparents' visit she acquired a mixture of English and Indian talk which even her parents couldn't understand.

"That was all straightened out, however," she says, "when I went to school." Now she can speak either one fluently. There are more than 200 Indian languages and many more dialects. Mrs. Dutton professes to know only the one around Lucknow, site of the college where her father is stationed.

Mrs. Dutton also can remember vividly the time when she rode down the village street on top of the Maharaja Jypore's elephant. It had all the elaborate red and gold trimmings on its back that any young circus fan could hope for, she declares.

Now Cashier in Y.

The young American girl, who had spent all her 17 years in India, looked forward to coming to the United States to enter college six years ago, but she had trouble at first thinking the American way. She had to change everything into Indian money to figure out the value of it. Now she is cashier and registration clerk at

PLACE DRIVERS IN 6 CATEGORIES TO COVER NEEDS

Riding Clubs Start Work Tomorrow.

BY ANN FORD.

Highland Park's intensified "Share the Ride" campaign will shift into high gear tomorrow when officials and volunteer workers begin organizing riding groups to cover the driving needs of all local car owners.

Based on returns from the comprehensive transportation questionnaires distributed to householders two weeks ago, the groups fall into six categories—riding groups to carry commuters to and from trains, groups for local business people, for school, for shopping, for church and Sunday school.

A coding system has been adopted, making it possible for coördinators to "pull" cards listing persons living in the same neighborhoods and having similar driving requirements.

1,000 Riding Club Requests.

More than a thousand requests for riding clubs rolled into campaign headquarters last week, and workers were kept busy tabulating and classifying the questionnaires. Hundreds of cards, returned by school children who had taken them home for their parents' pledge to curtail their driving, were received at the office. Officials plan to keep all returns on file, so that groups may be adjusted to meet changing riding needs.

"The coöperation of every Highland Park driver is vital," Robert L. Leopold, organizer of the drive, declares. "It's hard sometimes to realize the importance of a mile or two saved. The average commuter in Highland Park drives two miles to and from the station. Figure 30,000,000 cars in the United States—each driven two miles a day, and you have piled up 240,000,000 tire miles. If the average tire has 20,000 miles to go we are wearing out 12,000 tires each day. That furnishes an index to the importance of every two miles."

Makes Them "Car Conscious."

"In addition to forming riding groups we believe our 'Share the Ride' campaign is performing another very important service," Leopold continued. "It is making Highland Park car conscious. Those who can't join groups for special reasons are thinking of those two miles before they drive them."

The initial campaign began in March of this year, when a survey disclosed that around 170 cars were driven to meet the 8:10 train every morning and that almost all of these carried only one commuter. Thru the efforts of the group riding committee the number of cars has been reduced by one-third.

At the request of the Office of Defense Transportation the program was extended to include all driving in Highland Park. As the first effort of its kind on a comprehensive scale, transportation officials believe it may furnish them a workable pattern for organizing all residential suburbs.

School Children Aid.

Local merchants, school children, PTA groups, and churches have given valuable assistance, according to Leopold. Indorsement by Mayor Frank J. Ronan and the city council has given the campaign added impetus. A letter of encouragement was received from Joseph B. Eastman, national director of the Office of Defense Transportation.

Leopold, who is now a member of Philip Harrington's committee for conserving vital war transportation for the Chicago Metropolitan area, is assisted in Highland Park by Ralph Mack, J. Sigurd Johnson, Edmund L. Andrews, and E. A. Belmont.

North Side Druggists Aid in Plans for Convention

Several north side druggists will take an active part in the 44th annual convention of the National Association of Retail Druggists to be held tomorrow thru Friday in Hotel Sherman. H. J. Polin, 521 North Clark street, is in charge of all drug show booths; H. W. Prafke, 1151 Addison street, is chairman of the sports committee; Charles A. Storer, 958 Spruce street, Winnetka, is in charge of the veteran druggist luncheon; Mrs. Otto Lorenze, women's reception committee chairman, and Mrs. Prafke has been named general women's chairman.

ONE FAMILY'S GARDEN ADDS UP TO 319 PINTS ON PANTRY SHELVES

Skokie war gardeners harvested their crops just in time to beat the first frost. And all week the town's women have been busy making preserves. Among them was Mrs. Walter C. Reiter who put up 30 quarts of tomatoes, 60 quarts of tomato juice, 60 pints of yellow wax beans, 22 quarts of green peppers, and 35 pints of green tomato piccalilli. The beets were her husband's only gardening failure.

'SCRAP' FOR SCRAP BEGINS IN NORTH SIDE OCD UNITS

A real "scrap" has started among north side civilian defense commanders and workers the Central Uptown OCD headquarters revealed, with the spoils the scrap metals now in possession of the half million residents of the area.

Aggressor in the fight is Wade R. Franklin, commander of the Central Uptown community, who has challenged each of the other 18 commanders of division 6 to a scrap harvest contest to end Nov. 26—final day of the national drive.

"We expect to collect 4,000,000 pounds of scrap metal during the drive," Franklin said, "and we defy any community on the north side to beat us."

Reports estimating the amount of scrap metal collected each week will be turned into division headquarters, and a weekly score card will be issued to community commanders. Thomas C. Gannon, division salvage chairman, and Lee Ross, division commander, have agreed to supervise the contest.

At a recent meeting of the Clark-Devon Community civilian defense workers, a resolution was passed by the women of the block designating the first Friday of each month "Service Center Baking day." Cakes and cookies for the Service Men's center, 176 West Washington street, will be collected on that day from the block office.

Block 6, bounded by Lunt and Morse avenues and Sheridan road, is holding a war bond rally at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Featured will be the dedication of a plaque honoring block residents in the armed forces. The Yarmo Devere post of the American Legion will provide music. Block Captain Dan Barnett has set a $10,000 goal in war bonds for the afternoon.

Residents of block 6 in the West Lake View civilian defense community will witness a colorful ceremony following a parade at 2 o'clock this afternoon. After marching around zone 29, bounded by Damen avenue, Roscoe, Addison, and Leavitt streets, the group will assemble at the corner of Roscoe street and Hamilton avenue. There the first United States flag will be lowered, and the flag with 48 stars raised.

Chief Thunder Eagle and his tribe will present all mothers of boys in service with beaded tokens for their contributions to the war effort. A service flag made by one of the mothers also will be raised. The zone's OCD bulletin board will be dedicated.

Neighborhood youngsters, dressed in red, white, and blue tophats and blowing whistles, today will invade every home in the Rogers Park-Clark community 17 to collect all available scrap. A ton of scrap per block, totaling 85 tons for the community, is the goal of the 24 hour scrap round-up. Crews with blow torches will be used wherever necessary to dismantle contributions. WRITE A LETTER CLUB KEEPS NEWS ON WAY TO CAMPS

Ald. Meyer Uses Tribune Cartoon in Drive.

John Doe is one of the many lads serving Uncle Sam. Like most fighters, he feels a little homesick from time to time. His friends and family have fallen down on the job. They haven't been writing letters as frequently as they should.

After seeing the disappointed faces of so many John Does because the mailman failed to leave anything for them, Ald. Edwin F. Meyer [45th] came home from a visit to Goodfellow field, Texas, determined to organize a Write a Letter club for the boys in his ward.

Cartoon Recalls Scenes.

"That was exactly the scene I saw in Texas," Meyer said. "The boys were so anxious for news that even the fact that I carried an Illinois license on my car was enough for a large group to hover around for any kind of news from the home state."

Meyer started a month ago to collect addresses of service men from his ward and writing to them. As soon as they answered he turned their letters over to a few neighborhood girls whom he asked to assist him. Soon letters began coming in fast and a communications center was set up in the alderman's office at 3826 North Ashland avenue, with more volunteers working every day.

What They Write About.

Hardly an evening goes by that there aren't 10 or 12 men and women at the center writing and addressing letters. One grandmother is corresponding with a soldier boy stationed in New York who is trying to learn the Brooklyn accent.

The business men in the neighborhood who donate their evenings at the communications center write about sports or neighbohood news and relay messages from boys in other camps. Some of the boys write and ask for newspapers, others want to know about ballots for election, and some just want to chat—by mail. Most of them ask for long replies.

The boys tell about their experiences and promotions in camp. One writes about his physical education instructor, Jack Dempsey; another is becoming a champion with his rifle and has won several awards; several others are attending radio school, and others are interested mostly in the weather.

2,100 Letters in Week.

Ald. Meyer and his staff of volunteer workers sent out 2,100 letters last week. The majority of these letters were to new boys, a kind of "get acquainted" letter, the alderman says, in which he explains the purpose of the communications center and asks the boys what they would like most to hear about.

Some of these letters, however, come back either because of incorrect or changed addresses. Ald. Meyer has asked the boys as well as the parents to coöperate in supplying the correct addresses of all those they know about.

Urges More to Write.

Since establishing the communications center Meyer has been making a series of speeches at flag dedications of the various blocks in his ward, urging the people to join the Write a Letter club. He has had framed an enlarged copy of The Tribune cartoon and uses it to illustrate his talk.

Chris Christos, manager of the Lincoln theater, was so engrossed with the idea that he had a movie short made and runs it before each feature comes on the screen. The short is built around The Tribune cartoon and shows Meyer making his plea for every one to join the Write a Letter club.

RECALLS GANDHI AS BENEVOLENT TELLER OF MYTHS

"Life is on such a faster tempo here," she exclaims. "Americans are more energetic and commercially minded. Life just goes on and no one thinks much about it in India."

The Indians are interested in philosophy and poetry. They are a superstitious people, Mrs. Dutton explains, and much of Gandhi's strong support is due to his spiritual appeal to the people.

Letters Censored.

Mrs. Dutton has not been back to India since she left it six years ago. Her parents write letters once a week, but since the war she gets them in bunches of four and five. Some never get here at all and all are British censored. At first her father tried to describe the political and war situation there and the letters would be terribly marked up and cut out. One came in strips.

Altho there is no comparison of the Indian culture and way of living and that of the American, Mrs. Dutton says there is a great similarity between New Delhi, India's capital, and Washington, D. C. The plans of the cities are much alike. The viceroy's palace takes the place of the White House and there's a triumphal arch in place of Washington's monument.

What she remembers most vividly, however, about the Indian capital is the long hours of curtsey practicing which always preceded any party at the viceroy's palace.

Seeks Master's Degree.

After four years at Willmette university in Salem, Ore., Mrs. Dutton came to Chicago to continue her work toward a master's degree in piano at the American Conservatory of Music. She was at first employed as information girl at the YMCA hotel and learned for the first time how to read American time schedules.

Her mother is the former Julia Ella Norton of Evanston and Northwestern university. Her grandfather, Dr. Norton, was religious editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for 20 years. Her grandmother was a well known teacher in the Chicago schools for many years and took her husband's place on the Tribune staff for a couple years when his health failed him. Her father is a former professional ice hockey player from Toronto, Canada, and Mrs. Dutton saw her first hockey game last year.

Mrs. Dutton will have been married a year in November. She met her husband at Willmette university.

"We plan to make music our careers after the war," she says. "I hope to go back to India some day but only to visit. America is my home."

Betrothal

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cardott of Rogers Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Lois, to Pvt. John F. Kramer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kramer of Evanston. Miss Cardott is a graduate of Immaculata High school. Her fiance, a graduate of St. George High school recently completed an aviation mechanics course at Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill.

Orchestra Parents.

Amundsen Band and Orchestra Parents association will meet in Berry Memorial church, Giddings and Leavitt streets, at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

Msgr. Sheen to Give First Loyola Lecture Sunday

Suspension of Loyola Community theater dramatic productions and music concerts for the season has been announced by the Rev. F. G. Dinneen, director and founder of the group. Lectures will be continued with Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen of the Catholic university presenting the season's first talk next Sunday evening.

THEATER OF AIR STAGING STRAUS WORK SATURDAY

Feature Marion Claire, Knight on W-G-N.

Felix Knight, young American lyric tenor, will be starred with Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, next Saturday, when Oscar Straus' operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," is presented from 8 to 9 p. m. on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Knight, American born and American trained, has made rapid strides in the concert world. He was featured this summer on W-G-N and Mutual's "America Loves a Melody" concert series and has been guest artist on other network programs, including the Sunday afternoon symphony series and the Ford concerts.

Miss Claire will be cast in the rôle of Nadina, beautiful Bulgarian girl who is the leading character of the operetta. Knight will sing the rôle of Lieut. Bumerli, a young Swiss officer and professional soldier serving with the Serbian forces. Ray Charles will fill the third principal singing rôle as he will be cast as Alexius, a young Bulgarian hero.

The theme of the story is built around the romance of Nadina and Lieut. Bumerli. Serving with the Serbian forces, Bumerli is forced to flee a Bulgarian patrol and to save himself he climbs into Nadina's boudoir. He captivates the three women of the family by his suave manner and quick wit. At first his affair with Nadina is a mere flirtation carried on to save his life. Later, Bumerli falls genuinely in love with Nadina. She is engaged to Alexius, but she switches her affections to the lieutenant.

Musical background for the operetta will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and by the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor, W-G-N chief of production, will produce the program.

An outstanding dramatic cast will portray the speaking rôles. Much of the story will be told by narration so that as much music as possible will be heard during the program.

FUTURE CITIZENS SHOW OPENING IS NEXT SUNDAY

The first program of the fourth series of "Citizens of Tomorrow" will be aired from 1 to 1:30 p. m. next Sunday, Oct. 11, on W-G-N. The entertainment, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will feature high schools of Chicago and nearby Chicago. Philip Maxwell of The Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies, will have an added interest in the program this season, as his own daughter, Barbara, 14 years old, has just entered Evanston Township High school.

Kenneth MacGregor, production manager of W-G-N, has assigned Holland Engle to be announcer. It will be produced by Morrison Wood, who had charge of the entertainment last spring. Collaborating on the script will be Carlyle Stevens and Don Brinkley. Harold Turner will be the pianist.

Madeleine Carroll Plays in Radio Drama Tonight

Madeleine Carroll, movie actress, appearing frequently on the radio these days, will play the lead in a dramatization of "The Most Unforgetable Character I've Met" on the Radio's Reader's Digest at 8 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS. The story has been written by Sophie Kerr. Conrad Nagel is the master of ceremonies.

FIRST NIGHTER PLAYS MOVE TO 5 P. M. ON W-G-N

An original play, "Dead Man's Shoes," will be presented on the First Nighter program from 5 to 5:30 p. m. today on W-G-N and the Mutual network. Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne will co-star in the presentation from the "Little Theater Off Times Square."

For the last month the series has been aired in coöperation with the Office of War Information and heard from 7 to 7:30, but with a sponsor taking over the show the time has been changed to 5 to 5:30 p. m. Musical background for the show will be supplied by Eric Sagerquist and the orchestra.

Nadine Conner Is Guest on Kostelanetz Program

Nadine Conner, young Metropolitan Opera soprano, will make a guest appearance with Albert Spalding, the violinist, and Andre Kostelanetz's orchestra over WBBM-CBS at 3:30 p. m. today. She will sing "Bird Songs at Eventide," by Coates, and "You Are Free," from "Apple Blossom Time."

MEET YOUR NAVY! GREAT LAKES BID IS WORTH TAKING

Sailors' Show Reflects Fighting Spirit.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Meet Your Navy! That's the invitation the Great Lakes Naval Training station extends to the nation with its all-sailor radio show by that name, presented every Friday evening. It's a bid well worth accepting for every show from Great Lakes is great entertainment, reflecting the talent, the enthusiasm, and the fighting spirit of the bluejackets.

Rita Ascot,
Chief "Pretty" Officer.

When you Meet Your Navy in this fashion you get a glimpse of the human and personal side of the navy—a half hour of stirring music and salty laughter.

Great Lakes has some of the finest musical talent in the country. Bandmaster Frank R. Mattlach gets those thrilling airs out of his band in part because the personnel includes men from many of the top orchestras and bands in the country.

A New Chorus Monthly.

Then there's the mighty chorus, trained and directed by Chaplain Hjalmar Hansen. Chaplain Hansen knows his stuff. He has to. Every month or so he loses his whole choir and has to develop a brand new one out of the ranks of recruits. When we visited the broadcast the other evening Chaplain Hansen was breaking in a group that had not as yet received their full issue or had their hair cut. But in a half hour's drill before the broadcast they were singing "Anchors Aweigh," "Here Comes the Navy," and "Marching Along Together" like veterans.

Dynamic Eddie Peabody, the lieutenant commander who is in charge of music and entertainment at Great Lakes, not only organizes the whole program, but finds time to entertain the men—and the nation—with his banjo wizardry.

Then there's the Rhythm orchestra, which gives out swing in the authentic manner.

But much of the slickest entertainment comes from individual bluejackets themselves. Men with talent make themselves known to Producer Al Boyd and his assistants, who conduct auditions a week in advance.

The night we visited the show Billy Evenson, who used to work on Harold Teen and Citizens of Tomorrow on W-G-N as a civilian, created a laugh riot with a monolog of light satire on navy life he wrote as well as delivered. Bob Hope and Jack Benny never drew better applause from a service man audience than Billy.

Last Friday the show was enlivened by the singing of patriotic songs by Robert Morton of Berwyn, who appeared in the movie, "A Gay Señorita," starring Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire. Morton sang with Xavier Cugat's orchestra.

She's Chief "Pretty" Officer.

The show is the pride of Great Lakes. Adm. John Downes, commandant, has often spoken on the show and it is beloved by the men.

Actress Rita Ascot writes the scripts and sometimes appears on the show reading letters from home. Because of her contributions she has been designated Chief Pretty Officer of the post. Jack Stilwill is the narrator.

And there are many others that contribute to making this navy show the success it is. But it's impossible to capture the flavor of the show with words. You need to listen—9 p. m. Friday on WLS and the Blue network.

Guardsman's Bride

Mrs. Ernest N. Yaroch is the former Audrey Lorraine Vallaly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Vallaly, 6413 North Bell avenue. Her husband, formerly of Port Austin, Mich., is a chief petty officer in the United States coast guard and is stationed in the Chicago customs house.

Point to Experience.

Dewey's supporters laid emphasis last week on the unusual qualifications of their candidate. They pointed out that Dewey had served as assistant secretary of the treasury from 1924 to 1927, and as the American financial adviser to Poland from 1927 to 1930.

"When you hire a man to do a particular job you naturally inquire as to what qualifications and experience he has," said a Dewey release. "A man who has had experience in Washington, in both the executive and legislative branches of the government, is certainly better equipped to get things done, because he knows how to do them, than a man who has never had a federal office."

Walker, a practicing attorney, was an assistant state's attorney from 1912 to 1917 and a member of the board of education of Chicago from 1933 to 1942, serving as vice president of the board in his last two years.

Supreme Court Practice.

His backers say that Walker gained a wide knowledge of international affairs in a long visit to Germany and other foreign countries as an international commissioner for the Probate court in the Boyer estate case. They say he has equipped himself for a wide grasp of national legislative problems thru his long years of practice in the United States Supreme court and the Supreme courts of most of the individual states.

The Dewey camp is making political capital of the recent disclosure that the congressman played a leading part in drafting the wage-price control bill that President Roosevelt found acceptable.

Dewey, a member of the house banking and currency committee, and 10 fellow members attended a secret meeting at Dewey's Washington home at which a substitute was drafted for the farm bloc bill introduced by Chairman Henry B. Steagall. When Steagall learned that the rump meeting had produced a majority committee vote for the substitute bill he withdrew his opposition to it. Steagall's bill would have let farm prices rise to 112 per cent of parity. The substitute bill met the President's unyielding demand for a 100 per cent parity base.

Hints Given to Prolong Use for Duration.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to shop carefully for household appliances that are still available for many of our best domestic "helpers" are made of critical materials that have been drafted for our war production.

Now is also the time to keep our household appliances in tiptop shape so that they will function and stay "on the job" for the duration; insurance against a day when we may be told that "there isn't any more."

Our family vacuum cleaner will work longer and give us better service if we keep it well lubricated, empty its bag after each cleaning, keep the nozzle and brush well adjusted, and avoid running over pins and metal objects.

Our electric fans, before storing away this fall, should be oiled and cleaned and wrapped in paper. And during seasons of use, they need occasional lubrication and oiling.

Keep Heating Pads Flat.

Our heating pads should be kept flat when not in use. When in use they should not be creased or immersed in water or have any pin thrust into them.

Our refrigerator should be checked occasionally by an expert to see that its mechanism is performing properly. It should be defrosted according to manufacturer's instructions and if one has lost the instructions on the general care of the refrigerator it would be well to get another copy.

Tips on Care of Washer.

Our washers should never be overloaded, dirty suds should never be left in them, and after using a washer it should be drained thoroly. Wringer rolls should be rinsed and wiped dry and connecting cord should be wiped dry.

Our ironers should be kept covered when not in use and if an ironer is kept in a cold room in winter it should be taken into a warm room for at least an hour before using.

Our electric fuses protect any electrical equipment that we have and if they give evidence of too frequent burning out, a reliable electrician should be consulted. Every care should be taken not to overload a circuit or to use wiring and cords that have become defective.

Our toasters and grills, our mixers and coffee makers and waffle bakers deserve redoubled care these days since the service they will render depends on proper care and use.

Mrs. Smaltz is an Angel!
PERIOD. Gold is gold. A lily's a lily. Violets smell sweet enough. 'Tain't no use trying to make ice more slippery than it is. Another hue added to a Rainbow wouldn't add a mite to its beauty. An Angel's an Angel! Got it? Then get it, 'cause we're willy-nilly on our way!
Mrs. Smaltz is the sweet darling who's been helping us save our tires. When we told her we'd be able to ring her bell only once in any one day for pickup or delivery of her laundry, her answer warmed the very marrow of our bones!
Our suggestion to call us the day before for pickup the next day got the same reception Juliet gave Romeo—warm! The way she accepted the hint that it would help if her bundle were securely tied and settin' where we could get it, if she had to go out, made us feel like we were deep in the heart of the sunny South!
Ah, this and more! She let us arrange a different pickup day to fit OUR convenience! She always manages to be home when we deliver her laundry and have suitable coins of the realm ready to pay for same. That, that and, oh well, she's an angel, simply an angel!

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Oct. 5

The best way to keep hardy chrysanthemums over winter is to heel them in in the coldframe and utilize the single shoots for planting. Do not transplant in fall unless the plants are well protected. Fine effects can be obtained by careful selection of colors.

Tuesday, Oct. 6

Pot paperwhite narcisii for Thanksgiving bloom. The amaryillis should enter a period of rest from now until spring. Simply withhold water and when the leaves turn yellow and die down place pot and bulb in the basement until spring or when it becomes active, then bring it to the window.

Wednesday, Oct. 7

Planting deciduous shrubs [those that drop their foliage in fall] with evergreens forms a pleasing contrast, and gives variety. Evergreens are for warm winter effects, but when planted under certain conditions they may become dull and uninteresting. Use shrubs of fine texture and small leaves, such as box barberry, pointella, hypericum.

Thursday, Oct. 8

Protect roses by hilling up soil around them. Simply draw the soil as high as possible from between the plants and later cover the area with straw and strawy manure. The tops will stick out above the plants, but they will need pruning in spring; they serve to hold the mulch in place.

Friday, Oct. 9

It is a fine time to cut out deadwood from shrubs. Tender water lilies can be easily carried thru the winter when allowed to remain in their containers and placed in a basement. Cut back the leaves, place on the floor and examine them occasionally that they do not become so dried out they shrivel up and are seriously injured. To prevent this simply water the soil but not sufficiently to cause reawakened activity.

Saturday, Oct. 10

The daylilies are attracting more and more attention because of ease of culture. They like full sun, but will endure partial shade. The plant will establish itself along the roadside if given the opportunity and there are many varieties in new shades.

Their Roles Gain Importance in War

A couple of Chicagoland soldiers who were mechanics in private life make a fine adjustment on a motor at Randolph field, Texas, where a fellow can do as much to damage the axis as can the fellow who flies the plane or drops the bombs. Men like these are badly needed by the army immediately, it was announced last week. Staff Sergt. Walter C. Crews Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Crews, 7840 Rhodes street (in cockpit) and Sergt. William E. Albrecht, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Albrecht, 22 Seymour avenue, Mundelein, repair a basic training plane. Good pay, a sure job and opportunity to serve one's country are offered in this service, army recruiters pointed out.

Will Have No Drill in Special Service.

Help wreck the axis with a wrench was the substance of a plea from the 6th service command last week. It stressed immediate and acute need for men with mechanical ability to volunteer for the army air forces, the signal corps, and the ordnance department.

The army has a gilt edged proposition, army spokesmen said, for any man who has worked as an auto mechanic, gunsmith, electrician, radio repair man, filling station attendant, in plumbing work, at machine trades, or in any other work where ability with his hands was an asset. Age limits are 18 to 44, but the air forces are accepting men as old as 50, it was reported.

Pay Up to $138.

1. A man who joins this service has the same status as any other army volunteer. He begins as a private, but can look forward to rapid advancement to noncommissioned grades, with pay as high as $138 a month, plus rates, quarters, and family allowance.

2. He continues in the army to do the same sort of work he has been doing in private life. He will not drill.

3. He will be accepted if he passes oral examination as to experience and ability at mechanical trades and minimum physical tests. The average mechanic will have little difficulty passing, it was said.

4. He will be at work within a few days after he is accepted. From Chicago he will be sent to a regular army induction camp, from where he will be assigned to a flying field or other station.

Few Moves Assured.

5. He has reasonable assurance that he will not be shifted from camp to camp. He will simply have a job, but it will be at an army center.

6. In the air service as well as signal corps and ordnance, he will be paid while he is trained for work which should be worth thousands of dollars to him after the war. Airplane mechanics will be in demand after the war, it is commonly predicted.

7. He will be serving his country as surely as do the men on the front lines and in the bombers.

The 6th service command is enlisting men from Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin for these vital jobs. Specialists in mechanical trades have been brought to the Chicago recruiting office to explain to applicants the qualifications, duties, and future in these jobs.

What They Need.

In the air forces recruits are needed to become aircraft armorers, mechanics, welders, metal workers, radio mechanics, and operators. Technicians may be assigned also to flying duty, which brings a 50 per cent increase in their base pay.

The signal corps is enlisting specialists for telephone cable splicers and installers, radio and telegraph operators and mechanics.

Chicago applicants should report to the United States army recruiting office at 515 South Franklin street.

Walther League District Conclave Opens Saturday

The 18th annual convention of the northern Illinois district of the Walther league will be held in the Knickerbocker hotel, 163 East Walton street, next Saturday and Sunday. The first general assembly will be called to order by the district president, Hugo F. Malte, 2439 Farwell avenue. Separate sessions for administration, Christian knowledge, Christian service, and junior activities will convene under leadership of department heads.

GURNEE'S FIRE CHIEF, ALSO ITS POLICEMAN, TAKES JOB IN EAST

Joe Dada, Gurnee's only marshal and fire chief since the village was founded in 1929, has left his job to become a fire truck and equipment inspector for the war department. He will work with the Middle Atlantic division with headquarters at Baltimore, Md.

He has been Gurnee's one man police department since the town was started 13 years ago. In addition to these duties for which he receives one dollar a day he headed a group of 25 fire fighters who often were called to put out fires in neighboring communities.

A letter of appreciation was sent him by William C. Barnstable, acting village president, and his former workers presented him with a traveling bad as a farewell gift. Dada's wife and three children expect to leave the village soon to establish their home in the east.

11,039 ENROLLED IN CITYS ROTC— MOST SINCE 1920

400 Boys Join Eagerly Despite Uniform Lack.

BY JOSEPH GREEN.

More than 400 Chicago high school boys are so anxious to get into the Reserve Officers Training corps this fall they have signed up for study and drill despite no uniforms being available for them.

"We would prefer that they have uniforms," Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics and ROTC head, declared. "But the demand has been so great we have lowered uniform restrictions in some cases." The ROTC roll is full now, he said.

Enrollment Is Voluntary.

These nonuniform boys are in 27 high schools, where the entire issue of 8,035 uniforms was snapped up almost as soon as school opened this fall. In all, the ROTC has 11,039 cadets, greatest count since 1919 and 1920, just after World War I., which brought about organization of the public school units in 1918. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE was chiefly responsible for their inception.

Military spirit engendered by World War I. and the fact that the training was compulsory swelled enrollment in 1919 and 1920 to 14,500. This year the surge is entirely voluntary, perhaps engendered by Pearl Harbor of World War II.

Lane Tech Has 1,326.

The more than 400 patriotic boys who are waiting for uniforms—if they become available—are sophomores, juniors and seniors. Freshmen cadets, not eligible for uniforms until their second year, account for about 2,500 of the 3,004 nonuniformed cadets. In uniform are 8,035 cadets.

Lane Technical High school again leads the city with 1,326 ROTC members. Crane follows with 586, and others with more than 500 are Lake View with 525; Austin, 517, and Senn, 512.

Following are cadet enrollments for each school, with enrollment for last fall compared with that for this fall:

EVANSTON G.O.P. HELPING VOTERS PROTECT BALLOT

The Evanston Republican club will wage an extensive campaign for the registration of voters tomorrow and Tuesday, the final days for registering, State Rep. Alan E. Ashcraft Jr., Evanston Republican township committeeman, announced.

The city clerk's office in Evanston city hall will take registrations tomorrow from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. and from 7:30 p. m. to 9 p. m. On Tuesday eight registration places will be open in Evanston from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. for the convenience of those who are not registered.

The Evanston Republican club slogan has been "If Freedom Is Worth Fighting For It Is Worth Voting For." A list of every voter in Evanston was compiled by the club during the summer. This list was checked against the official registration list to determine the names of those who are unregistered.

Precinct workers have called upon the unregistered persons and have helped those who have moved since last registration to fill out change of address cards. Postal cards have been mailed by the club to unregistered citizens and notices will be sent tomorrow advising them of the eight registration places to be open Tuesday.

Evanston will be placarded by posters announcing the final two days of registration and each person believed to be unregistered will receive a telephone call tomorrow and another late Tuesday afternoon, Ashcraft said.

Lake Forest College Shows Small Enrollment Gain

Lake Forest college announces a total enrollment slightly above last year's figure. The decrease in the number of men in the upper classes is offset by an 8 per cent increase in the freshman class. The registrar also reports a 70 per cent increase in the number of students' taking special courses connected with the war effort.

It's Their Golden Wedding Cake

In celebration of their golden wedding Sept. 14 Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Landon, 103 Dupee place, Wilmette, were guests at a family dinner and reception in the Georgian hotel, Evanston. Soon after their marriage in Morrison, Ill., the couple moved to Chicago, and since 1924 have resided in Wilmette. Five grandchildren and four children—Paul E. and Lawrence E. Landon of Wilmette, Mrs. Lyman F. Newton of Westfield, N. J., and Mrs. Stuart Murphy of Cincinnati, O.—offered their congratulations.

WALLER YOUTHS GIVE LEISURE TO RED CROSS AID

Students of Waller High school, 2039 Orchard street, are entering a new school year with their record of 100 per cent membership in the junior Red Cross intact. Under the direction of Miss Anne D. Clark of the general science department, a program of action is being planned.

The industrial art shops of the school again will construct games, checker boards, trays, and lap boards for distribution among servicemen in hospitals. In sewing classes girls will make skirts and dresses for civilians whom the Red Cross helps.

CAMERA COURSE IN EVANSTON TO OPEN WEDNESDAY

Starting Wednesday night, members of the North Shore Camera club will offer a six weeks course to nonmembers in beginning photography, George Sempson of Winnetka, president, announced. The classes are set for 7 o'clock each Wednesday night in Orrington hotel, Evanston.

This is the first time the club has offered open classes. Instructors from the Chicago Association of Camera Clubs will discuss the taking, making, and enlarging of prints, exposure, cameras, accessories, and composition. The beginning course will be followed by a 12 to 15 week intermediate course.

Boyden Is Out to Unseat Veteran Connors.

The following letter was received from the governor by the Business Men's committee, organization formed in 1940 to halt vote frauds and which sponsored Boyden's candidacy in the April primary:

"Good legislation can scarcely be expected to come out of a deadlocked senate, or one so closely divided that a small handful of bi-partisan politicians can hold the balance of power and defeat the interests of the people of the state.

"That situation is a very real possibility unless you are successful. I want your two candidates, 'Hobey' Neff [of the downtown 1st district] and Bill Boyden in the next state senate. I know their character and educational qualifications to be above average, and, even more important, I know that if elected they will loyally represent that sometimes forgotten group, the ordinary decent citizens who want nothing more from their representatives than good, honest, economical government.

"You are entirely at liberty to let these people know how I feel about your undertaking if that will help you any."

Compare Vote in Primary.

The Business Men's committee was credited with effective work in the 1940 election, when husky polls watchers were on hand in hundreds of precincts and as an evident result many turned in Republican majorities for the first time in years. The BMC has had its guns aimed at Connors ever since its inception, and shot Boyden at him in the primary.

Boyden polled 2,717 votes on April 14, compared with 3,053 for his four opponents. Sen. Connors, running without opposition, got 6,803 votes. However, the total of 5,770 Republican votes for this office makes a good appearance when the 1938 figures are stacked up on the same table.

In 1938, when Connors was last elected, the Democratic primary vote for the office topped that of the G. O. P., by 4 to 1. But in the November election that year the Democratic lead for the office dropped to 6 to 5. Stated differently, the 8,534 Democratic lead of April shrank to 2,043 by November.

Volunteers and Boyden.

The Republican camp contends that this alone shows Boyden can win in a walk Nov. 3. But he's not walking, his backers say; he's running, and working hard to get every vote within possible reach. Furthermore, the BMC did not exist in 1938 but will be on the job to guard Boyden's interests in many of the difficult precincts.

Working in G. O. P. headquarters the other night was one of the BMC volunteers, Frank W. Durham, president of W. W. Durham company, securities, at 231 South La Salle street.

Durham, whose home is at 644 Walden road, Winnetka, was poring over precinct registration records and had been canvassing to get 42d ward residents to register at firehouses.

"This is velvet here," Durham said. "I've had to talk thru only one closed door. When I was a BMC volunteer in the 22d ward, it was climbing back stairs, being chased by dogs, and trying to converse with Democrats who used little English.

War Hits BMC.

"Canvassing is the greatest thing to bring you in touch with the people. Most of us get in a rut and make our world so narrow that we don't know how other people live. That's not good for us or for the country. This way you get around and learn how fine and friendly the other fellow really is, if you'll just get acquainted with him. More people ought to be helping."

Durham said the war has hit the BMC hard and that many of those who served before have had to drop out. W. A. Little, regular BMC 42d ward leader, and H. W. Meers, leader in the 43d ward [also in the 29th district], are in the armed services.

Boyden is a member of the law firm of Bell, Boyd, and Marshall. He is 46 years old and has four children. This is his first candidacy for public office. In World War I. he enlisted as a private and became an artillery lieutenant.

G.O.P. CONGRESS THE SPARK TO SET OFF VICTORY

Bushey Cites Need of Wise Managing.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Republican victory at the polls Nov. 3 will end the New Deal's concealment of its war mismanagement and the start of a wave of determination that will sweep the nation to victory, Fred E. Busbey, G. O. P. nominee for representative from the 3d congressional district, forecast last week.

Speaking before the 17th ward regular Republican organization on Tuesday, Busbey declared that a strong two-party system is always desirable, but particularly necessary in a great national emergency.

"Patriotic opposition and constructive criticism in time of war, by citizens whose patriotism and desire to win are unquestioned, are highly to be desired," Busbey declared.

Shows Up Incompetents.

"Such patriotic opposition brings to light existing weaknesses, inefficiency and unpatriotic motives. It helps the nation to replace incompetent public servants with men of known ability. It helps to save the lives of thousands of men in our armed forces, and to conserve and put to efficient use our enormous national resources. It will shorten the war.

"The record of the party now in power does not merit unquestioned confidence nor the delegation of unlimited power. Our losses in the war up to now merely reveal the weakness of the New Deal program when subjected to the severe test of battle.

"Before the people can be fully informed regarding the bungling, inefficiency and politics being played in our defense program, and take steps to correct them, it is ncessary to sweep out the rubber stamp satellites of the New Deal by electing Republican congressmen who will break thru the censorship that has been set up to cover mistakes."

10 Years of Experiment.

Busbey said the last ten years of national government have been an almost unbroken succession of wasteful experimenting, mistakes, unending deficits, mounting taxes, failure to solve the farm problem or cure the depression, lack of foresight and of firmness and decision in handling war problems.

These give evidence of the administration's failure, Busbey said. Its objectives have been revealed by the constant undermining of private initiative, the drift toward socialism and increasing regimentation of life.

Republican leadership seeks to cure our national ills, not by taking away the people's freedom, but by the use of tested methods to stimulate free enterprise and the American genius which has solved freemen's problems in the past, Busbey said.

Sees Need of Criticism.

A plea for national unity as distinguished from political unity was made by Thomas J. Downs, the G. O. P. nominee from the 2d congressional district. He spoke at a meeting of the 9th ward regular Republican organization.

"We must have national unity to win this war," Downs said. "National unity is solidity, loyalty to the common state and for the common welfare, to the country and to the flag which belongs to all of us alike.

"But we cannot have political unity if we are to win the war and the peace. Political unity is unity under a single political party. Political unity is abolition of the two-party system and the erection of the one-party system.

"When political unity enters the door human liberties go out the window. The free man disappears. Political unity means that all opposition, all criticism dies, and a one-party system arises, a system of tyranny upon which there is no check or brake.

Reason for War.

"The world would be at peace today were it not for political unity. It is political unity that has plunged the world into war. It is those nations which succumbed to political unity which have loosed madness and destruction and death upon the world, which have turned men into beasts, and which must be destroyed if we are to be secure and have confidence in the goodness of the days to come."

"Early and complete victory can be achieved only by putting patriotism above patronage," Downs said. "Politics in our national war effort has been adjourned by the Republican party, but the moratorium on partisanship should likewise apply to the New Deal party."

The steadily growing camp of former State Sen. William E. King, G. O. P. nominee for congressman from the preponderantly colored 1st district, was joined last week by Roscoe Conkling Simmons, widely known colored orator and a writer for the Chicago Defender, Chicago's foremost Negro newspaper.

Cites Brooks' Work.

Simmons said two factors have made it virtually certain that the district will emerge from the November balloting with a G. O. P. majority approaching those before the New Deal landslides.

One, Simmons said, is "the triumph of Sen. Wayland Brooks over southern Democrats in the senate in his one man war against the poll tax."

Robert J. Lynn, husband of Mrs. Josephine Lynn, 9113 Commercial avenue, recently was promoted to sergeant at Rapid City, S. D., where he is with the army air forces. His brother, Pvt. Kenneth F. Lynn, is with the engineers corps at Fort Belvoir, Virginia. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. William Lynn of 8917 Exchange avenue. Both are graduates of Mount Carmel High school and Loyola university.

John A. Fowler of 6732 Cornell avenue of the military police detachment at the ordnance motor supply depot, Fort Wayne, Michigan, recently was promoted to first sergeant. He is a graduate of Iowa State college and before entering service was a salesman.

Two south side soldiers recently received promotions at Camp Stewart, Georgia. Edward Stallworth, 452 East 35th street, was promoted to first sergeant, and Martin J. Wilson of 3811 South Park way received a staff sergeancy.

It took the army to make a star of Private First Class Rudy N. Prashina, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Prashina of 4810 Drummond street, East Chicago. Before entering service 16 months ago Prashina had a band in his home town but found little opportunity to get recognition. He was transferred to Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Miss., and became a member of a band at the camp. This band recently was selected to be featured on the "Cheers from the Camps" program presented by the Columbia Broadcasting system.

1Leut. Robert A. Hermann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Hermann, 7750 Saginaw avenue, recently was assigned as an officer pilot with a ferrying group, air transport command, Hensley Field, Texas.

Three south siders recently were commissioned second lieutenants upon graduation from the officers school at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, in the field artillery division. The new lieutenants and their assignments follow: Richard C. Chatman Jr., 4521 Vincennes avenue, to Fort Custer, Michigan; Leo S. Beverly, 8605 Dante avenue, and Frank Frederick Fats, 3051 East 93d street, both to Camp Beale, California.

Veteran Employes Prepare to Say Farewell to Chicago Beach Hotel

Turning the Chicago Beach hotel into an army hospital in the next few weeks will bring to an abrupt end jobs that some of the hotel's 207 employes have held for as many as 40 years. The employes have developed a feeling of close attachment to the hotel which has a national reputation for its 49 years of distinguished guests and parties. Most of the employes are confident that they can find other work, but will shed at least a figurative tear at leaving old jobs. Garfield, doorman since 1902, has welcomed such people as Sir Thomas Lipton, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Raymond Hitchcock, and scores of other notables to the hotel. "Cook," head waiter at the Chicago Beach, has learned the tastes of many prominent people in his 36 years in the hotel's dining room. He has never worked at any other place, coming to the Chicago when he was 15 years old. Each day he and Julia Meyer Fridstein, assistant manager, have gone over the arrangements for special dining facilities ordered for the day.

Dowager Hotel Doffs Jewels for Nurse's Cap

BY JOHN WILHELM.

A sad farewell is being bid the Chicago Beach hotel this week as 475 guests and 207 employés prepare to leave the dowager of the south side hotel group. Once famed for its brilliant social affairs, the hotel will doff its glamorous trappings to become an army hospital.

Many of the guests have resided in the hotel since the present building opened in 1920, and some employés have never held any job but that with the south side hostelry. The recent condemnation proceedings made no provisions to return the 500 room institution after the war, and it has been suggested that it may become a permanent hospital.

Loses Fight Against Drive.

The hotel's previous legal encounters with government are nearly as spectacular as its social history. In 1915 the Chicago Beach hotel successfully carried to court a suit to maintain a private beach. In 1925 it lost a drawn out legal battle to prevent the present outer drive from separating the hotel from the lake shore. Again in 1932 the hotel unsuccessfully objected to paying taxes on land that was allegedly under water.

The government action now in taking the hotel for a hospital has had several effects. The 475 guests are finding apartments in the $200-$300 a month class very scarce, altho more than half have already made arrangements elsewhere. Two families had moved from the Stevens hotel to the Chicago Beach only a few weeks ago after the Stevens was taken over for the air corps. A number of autumn brides-to-be had to revise plans for their weddings at the Chicago Beach hotel. University of Chicago women's clubs were forced to move their annual rushing parties from the Chicago Beach also.

Famous Names on Register.

Even as the guest register of the past has been signed by such persons as Sir Thomas Lipton, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Edna Ferber, Frank Lloyd Wright, Raymond Hitchcock, and many another well known name, the people that now are leaving the hotel to make room for the hospital include many well known Chicagoans.

Superior Judge Joseph Sabath and his wife are moving to a nearby hotel, as are families of such men as E. M. Claypool, Illinois Central public relations counsel; Sam Karpen, furniture executive, and Henry Manaster, packing executive.

"It has been the only home we know," said Mrs. Henry Manaster, whose two daughters grew up and were married in the hotel and whose son left the family home in the hotel to join the army.

"Nobody ever lived in our apartment but ourselves," Mrs. R. W. Burnett, wife of the president of the Ajax Brake company, remarked regretfully. "We moved from the old hotel to the new Chicago Beach when it opened, and our roots have grown deep here. Of course we want to help the army if we can."

Forty Years at Door.

Employés of the hotel are equally attached to the institution. The head

ALL-NEGRO CAST TO PRESENT 'AIDA' AT OPERA HOUSE

All Except One Singer Are Chicagoans.

For the first time in Chicago's history an opera with an all-Negro cast will be presented at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in the Civic Opera house, 20 North Wacker drive. The opera, Giuseppi Verdi's "Aida," will be given by the Chicago Negro Opera guild.

The opera will also be given next Sunday evening at the same hour. Last year the group sang it in Pittsburgh, Pa. The guild was organized by Mary Cardwell Dawson of Pittsburgh, past president of the National Association of Negro Musicians. For the last several weeks she has been directing rehearsals at 4401 South Park way.

All But One from Chicago.

With one exception all members of the cast reside in Chicago. Reginald Burriss, who plays the part of the king, is from Pittsburgh. The opera will be given with the assistance of the Chicago Civic Opera orchestra, directed by Leo Kopp, resident conductor. He will be assisted by E. A. Simpson.

La Julia Rhea will play the title rôle. She sang this part when the guild presented the opera a year ago. Napoleon Reed will have the rôle of Radames, the victorious warrior, who dies for the love of Aida. Maurice Cooper will play the part of the messenger. Jackson Smith Jr. will have the rôle of the high priest, Ramphis.

Chorus Has 75.

Others who will have leading rôles include Nellie Dobson Plant, Mable Roberts Walker, Thelma Walde Brown, and La Jeune Fisher.

The choral background will be given by a group of 75 to 100 voices. The ballet dancers are under the direction of Sadie Bruce and Frank Neal will have charge of the Moorish dancers.

PASTOR OPENS SUNDAY EVENING DISCUSSIONS IN HYDE PARK CHURCH

Dr. George M. Gibson, pastor of the United Church of Hyde Park, will speak on "Personality and Community" at the opening of the Sunday evening discussion group's third season today at 7:45 o'clock in the lecture room of the church, 53d street and Blackstone avenue. Another feature will be selections by the All American chorus, directed by Max Janowski, organist and choirmaster of KAM temple. The program will include spirituals, patriotic, and folk songs. The group plans to bring lectures each Sunday evening. The organization is nondenominational and all members of the community are welcome. Officers are: W. V. Woodruff, chairman; Mrs. Margaret Hart, vice chairman; Miss Margery Hogg, secretary, and Donald Durfey, treasurer. There is no charge for admission.

State Rep. John Ryan [13th] was the principal speaker at a recent ceremony to dedicate a flag and service men's plaque at 85th place and Stony Island avenue. The flag, flagpole, and plaque were donated by W. E. Keup, 8534 Blackstone avenue. The names of 31 men from zones 7 and 8 of the Avalon park community are on the plaque.

St. Columbanus Society to Observe 32d Birthday

St. Columbanus Altar and Rosary society will observe its 32d birthday Wednesday at 1 o'clock with a luncheon at the school hall.

"We won't be doing this much longer," Antoinette Smaniotto, assistant housekeeper who has been checking out linens for 11 years, tells one of the maids, Elizabeth Cwitkovi. Antoinette came to the Chicago Beach in 1931, taking over the job her mother had held for many years before her.

"Well, Rosie, we won't be cooking together much longer," Joseph Jaegerhuber, who rose from food checker to assistant chef in his 16 years in the Chicago Beach hotel kitchen, tells Rose Getz, vegetable cook, who has never missed a day nor been a minute late in her 12 years at the hotel. Rosie is affectionately known as "Mama of the Kitchen" by employes and guests alike.

SALVAGE HUNT REVEALS SOUTH SIDE BONANZA

Tracks Would Net 500 Tons of Steel.

BY CHARLES WRIGHT.

Material for 15 or 20 medium tanks may be obtained from abandoned railway and street car lines in south side communities, according to officials of civilian defense division 2. This division is conducting a "salvage census" of its communities to uncover neglected sources of scrap metal.

W. J. McDillon, salvage chairman for division 2, which includes 11 southeastern communities, said first reports showed approximately 500 tons of metal could be gathered from abandoned railway lines. This included an estimated 400 tons of metal from Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks from 83d to 91st street, which have been the center of the controversy concerning the extension of 87th street, and two stretches of trolley tracks.

30 Tons of Rails on 91st Street.

Rails from one of the stretches of abandoned street car tracks, McDillon said, will net 30 tons. This stretch is from Baltimore avenue to Buffalo avenue on 91st street. The other tracks are on 93d street from the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to Burley avenue. This stretch, he said, is estimated to contain more than 20 tons.

McDillon added he heard there were 23 abandoned taxicabs, containing 25 tons of salvage, on a lot at 95th street and Muskegon avenue. Other possible salvage sources reported include a fence near an abandoned Pennsylvania railroad yard and the viaduct across the Baltimore and Ohio tracks at 86th street for a total of 50 tons.

The reports of these and other possible salvage sources, McDillon said, will be forwarded to William McFetridge, metropolitan salvage director. To accumulate these reports, he added, all salvage workers of division 2 have been instructed to check every salvage source, especially metal, and to forward them to the division office.

List Totals Since June 1.

Since June 1 the following totals have been collected in division 2 communities: paper, 875 tons; iron, 1,023 tons; other metals, 132 tons; rags, 128 tons; rubber, 470 tons; tin cans, 193 tons. Approximately half this total came from the following southeast communities: Avalon Park, Chatham, Chesterfield, Grand Crossing, East Side, Hegewisch, Russell Square, South Chicago, South Deering, South Shore, and Stony Island Park.

McDillon said it was the aim of division 2 to perfect a scrap gathering organization which would last until the war has ended and would not be geared just for sporadic drives.

Relics have swelled the scrap pile of the Russell Square community. Stephen Bubacz, community commander, reports that several iron beds, dating from 1880, have been contributed. A pot, used by butchers in the 1890s to prepare sausages, also was tossed in. From a later age, but providing more metal, was the 1918 Reo truck which was donated by William Trojonowski, 8402 Burley avenue. The community drive has accumulated 15 tons, he said.

Salvage Depots in Most Blocks.

Most of the 1,200 blocks of the 13 communities of division 1 have established salvage depots, it was reported at the division office. These depots have been established thru the efforts of block captains and block salvage wardens. While there are no figures available in the current scrap drive in this division officials said satisfactory results were being obtained. Communities in this division are: Armour Square, Chinatown, Hyde Park, Jackson Park, Kenwood, Near South Side, Oakland, Park Manor, South Central District, Pekin Community, Douglas, Washington Park, and Woodlawn.

Farther south, Hammond officials are preparing to stage a concerted drive for a week beginning tomorrow. A "task force," including Clarence Mason, city engineer; A. B. Scott, head of the OCD organization; Donald Zahn, leader of the tin can campaign; Ben Friedman and Jack Frost, metal company officials, and James McShane, county chairman, will assist in making the drive a success.

ADD 3 MEMBERS TO SOUTH SIDE RATION BOARDS

Harry Beglin, 816 South Michigan avenue, vice president of a radiator manufacturing company, has been added to the volunteer rationing board of the 1st ward and two members have been added to the board of the 5th ward. They are Mrs. Phyllis Morton, 1223 East 56th street, and Jules Levy, 1227 Madison Park, president of a mail advertising company.

Mayor Kelly recently administered oaths of office to the new south side board members. They were appointed by Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago metropolitan area administrator of the Office of Price Administration, in anticipation of heavier rationing work expected with addition of gasoline, oil, meat, and other items to ration lists.

GOVERNOR ASKS NEFF'S ELECTION TO STATE SENATE

Candidate's Job Hunting Gains New Results.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Gov. Dwight H. Green is making a special appeal in behalf of Hobart E. Neff, the young job getting Republican nominee for state senator in the 1st district on the near south side, it was learned last week.

Gov. Green.

Neff, a securities account executive, has already opened employment doors which have always been closed to Negroes in the past. Working daily with Bernard S. Black, 1st ward leader of the Business Men's committee, Neff has filled nearly 700 jobs—and he's still plunging ahead in his unusual political project with the same earnestness he displayed on the University of Chicago gridiron from 1924 to 1926.

Warns of Deadlock.

Gov. Green wrote as follows to Wade Fetzer Jr., vice chairman of the BMC:

"I want you and your workers to know how tremendously important I think the work of your organization is at this time. Good legislation can scarcely be expected to come out of a deadlocked senate, or one so closely divided that a small handful of bipartisan politicians can hold the balance of power and defeat the interests of the people of the state.

"That situation is a very real possibility unless you are successful.

"I want your two candidates, "Hobey" Neff and Bill Boyden, in the next state senate. I know their character and educational qualifications and, even more important, I know that if elected they will loyally represent that sometimes forgotten group, the ordinary decent citizens who want nothing more from their representatives than good, honest, economical government.

Stresses Importance.

"I hope you will be able to impress the importance of your undertaking upon the people of Chicago and that they will give you the help, both in money and activity, that will result in their victory in November.

Neff said his enthusiasm over his job getting program is based upon his knowledge that not only is he helping residents of his home community "who really need a break," but he is aiding the war effort by guiding workers to places where their services are needed.

Within a week Neff and "Bun" Black have conferred with scores of employers to get their coöperation. Neff was jubilant the other day because he had been instrumental in obtaining a job for the first colored girl to be hired for office work by a large restaurant-candy company.

Cites One Case.

"One case we're proud of involves a colored couple with four children who were all living with the wife's parents because the husband had no job," Neff related.

"First we got the wife a job, working three days a week. Then we got the husband a job. Later we got her a better job, so that their income totals about $50 a week. Now they have their own home, good food, warm clothing, and their heads are up."

Such cases partly account for the fact that the Tuesday night meetings at 2800 South Park way are rich in enthusiasm. The other reason is United States Sen. Wayland Brooks and his successful fight against the southern Democratic poll tax bloc.

Col. Roscoe Simmons, orator and writer for the Chicago Defender, is chairman of a committee which is giving particular attention to uniting all factions and independents for Republican victory.

Differences Settled.

"All differences have been aired and every hatchet buried," Col. Simmons said. "Since Black and Neff moved against bi-partisanship, the 1st ward is a long way from being what it used to be as a tool for the Democratic machine."

These reports, he said, come from Rep. Ernest Greene and Dr. Edward Welters, the two G.O.P. candidates for the Illinois house of representatives.

Meanwhile, the Democrats were getting started with the series of 1st ward meetings. They are out for the first time to elect two house members in this district—Rep. Daniel M. Flanigan and Corneal A. Davis.

HAMMOND FORUM STRESSES TOPICS RELATING TO WAR

Series of 12 Lectures to Start Nov. 3.

Topics related to the war will feature the series of 12 talks sponsored this year by the Hammond open forum. The forum will begin its 19th season Nov. 3 at the Beth-El auditorium, South Hohman avenue, Hammond, it was announced by Dr. Hedwig S. Kuhn, president.

Discussions on Japan, India, China, and Russia have been arranged along with talks on World War II., the future of Europe, and financing victory. To break the concentration of war topics a character study lecture, "Are Our Souls Straight?" and a personality analysis, "How to Remember Names and Faces," have been scheduled.

Dr. Holmes First Speaker.

The character study will open the series Tuesday, Nov. 3. It will be given by Dr. John Haynes Holmes of the Community church, New York City. The second talk, scheduled for the following Tuesday, is to be by Prof. W. A. Scharffenberg on Japan. In 1927 he founded the Institute of Oriental Studies in Shanghai, China. He was in the Orient for 22 years.

Other November talks will include: Ray Royce, on "What Is Patriotism?" and Louis Fisher, "India." The forum will meet each Tuesday.

Serves Whole Region.

Dr. Kuhn is the founder and sponsor of the forum which began as a community project under church auspices. Two years later it broadened its scope to include the whole Calumet region and ceased to be confined to a single community. The purpose of the organization has been to bring speakers to the Calumet region to discuss current questions. The talks are followed by a question period.

While a large percentage of the members of the forum live in Hammond it also draws from Gary, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor, Hobart, Crown Point, Whiting, Valparaiso, Joliet, and South Chicago.

'GET TOUGHENED UP' IS SLOGAN OF YMCA CAMPAIGN

S. Chicago Branch Seeks 300 New Members.

With the slogan, "Get Toughened Up," the annual membership drive of the South Chicago YMCA is getting under way. The organization has a goal of 300 new members. Joseph A. Basso has been appointed chairman of the drive.

J. A. Basso.

The drive has been organized somewhat on the basis of an army. Walter Keenan, Andrew Polarek, and Justice Buttala have been named division commanders. Team captains are: George Sarver, Lee Ashton, Calvin Radin, Carl Eklin, Manuel Salozar, Edward J. Kozak, Joe Marshal, and George Konkol.

War Emphasizes Need.

Basso pointed out that the war had brought the need for physical fitness to a sharp focus. "Americans must be toughened up physically and our YMCA program is prepared to do this. We are expanding our physical education program to accommodate all who want to take part in conditioning exercises."

The physical education program will include programs for men, boys, and women. The boys will strive to satisfy the requirements of the "Earn Your Wings" club. They will be given a wing footed emblem after they successfully comply with minimum standards in 12 physical education divisions.

Special Classes Scheduled.

Men will be given a series of physical fitness tests to determine the type of program they need. Corrective programs will be worked out for the individual. Special classes will be held at noon on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; at 5:30 o'clock on Mondays and Thursdays; and at 7:30 o'clock on Tuesdays and Fridays. Women activities will include morning classes in badminton and swimming, evening classes in mixed volley ball; and afternoon classes in gym and swimming.

The membership drive of the South Chicago YMCA is part of a city-wide drive to recruit 10,000 new Y members. Chairmen in other south side YMCAs include: Louis L. Spear, Hyde Park YMCA; W. John Allen, South Shore YMCA; and William P. Harrison, Wabash Avenue YMCA.

G.O.P. CONGRESS CALLED SPARK TO SET OFF VICTORY

Brooks fought to passage the amendment to the soldier vote bill that exempts service men and women from the payment of poll taxes before they can vote for national officials. Eight southern states have such poll tax laws.

Simmons described the poll tax as "a device by which the Democratic party has disfranchised at least five million colored citizens and reduced them to political slavery." To these Negroes and to colored persons everywhere Brooks is a hero because he is "the first statesman in more than 60 years to force a vote on any phase of Jim Crow.

Attacks Dawson Deal.

The other important factor in the coming Republican victory is the new unity of the party under the combined leadership of Bernard S. Black and Hobart E. Neff of the Business Men's committee, and of King and other colored leaders in the district.

Black is state lodging house commissioner and Neff is the G. O. P. candidate for state senator from the 1st senatorial district. Both are white men. They have attacked bipartisanship in the colored section and have provided a rallying point to which are flocking the voters who have deplored such bipartisan deals as the one which made a city hall Democrat of former Ald. William L. Dawson.

Dawson was the Republican nominee for congressman from the 1st four years ago, and is now the Democratic nominee for the same post. He was made Democratic committeeman of the 2d ward after the 1939 aldermanic election, as a reward for the work he did for the city hall machine.

DOWAGER HOTEL DOFFS JEWELRY FOR NURSE'S CAP

waiter has been with the hotel 36 years, the upholsterer 27 years, the painter 21 years, the doorman 40 years, the carpenter 21 years, and even such a supposedly unstable person as a chef has stayed 16 years.

"Garfield," colored doorman, who has worn out more than 100 green uniforms in his 40 years of opening carriage and later automobile doors, had less to worry about than his fellow workers. The doorman with a flair for weather forecasting, whose full name is Joseph Garfield Walton, has been offered no less than four jobs by guests who would like to take him with them when they leave the hotel.

William Cook, dining room captain, was a boy of 15 when he came to the Chicago Beach as a water boy 36 years ago. He has never had another job other than working for the hotel. He recalls pumping water for use in the guestrooms. Cook expects to have the waiters union secure him a job in one of the other large hotels in the city.

Incident of Big Wind.

"I've been fixing squeaking doors and putting up and taking down shelves for 21 years here," Carl Carlson, 8831 Wabash avenue, says, "but it has all been pretty humdrum except for the time the wind carried away the awning erected for the grand opening of the hotel dance pavilion during the 1933 World's fair. We worked like mad that time and had it back up only 15 minutes before the guests arrived."

"It used to be period furniture that I re-upholstered, but now its modernistic stuff that I find very dull to work on," remarks Mike Ruhland, 69, who always has made the drapes, bedspreads, and curtains as well as refurbished the chairs for the hotel. "I hate to leave, but I'm not worried. There'll be something bobbin' up." He has been at the hotel for 26 years.

Even the manager, Stephen Clark, found his normal life suddenly sheared off. "I don't know what I'm going to do after the army moves in," Clark said, "but I can't worry about such little things as that now. There are a million and one details to be arranged before we move out. What is going to happen to the furniture? What can we do for the guests that still don't have new quarters? Will the army need our engineers to keep the boilers going? Such questions must be answered."

Sign Blacked Out.

And so the Chicago Beach with its curving veranda that looks out over the lake has started a new chapter in its history. Instead of the swish of formal gowns sweeping down to dinner, the halls will hear the brisk click of nurses' steps, and the kitchen that once prepared food for connoisseurs will send out bland diets.

Symbolic of it all, the 25 foot electric sign that still used bulbs instead of neon tubes has ceased to flash its message the length of Hyde Park boulevard for the first time in 22 years.

Resume Friday Services at Temple Isaiah Israel

Rabbi Morton Berman of Temple Isaiah Israel, 1100 Hyde Park boulevard, will preach on "We Discover Columbus" at the opening Friday evening service of the temple at 8:15 o'clock Friday. A reception to welcome new members will follow. A children's consecration service will be held at 10:30 o'clock today in the temple.

Wed in Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Van Camp of Fenwick, Mich., formerly of Harvey, announce the marriage of their daughter, Marguerite Murd, to William A. Adams Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Adams of 7232 Oakley avenue. The ceremony was performed at Fort Lauderville, Fla. They are at home at 5465 Everett avenue.

FIELD MUSEUM PALEONTLOGY CURATOR NAMED

Patterson Successor to E. S. Riggs.

Bryan Patterson.

Bryan Patterson, 5213 Blackstone avenue, has been named acting curator in charge of the division of paleontology at the Field Museum of Natural History, Orr Goodson, acting director of the museum announced.

He succeeds Elmer S. Riggs, curator of paleontology at the museum for 44 years, who retired Sept. 15. He has gone to Lawrence, Kas., where he will continue research in laboratories of the University of Kansas.

At Museum Since 1926.

Patterson has been on the museum staff since 1926 and has been assistant curator of paleontology since 1935. He has conducted several field expeditions for the museum. The last of these ended last fall after the expedition had collected the skeleton of a marine reptile 30 feet long in a South Dakota pasture near the town of Kennebec.

Formerly the museum had only a partial skeleton of this sort of prehistoric animal. It is a member of a group known as the Mosasaurs.

Patterson also conducted expeditions to Florissant, Colo., in 1930 and to northwestern Nebraska in '31, '32, '33, and '37.

Born in London.

The new acting curator was born in London, England, son of Col. J. H. Patterson of the British army, retired. He attended Malvern college, England, 1923-'26 and has taken various courses at the University of Chicago since 1927.

4 SOUTH SIDERS CONTINUE GLIDER PILOT STUDIES

Four south siders were included in the group of 17 civilians from the University of Chicago who recently completed the initial stage of training to become glider pilots in the army air forces.

Training in groundwork and elementary flying was given by the university under the auspices of the civil aeronautics administration. The men, one of the first groups to begin such training, have left for army flying fields where they will be trained in "dead stick" flying of regular planes.

THEATER OF AIR STAGING STRAUS WORK SATURDAY

Feature Marion Claire, Knight on W-G-N.

Felix Knight, young American lyric tenor, will be starred with Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, next Saturday, when Oscar Straus' operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," is presented from 8 to 9 p. m. on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Knight, American born and American trained, has made rapid strides in the concert world. He was featured this summer on W-G-N and Mutual's "America Loves a Melody" concert series and has been guest artist on other network programs, including the Sunday afternoon symphony series and the Ford concerts.

Miss Claire will be cast in the rôle of Nadina, beautiful Bulgarian girl who is the leading character of the operetta. Knight will sing the rôle of Lieut. Bumerli, a young Swiss officer and professional soldier serving with the Serbian forces. Ray Charles will fill the third principal singing rôle as he will be cast as Alexius, a young Bulgarian hero.

The theme of the story is built around the romance of Nadina and Lieut. Bumerli. Serving with the Serbian forces, Bumerli is forced to flee a Bulgarian patrol and to save himself he climbs into Nadina's boudoir. He captivates the three women of the family by his suave manner and quick wit. At first his affair with Nadina is a mere flirtation carried on to save his life. Later, Bumerli falls genuinly in love with Nadina. She is engaged to Alexius, but she switches her affections to the lieutenant.

Musical background for the operetta will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and by the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor, W-G-N chief of production, will produce the program.

An outstanding dramatic cast will portray the speaking rôles. Much of the story will be told by narration so that as much music as possible will be heard during the program.

FUTURE CITIZENS SHOW OPENING IS NEXT SUNDAY

The first program of the fourth series of "Citizens of Tomorrow" will be aired from 1 to 1:30 p. m. next Sunday, Oct. 11, on W-G-N. The entertainment, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will feature high schools of Chicago and nearby Chicago. Philip Maxwell of The Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies, will have an added interest in the program this season, as his own daughter, Barbara, 14 years old, has just entered Evanston Township High school.

Kenneth MacGregor, production manager of W-G-N, has assigned Holland Engle to be announcer. It will be produced by Morrison Wood, who had charge of the entertainment last spring. Collaborating on the script will be Carlyle Stevens and Don Brinkley. Harold Turner will be the pianist.

BECKER PLAN TO SAVE MEAT TOPIC OF REVIEW STAND

The plan for meat conservation, first advanced by Bob Becker on his "Sportsman's Spotlight" program on W-G-N, will be a topic of discussion on the Northwestern University Reviewing Stand over W-G-N and the Mutual network from 10 to 10:30 a. m. today.

Already indorsed by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, the plan is directed to the nation's sportsmen who can harvest 435,000,000 pounds of fish and wild life during the coming hunting season as substitutes for beef and pork. Becker has asked all sportsmen to take a pledge that they will utilize all game and fish that they harvest so that millions of pounds of meat can be released for army use and to fill our lend-lease quota without affecting our national consumption.

The subject will be discussed by a panel of five: Charles R. Rice, president of the National Live Stock exchange; Dr. Ira Gabrielson, chief of the Fish and Wild Life division of the United States department of interior; Livingston Osborne, director of conservation for Illinois; Delbert Duncan, professor of marketing at Northwestern and an OPA consultant; and Becker, outdoor editor of THE TRIBUNE. James H. McBurney, Northwestern radio director, will act as moderator for the program.

FIRST NIGHTER PLAYS MOVE TO 5 P. M. ON W-G-N

An original play, "Dead Man's Shoes," will be presented on the First Nighter program from 5 to 5:30 p. m. today on W-G-N and the Mutual network. Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne will co-star in the presentation from the "Little Theater Off Times Square."

For the last month the series has been aired in coöperation with the Office of War Information and heard from 7 to 7:30, but with a sponsor taking over the show the time has been changed to 5 to 5:30 p. m. Musical background for the show will be supplied by Eric Sagerquist and the orchestra.

IDLE VOLLEYBALL COURT IS MUTE EVIDENCE OF WAR

This is one of a series of stories on the war's effects on the city's charitable institutions.

A volleyball court overgrown with grass is a symbol of war to the Burnside settlement, 1122 East 90th street. Last year the court, used principally by members of the boy's club of the settlement, was dusty from play. This year almost all the 50 members of the club are in military service.

The club was made up of men 18 to 25 years old. All officers of the organization are now in the army. Joseph Jakubas, the president, is in training at Fort Edwards, Massachusetts. Philip Pudik, the secretary, is at Camp Elliot, California. The treasurer, Mark Poya, is at Fort Knox, Kentucky. Members who are with the military forces abroad include Frank Griga, a private in Australia. Joseph Esposita is with the army in Hawaii.

Others Face Call Soon.

Almost all the remaining members of the club expect to be called to service soon. Those in the services are kept informed of happenings in the community by a news letter distributed by Miss Amina Eveline Smith, resident of the settlement. The boys' club was one of the principal activities offered to that age group. Activities and forms of help are available for every member of the family, from 1 year old up.

The volleyball court, beside the two story frame dwelling which serves as the headquarters of the settlement, is the only one of its facilities not now in constant use. The settlement serves approximately 1,000 families to some degree. It accomplishes this feat with a budget of close to $5,000. A new playground, in the same block as the settlement, was dedicated recently. A playground for children is beside the house and it is equipped with swings, slides, and a sandbox.

Serve 21 Nationalities.

The settlement serves 21 nationalities. Hungarians, Ukranians, and Italians predominate. One of the phases of the program for adults is the citizenship classes in which about 100 are enrolled. It meets three times a week. This part of their work has increased within the last year. A citizenship club, made up of former members of the classes, has been formed.

There is a young married women's club of 18 members. Many in the community are interested in dramatics and use the assembly room of the settlement. This room also serves for games and dances. There is a gymnasium for various sports.

Founded by Minister.

The settlement began life as a "porch club" formed in 1912 by a retired Methodist minister, the Rev. Joshua Smith. After retiring from the 47th Street Methodist church he took up residence at the present headquarters of the settlement. The porch club grew to an activity room in the basement. By the time it was incorporated as a settlement in 1918 it had developed into a full fledged social agency.

Miss Smith, daughter of the founder, gave up a career in music to carry on the work of the settlement. She directed the organization after her father died in 1927 at the age of 82. One of the highlights of the week's activities, which was started by the Rev. Mr. Smith and still carried out, is the Sunday afternoon "friendly." This is a meeting of the young people of the community on a nonsectarian basis.

War Eases Unemployment.

The increase of jobs caused by the war has eased one of the problems which faced many families in the community. During the depression many of the older members of the family lost their jobs and were dependent on their children, creating many domestic difficulties.

The staff of the settlement, in addition to Miss Smith, includes Mrs. Ella Barkley, the matron, and John A. Kick, who conducts the recreation program. There also is a WPA teacher provided for classes by the board of education.

The settlement property is given rent free by Miss Smith. She expressed a hope that an expansion program could soon be started. The settlement is governed by a board of trustees, of which Miss Smith is president. Members of the board are: G. F. Swift, Mrs. May Wells Noyes, Fred A. Poor, Robert Preece, Monroe E. Walter, the Rev. John Paul Stafford, Miss Kathryn Slean, Catrines DeHaan, J. Verne Schwartz, Mrs. Abraham Bowers, and Walter K. Christie.

GUILD RESUMES RECORDED MUSIC PROGRAM SERIES

Members Meet Weekly in Woodlawn.

A group of 20 south side music lovers, organized as the Allied Arts guild, each week brings programs of recorded classical music to residents of the Woodlawn community at the Woodlawn regional library. The guild opened its third season at the library last night with a commentary on classical music by Wilbur Casey, assistant guild music director, in addition to the recorded program.

The programs are given at Woodlawn library auditorium each Saturday evening at 8:15 o'clock. The members provide the recordings and playing equipment. They have a collective library of approximately 3,000 recordings and in the concerts they use turntable record players, similar to the equipment used in a radio broadcasting studio, which makes for a minimum of delay in changing the recordings.

Opera Next Saturday.

Next Saturday the program will consist of recordings of opera, with symphony the following Saturday evening and chamber music the week after. The final week of the month is devoted to allied arts. This program will include recordings, a book review, and motion pictures.

The group will observe its sixth birthday in December. It was organized under the supervision of Edward Elsen, a traffic engineer now with the war department, with two aims: to further the interests of good music and to provide a program to afford the average working person the opportunity to hear good music at a minimum eost. The guild is a nonprofit organization and is composed of music lovers and amateur musicians.

Drop Opera Sets.

At first the guild gave concerts in the homes of members. An additional part of the program, now discarded until after the war, was miniature opera. A member, Hal Christian, constructed a small stage with figurines to act out the opera. Recordings gave the background of music and singing.

After the Woodlawn library concerts proved a success concerts were given at the main downtown library. The second season at the main library opened yesterday. The program here is approximately the same as at the Woodlawn library with the exception of the allied arts program. This program at the main library will consist of recorded plays and poetry in addition to the music.

An estimated 10,000 persons, according to Elsen and library officials, heard the concerts last year.

Elsen, who is director of the guild, was assisted in its organization by Christian and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Muenzer, who now are in Cleveland, O. Other officers are: Thelma Gerhardt, secretary; Virla Burge, treasurer; Evelyn Rifas, confidential files; Amy Geist, historian; Eric Benson, membership director; Ruth Behrens, public relations, and Theodore and Eileen Popielak, social chairmen.

Alex Park, executive secretary of the Monument Builders of America, a resident of the block, will speak. Music will be provided by a quartet from the Eventide Singers. Men from the block in service are: Eugene H. Ecklund, Edward L. Ecklund, Edwin C. Erickson, John H. Larson, Louis S. Peterson, and Otto F. Sanbo. M. C. Storms is block captain.

MEET YOUR NAVY! GREAT LAKES BID IS WORTH TAKING

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Rita Ascot.
Chief "Pretty" Officer.

Meet Your Navy! That's the invitation the Great Lakes Naval Training station extends to the nation with its all-sailor radio show by that name, presented every Friday evening. It's a bid well worth accepting for every show from Great Lakes is great entertainment, reflecting the talent, the enthusiasm, and the fighting spirit of the bluejackets.

When you Meet Your Navy in this fashion you get a glimpse of the human and personal side of the navy—a half hour of stirring music and salty laughter.

Great Lakes has some of the finest musical talent in the country. Bandmaster Frank R. Mattlach gets those thrilling airs out of his band in part because the personnel includes men from many of the top orchestras and bands in the country.

A New Chorus Monthly.

Then there's the mighty chorus, trained and directed by Chaplain Hjalmar Hansen. Chaplain Hansen knows his stuff. He has to. Every month or so he loses his whole choir and has to develop a brand new one out of the ranks of recruits. When we visited the broadcast the other evening Chaplain Hansen was breaking in a group that had not as yet received their full issue or had their hair cut. But in a half hour's drill before the broadcast they were singing "Anchors Aweigh," "Here Comes the Navy," and "Marching Along Together" like veterans.

Dynamic Eddie Peabody, the lieutenant commander who is in charge of music and entertainment at Great Lakes, not only organizes the whole program, but finds time to entertain the men—and the nation—with his banjo wizardry.

Then there's the Rhythm orchestra, which gives out swing in the authentic manner.

But much of the slickest entertainment comes from individual bluejackets themselves. Men with talent make themselves known to Producer Al Boyd and his assistants, who conduct auditions a week in advance.

The night we visited the show Billy Evenson, who used to work on Harold Teen and Citizens of Tomorrow on W-G-N as a civilian, created a laugh riot with a monolog of light satire on navy life he wrote as well as delivered. Bob Hope and Jack Benny never drew better applause from a service man audience than Billy.

Last Friday the show was enlivened by the singing of patriotic songs by Robert Morton of Berwyn, who appeared in the movie, "A Gay Señorita," starring Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire. Morton sang with Xavier Cugat's orchestra.

She's Chief "Pretty" Officer.

The show is the pride of Great Lakes. Adm. John Downes, commandant, has often spoken on the show and it is beloved by the men.

Actress Rita Ascot writes the scripts and sometimes appears on the show reading letters from home. Because of her contributions she has been designated Chief Pretty Officer of the post. Jack Stilwill is the narnator.

And there are many others that contribute to making this navy show the success it is. But it's impossible to capture the flavor of the show with words. You need to listen—9 p. m. Friday on WLS and the Blue network.

St. Felicitas' Mothers.

St. Felicitas Mothers' club will hold its first card party of the fall season at 8 o'clock Thursday evening in the school auditorium, 83d place and Blackstone avenue.

Block Has Raid Shelter

Get in the SCRAP

Residents of the block bounded by 84th and 85th streets, Euclid and Bennett avenues, have constructed an air raid shelter in the basement of the building at 8445 Bennett avenue. In addition it serves as a meeting place for the block organization. Left to right, in the front row, are: Tommy Gutekanst, assistant manager; Neal G. Fogg of the auxiliary police; C. A. Williams, block lieutenant; John J. Rewers, block captain; Miss Shirley Zeh, chief messenger, and Mrs. C. A. Williams, conservation warden.

600 Students Enroll to Set New Record.

Five south side students recently were awarded scholarships at the Armour college of engineering at the Illinois Institute of Technology. They are part of a record student body at the institute which last week began its third session. More than 600 students have enrolled, compared with the 370 which enrolled for the first semester in 1941.

The scholarship winners are: William R. Beck, 11350 Harvard avenue; Elmer A. Carlson, 8117 Harvard avenue; David Green, 5405 Woodlawn avenue; John Francis Reed, 5838 Union avenue, and Walter F. Pruter, 10515 Church street. Beck, Carlson, and Pruter are freshmen, while Green and Reed are sophomores. All have excellent scholastic records, upon which the awards were based.

Win Eckhart Awards.

Beck and Green hold Eckhart scholarships, established by the late B. A. Eckhart, founder of the B. A. Eckhart Milling company and onetime vice president of Lewis institute, which was merged with Armour to form the Illinois Institute of Technology. Beck was graduated from Fenger High school, and Green attended high school in Des Moines, Ia.

Carlson was awarded a Laverne Noyes scholarship, one of a large group of such awards distributed annually among students in several middle western schools under the will of the late Laverne Noyes. They are available to veterans of World War I. or their descendants. Carlson attended Tilden Technical High school.

Belden Scholarship New.

Pruter is the recipient of the Isadora S. Prenner scholarship, which was created in 1934 and is awarded by the president of the institute. One of the Joseph C. Belden scholarships, created by a trust fund established by the Belden Manufacturing company, went to Reed, who attended Leo High school. This scholarship, founded in September, honors Joseph C. Belden, founder of the manufacturing company.

OCD BLOCK TO HAVE ITS OWN NEWSPAPER TO CO-ORDINATE WORK

A new south side publication recently hit the streets. It is Our Block Siren, distributed to the homes of the block bounded by 70th street and 70th place, Oglesby and Crandon avenues, and is published by the civilian defense organization of the block. Its editorial policy is "to promote the interests of civilian defense."

The opening editorial commented: "We pride ourselves in being city folks, but we are all country at heart. We like to keep to ourselves but we don't deny the pleasure of saying 'good morning' to our neighbor, and knowing that if we need him he'd help. Our Block Siren will help you to know your neighbors and will attempt to coördinate all our efforts. It's your paper and it's going to talk about you—not in a prying way—but in a friendly back fence way that will knit us into one solid group of Chicago families who are interested in each other's welfare and safety."

DEMOCRACY FOES TO BE TOPIC OF B'NAI B'RITH UNIT

Richard E. Gutstadt, director of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation league, will discuss "Democracy's Foes—Foreign and Native," at the meeting of the Sinai seniors of the Chicago Sinai congregation this evening at the Windermere West hotel. An added feature will be the Sinai seniors "brain busters," a quiz program conducted by Ray Epstein, member of the group. A social hour with dancing will follow. Richard I. Lowenstein is president and Lee J. Loventhal II., is program chairman.

Women Voters League.

Members of the South Shore League of Women Voters will have their annual membership tea at 1 o'clock Friday at the Bryn Mawr Community church, 7000 Jeffery avenue. Mrs. Bradford L. Patton will speak. Mrs. Pauline Carleton, harpist, and Miss Thurston Heath, pianist, will play.

DARE HER TO ASK MAYOR FOR $24—SHE DOES, HE PAYS

A dare recently gave the final push to the drive of the Grand Crossing Red Cross unit to buy a $1,500 ambulance for emergency use. The final $24.25 came from Mayor Kelly after Mrs. Kitty Davidson, 7656 Ingleside avenue, solicited his support. She reported that a check of their funds found they lacked only $24.25. She said she told her friends that "Mayor Kelly was the one person in Chicago I hadn't asked for a contribution and they dared me to see him. I really just wanted to show them I would dare to ask the mayor to help, and would have been pleased with the usual dollar donation."

St. Philip Neri K. of C. Plan Service Flag Dedication

A service flag honoring the 16 members of the St. Philip Neri council, Knights of Columbus, who are in military service, will be dedicated Tuesday evening at 9 o'clock at the Caravel club, 7515 Yates avenue. The council will be assisted by the band of the South Shore American Legion post and the color guard of Progress post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Others who will participate include the Rev. P. A. Bird, chaplain, and James Lynch, singer. John E. Miner is chairman of the meeting.

EVEN WITHOUT UNIFORMS THEY FLOCK TO ROTC

Enrollment of 11,039 Is Most Since 1920.

BY JOSEPH GREEN.

More than 400 Chicago high school boys are so anxious to get into the Reserve Officers Training corps this fall they have signed up for study and drill despite no uniforms being available for them.

"We would prefer that they have uniforms," Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics and ROTC head, declared. "But the demand has been so great we have lowered uniform restrictions in some cases." The ROTC roll is full now, he said.

Enrollment Is Voluntary.

These nonuniform boys are in 27 high schools, where the entire issue of 8,035 uniforms was snapped up almost as soon as school opened this fall. In all, the ROTC has 11,039 cadets, greatest count since 1919 and 1920, just after World War I., which brought about organization of the public school units in 1918. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE was chiefly responsible for their inception.

Military spirit engendered by World War I. and the fact that the training was compulsory swelled enrollment in 1919 and 1920 to 14,500. This year the surge is entirely voluntary, perhaps engendered by Pearl Harbor of World War II.

Lane Tech Has 1,326.

The more than 400 patriotic boys who are waiting for uniforms—if they become available—are sophomores, juniors and seniors. Freshmen cadets, not eligible for uniforms until their second year, account for about 2,500 of the 3,004 nonuniformed cadets. In uniform are 8,035 cadets.

This 11,039 enrollment tops that of last fall by 445, according to figures released by Col. Morrison. It is 1,288 greater than the 9,751 enrollment of two years ago.

Enrollment also is up at St. Mel's parochial school, only Roman Catholic school in the city with an ROTC unit. It had 840 cadets last fall and has 1,009 this fall. This gives total cadet enrollment in the city of 12,048.

Lane Technical High school again leads the city with 1,326 ROTC members. Crane follows with 586, and others with more than 500 are Lake View with 525; Austin, 517, and Senn, 512.

Following are cadet enrollments for each school, with enrollment for last fall compared with that for this fall:

TECH INSTITUTE TEACHER WRITES WAR WORK BOOK

An Illinois Institute of Technology war training instructor recently celebrated his entrance in the navy with the publication of a wartime text book he had written while at the institute. The instructor is Leno C. Michelon, 7427 South Shore drive, inspector in ordnance inspection at the institute for the last year and a half. He was recently commissioned an ensign in the navy. His book, published by Harpers, is titled "Industrial Inspection Methods." It is the first text to be written by a war training faculty member. Ensign Michelon was among the group of ordnance inspection instructors who were training inspectors before defense authorities began to study the need for added personnel.

Chicago Foursome Keeps 'Em Flying

A last minute tune-up for an army air forces training plane is applied at Kelly field, Texas, by these four men from Chicago, who are in a branch of the service that is sometimes called the right arm of the air force. Left to right are Staff Sergt. Charles W. Moss, Pvt. E. R. Christopherson, Pvt. Matthew Block, and Staff Sergt. Arthur F. Mied. Moss is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Moss, 7049 Indiana avenue; Christopherson is the son of Mrs. Karen Christopherson, 1522 North Spaulding avenue; Block is the son of Herman Block, 7242 Bennett avenue, and Mied is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mied, 4355 Hirsch street. The army needs many more men like these, it was announced last week.

Will Have No Drill in Special Service.

Help wreck the axis with a wrench was the substance of a plea from the 6th service command last week. It stressed immediate and acute need for men with mechanical ability to volunteer for the army air forces, the signal corps, and the ordnance department.

The army has a gilt edged proposition, army spokesmen said, for any man who has worked as an auto mechanic, gunsmith, electrician, radio repair man, filling station attendant, in plumbing work, at machine trades, or in any other work where ability with his hands was an asset. Age limits are 18 to 44, but the air forces are accepting men as old as 50, it was reported.

Pay Up to $138.

The proposition provides benefits as follows:

1. A man who joins this service has the same status as any other army volunteer. He begins as a private, but can look forward to rapid advancement to noncommissioned grades, with pay as high as $138 a month, plus rates, quarters, and family allowance.

2. He continues in the army to do the same sort of work he has been doing in private life. He will not drill.

3. He will be accepted if he passes oral examination as to experience and ability at mechanical trades and minimum physical tests. The average mechanic will have little difficulty passing, it was said.

4. He will be at work within a few days after he is accepted. From Chicago he will be sent to a regular army induction camp, from where he will be assigned to a flying field or other station.

Few Moves Assured.

5. He has reasonable assurance that he will not be shifted from camp to camp. He will simply have a job, but it will be at an army center.

6. In the air service as well as signal corps and ordnance, he will be paid while he is trained for work which should be worth thousands of dollars to him after the war. Airplane mechanics will be in demand after the war, it is commonly predicted.

7. He will be serving his country as surely as do the men on the front lines and in the bombers.

The 6th service command is enlisting men from Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin for these vital jobs. Specialists in mechanical trades have been brought to the Chicago recruiting office to explain to applicants the qualifications, duties, and future in these jobs.

What They Need.

TAKE GOOD CARE OF APPLIANCES—NEW ONES SCARCE

Hints Given to Prolong Use for Duration.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to shop carefully for household appliances that are still available for many of our best domestic "helpers" are made of critical materials that have been drafted for our war production.

Now is also the time to keep our household appliances in tiptop shape so that they will function and stay "on the job" for the duration; insurance against a day when we may be told that "there isn't any more."

Our family vacuum cleaner will work longer and give us better service if we keep it well lubricated, empty its bag after each cleaning, keep the nozzle and brush well adjusted, and avoid running over pins and metal objects.

Our electric fans, before storing away this fall, should be oiled and cleaned and wrapped in paper. And during seasons of use, they need occasional lubrication and oiling.

Keep Heating Pads Flat.

Our heating pads should be kept flat when not in use. When in use they should not be creased or immersed in water or have any pin thrust into them.

Our refrigerator should be checked occasionally by an expert to see that its mechanism is performing properly. It should be defrosted according to manufacturer's instructions and if one has lost the instructions on the general care of the refrigerator it would be well to get another copy.

Tips on Care of Washer.

Our washers should never be overloaded, dirty suds should never be left in them, and after using a washer it should be drained thoroly. Wringer rolls should be rinsed and wiped dry and connecting cord should be wiped dry.

Our ironers should be kept covered when not in use and if an ironer is kept in a cold room in winter it should be taken into a warm room for at least an hour before using.

Our electric fuses protect any electrical equipment that we have and if they give evidence of too frequent burning out, a reliable electrician should be consulted. Every care should be taken not to overload a circuit or to use wiring and cords that have become defective.

Our toasters and grills, our mixers and coffee makers and waffle bakers deserve redoubled care these days since the service they will render depends on proper care and use.

Medical Society Aids.

The South Chicago branch of the women's auxiliary to the Chicago Medical society will meet tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Patrick H. McNulty, 7159 Luella avenue.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Oct. 5

The best way to keep hardy chrysanthemums over winter is to heel them in in the coldframe and utilize the single shoots for planting. Do not transplant in fall unless the plants are well protected. Fine effects can be obtained by careful selection of colors.

Never use wet soil when potting plants and never use dry soil. If it is too wet mix dry soil with it until it is of the proper consistency; if it is too dry sprinkle it and work it over with a spade, trowel, or hands until it is crumbly and moist.

Plant bulbs for indoor use, water and cover with soil and straw or similar material. If a cool cellar is available and dark simply place the pots on the floor or shelf but watch that they do not dry out.

Tuesday, Oct. 6

Pot paperwhite narcissi for Thanksgiving bloom. The amaryillis should enter a period of rest from now until spring. Simply withhold water and when the leaves turn yellow and die down place pot and bulb in the basement until spring or when it becomes active, then bring it to the window.

Wednesday, Oct. 7

Planting deciduous shrubs [those that drop their foliage in fall] with evergreens forms a pleasing contrast, and gives variety. Evergreens are for warm winter effects, but when planted under certain conditions they may become dull and uninteresting. Use shrubs of fine texture and small leaves, such as box barberry, pointella, hypericum.

Under certain conditions the red-barked dogwood is brilliant when used with evergreens. A choice semi-evergreen shrub for a sheltered spot with evergreens is berberia juliance. Foundation planting is one of the most important uses to which evergreens are put and for this purpose only low growing kinds should be used.

Thursday, Oct. 8

Protect roses by hilling up soil around them. Simply draw the soil as high as possible from between the plants and later cover the area with straw and strawy manure. The tops will stick out above the plants, but they will need pruning in spring; they serve to hold the mulch in place.

Finish planting narcissi bulbs. Tulips now can be planted. Try a few tulip species in the rockery. If an even growth is desired, excavate the bed to a depth of eight inches and place the bulbs in position by hand. Cover gain with soil.

Friday, Oct. 9

It is a fine time to cut out deadwood from shrubs. Tender water lilies can be easily carried thru the winter when allowed to remain in their containers and placed in a basement. Cut back the leaves, place on the floor and examine them occasionally that they do not become so dried out they shrivel up and are seriously injured. To prevent this simply water the soil but not sufficiently to cause reawak-

Saturday, Oct. 10

Glass gardens offer the person who lacks outdoor facilities for a garden an opportunity to work out a most interesting minature garden. Select the container and place a layer of coarse sand or gravel over the bottom. Over it place a layer of half sand and peat, or leafmold and rich garden loam. The soil buildup can be arranged in the shape desired by the builder.

RALLY TO SPUR SCRAP SALVAGE DRIVE

G.O.P. CONGRESS THE SPARK TO SET OFF VICTORY

Bushey Cites Need of Wise Managing.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Republican victory at the polls Nov. 3 will end the New Deal's concealment of its war mismanagement and the start of a wave of determination that will sweep the nation to victory, Fred E. Busbey, G. O. P. nominee for representative from the 3d congressional district, forecast last week.

Speaking before the 17th ward regular Republican organization on Tuesday, Busbey declared that, a strong two-party system is always desirable, but particularly necessary in a great national emergency.

"Patriotic opposition and constructive criticism in time of war, by citizens whose patriotism and desire to win are unquestioned, are highly to be desired," Busbey declared.

Shows Up Incompetents.

"Such patriotic opposition brings to light existing weaknesses, inefficiency and unpatriotic motives. It helps the nation to replace incompetent public servants with men of known ability. It helps to save the lives of thousands of men in our armed forces, and to conserve and put to efficient use our enormous national resources. It will shorten the war.

"The record of the party now in power does not merit unquestioned confidence nor the delegation of unlimited power. Our losses in the war up to now merely reveal the weakness of the New Deal program when subjected to the severe test of battle.

"Before the people can be fully informed regarding the bungling, inefficiency and politics being played in our defense program, and take steps to correct them, it is ncessary to sweep out the rubber stamp satellites of the New Deal by electing Republican congressmen who will break thru the censorship that has been set up to cover mistakes."

10 Years of Experiment.

Busbey said the last ten years of national government have been an almost unbroken succession of wasteful experimenting, mistakes, unending deficits, mounting taxes, failure to solve the farm problem or cure the depression, lack of foresight and of firmness and decision in handling war problems.

These give evidence of the administration's failure, Busbey said. Its objectives have been revealed by the constant undermining of private initiative, the drift toward socialism and increasing regimentation of life.

Republican leadership seeks to cure our national ills, not by taking away the people's freedom, but by the use of tested methods to stimulate free enterprise and the American genius which has solved freemen's problems in the past, Busbey said.

Sees Need of Criticism.

A plea for national unity as distinguished from political unity was made by Thomas J. Downs, the G. O. P. nominee from the 2d congressional district. He spoke at a meeting of the 9th ward regular Republican organization.

"We must have national unity to win this war," Downs said. "National unity is solidity, loyalty to the common state and for the common welfare, to the country and to the flag which belongs to all of us alike.

"But we cannot have political unity if we are to win the war and the peace. Political unity is unity under a single political party. Political unity is abolition of the two-party system and the erection of the one-party system.

"When political unity enters the door human liberties go out the window. The free man disappears. Political unity means that all opposition, all criticism dies, and a one-party system arises, a system of tyranny upon which there is no check or brake.

Reason for War.

"The world would be at peace today were it not for political unity. It is political unity that has plunged the world into war. It is those nations which succumbed to political unity which have loosed madness and destruction and death upon the world, which have turned men into beasts, and which must be destroyed if we are to be secure and have confidence in the goodness of the days to come."

"Early and complete victory can be achieved only by putting patriotism above patronage," Downs said. "Politics in our national war effort has been adjourned by the Republican party, but the moratorium on partisanship should likewise apply to the New Deal party."

The steadily growing camp of former State Sen. William E. King, G. O. P. nominee for congressman from the preponderantly colored 1st district, was joined last week by Roscoe Conkling Simmons, widely known colored orator and a writer for the Chicago Defender, Chicago's foremost Negro newspaper.

Cites Brooks' Work.

Simmons said two factors have made it virtually certain that the district will emerge from the November balloting with a G. O. P. majority approaching those before the New Deal landslides.

One, Simmons said, is "the triumph of Sen. Wayland Brooks over southern Democrats in the senate in his one man war against the poll tax."

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Two southwest sailor were chosen as honor men from a class of 470 at recent graduation exercises of the hospital corps school at the naval hospital at Great Lakes. They were William Joseph Glab, 24, 5158 South Racine avenue, and Gilber Angus McKay Jr., 27, 5924 Emerald avenue. Glab and McKay completed the six week preliminary training course with a grade of 96.6 per cent. Their graduation ended a course of instruction which included the study of anatomy, physiology, hygiene and sanitation, first aid, weights and measures. The graduates will continue their training at naval hospitals before being sent to duty at sea or to other shore stations.

Cadet Dodge has been assigned to the field for primary flight training. Another south west soldier to arrive with him was Francis J. Pitelka, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. At Greensboro, N. C., Staff Sergt. Louis L. Barany, son of Mrs. Lena Barany, 5225 South Princeton avenue, was advanced to technical sergeant in the headquarters squadron at the army air force's technical training command. Until he entered the service in August, 1941, Barany was employed by the Pennsylvania railroad.

Howard R. Osman, 8336 Peoria street, was graduated from the officer candidate school at Forth Washington, Maryland, and commissioned a second lieutenant in the army. The adjutant general's school at Fort Washington is the first to have been established by the war department for the purpose of training administrators for the army. Osman specialized in the field of army administration.

The southwest side recently contributed seven men to the navy for aviation cadet training. Ed has been in the army since April 2, 1941. He's 23 years old and before his induction was employed by the Rock Island railroad.

Beverly Hills Children's Theater to Open 10th Season on Saturday

When Jack climbed the beanstalk to the giant's land his reception was something like this. Joan Mason is portraying Jack and Lorren Brown the giant. The key in the giant's hand unlocks the safe to his riches and, like the fairy tale from which this is adopted, Jack gets it and the money, too, before he scrambles down the beanstalk to safety. The play will be given Saturday by the Beverly Hills Junior Woman's club at the Ridge Park fieldhouse, 96th street and Longwood drive. The enactment will start the club's 10th children's theater season.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

The beanstalk and the story about it sprung from the handful of seeds the stranger gave to Jack. Mrs. Lewis Hill depicts the stranger. Joan Mason is on the receiving end.

Eight at Home Cheer DePeder Fighting Trio

There is only one member of the DePeder family in the Armour elementary school this year. He is Francis, and he's 13 and in the eighth grade. He's also the 11th member of his family to attend the school. Three of his brothers are in the armed forces.

The oldest, Nick, 31, is at Camp Shelby, Mississippi. He has been in the army five months, and was home recently on furlough. He says the southern soldiers and the northern soldiers amuse themselves by comparing notes on the Civil war.

Air Cadet and Seaman.

Angelo, 26, is an air cadet at Kelly field, Texas. George, 21, is in the navy, stationed at Great Lakes. Then there are Edward, 28 and married; Rosie, 27; Pauline, 21; Marie, 19; Martin, 18; Peter, 16, and Joseph, 14. They are the sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo DePeder, 554 West 33d street, Bridgeport residents of 39 years' standing. Twenty years of that period were spent at 3257 South Emerald avenue. Mr. DePeder is in the coal cartage business.

When the girls finished Armour, they attended Kelly High. The boys are all alumni of Tilden, with the exception of Martin, Peter, and Joseph who are students there now.

They Miss Her Bread.

Mrs. DePeder says the family seems so small now that the three boys have gone to war. It has cut down a lot on her cooking activity, especially the bread making, altho she still bakes every day. Frank and Joseph spent the summer working on a farm. They picked berries and helped with the crops and had a fine time.

They're members of the Valentine Boys' club, and one summer when they went to the boys' club camp they wrote home to Mrs. DePeder for bread. They liked the food at camp, but they missed her bread. She made a couple of loaves and sent it down to them. When they returned, they made one comment: "There wasn't enough."

The Leo Mothers' club annual day of recollection will be held Wednesday at the Cenacle, 513 Fullerton parkway. The Rev. Walter Croarkin will be retreat master and Mrs. Harry Trainor, 7935 Bishop street, is chairman.

The giant, Lorren Brown, likes to eat, but he's more interested in the bags of money his henchmen have brought in. The henchmen are Mrs. George Mason and Mrs. Ivan Haag. The cook is portrayed by Mrs. P. J. Werner. That's Joan Mason crouched under the table.

Mary Ann Werner came along to watch her mother, Mrs. P. J. Werner, rehearse, and Lorren Brown tries to show her that he's really not as tough as he looks.

4 Men Collect Scrap 14 Times Their Weight

A four man 715 pound salvage committee collected 10,000 pounds of scrap from one block in Brighton Park during a recent six day period. The committee was headed by Michael Dudeck, 4132 South Mozart avenue, 185 pounds, a coal yard owner. Working with him were Ray Kiedro, 4129 Archer avenue, 180 pounds, hardware dealer and block captain; Bruno Shukis, 4128 South Francisco avenue, 170 pounds, a building contractor, and William Davis, 4124 South Mozart avenue, 180 pounds, a painting contractor. They said it was good exercise.

They worked the block bounded by Archer avenue on the north, Francisco avenue on the west, Mozart street on the east, and 42d street on the south. The roundup was made by a house to house canvass. The yield, Dudeck said, included everything.

Steel Safe Goes Along.

There was a 630 pound steel safe contributed by Shukis. The committee hauled it out of Shukis' basement and deposited it at the salvage depot, Dudeck's coal yard. It had been idle in Shukis' basement since a couple of safe crackers blew the combination off some time ago. Dudeck contributed a 500 pound Dodge motor which had outlived its usefulness on one of his coal trucks. Mrs. J. J. Krickbaum, 4158 South Mozart street, had an extra radiator that she contributed to the drive. It weighed 300 pounds.

Fifty-nine Families Donate.

The committee collected, too, a series of scarred pots and pans, a couple of deteriorated hot water bottles, wheelbarrows, a bird cage, wheels, bed springs, and other equipment. The block's 59 families contributed the scrap to provide the community with one of its largest donations.

Plans have been made, too, for a flag dedication next Sunday at 4121 South Francisco avenue. Tribute will be paid to the block's 12 service men.

WORLD WAR II. UNIT OF MOTHERS TO SEAT OFFICERS WEDNESDAY

Officers of Unit 1 of the Mothers of World War II. will install its officers Wednesday at Legion hall, 94th and Raymond streets, Oak Lawn. Mrs. Anna Corder will take office as president; Mrs. Alada Jaklich and Mrs. Josephine Salahar, vice presidents; Mrs. Margaret Welch, treasurer; Mrs. Viola Barr, financial secretary; Mrs. Grace Riechel, recording secretary; Mrs. Catherine Knize, sergeant at arms; Mrs. Dorothy Phelps, chaplain. Unit 2 of Hammond will act as installing officers.

Mrs. Anna Corder.

CHAIRMEN IN 20 AREAS TO DRAFT THORO CANVASS

Each Community to Have Quota.

Salvage quotas and untapped sources of scrap will be determined Tuesday evening when salvage chairmen of the 20 communities in division 3 gather for their first massmeeting. It will be held at 8 o'clock at the Chicago City National bank, 815 West 63d street. John E. Egan, 5908 South Kedzie avenue, newly appointed division chairman, will preside. Egan, a member of the Illinois Housing board, is former alderman of the 13th ward.

John E. Egan.

The collection of salvage has been in progress in all the communities. One of the division aids said that it started cautiously because workers were reluctant to begin a vigorous drive and then find themselves in the same situation as during the aluminum campaign, when piles of old pots and pans collected in haste languished in depots for weeks.

Chairmen of Drive.

The drive, now under way in full force, has netted old lamp posts, bird cages, frying pans, safes, fences, wash tubs, and other equipment.

The salvage chairmen of the 20 communities in the division are:

Mrs. Earl Duckworth, 5543 Sacramento avenue, Gage Park; Mrs. Frank Keiser, 6316 South Francisco avenue, Chicago Lawn; Vincent Daley, 5932 South Maplewood avenue, Marquette Park; H. J. Fruendt, 1649 West 51st street, Garfield Damen; R. J. Cuplis, 6540 South Marshfield avenue, Ogden Hill; John Schwartzers, 5306 Justine street, Sherman Park; Mrs. Nellie Stone, 5602 Peoria street, Laketown; W. R. Wadkins, 6831 Union avenue, Englewood; Abe Ephriam, 8038 Campbell avenue, Ashburn. The chairman in the stockyards district will be named this week, Community Commander C. R. Peterson said.

Seek Old Rails.

In division 2, which includes part of southwest Chicago, the drive has reached the census stage. W. J. McDillon, division salvage chairman, said he had reports which showed there were approximately 500 tons of metal which could be gathered from abandoned railroad lines.

This included an estimated 400 tons of metal from the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks from 83d to 91st street. Rails from one of the stretches of abandoned street car tracks would net 30 tons. This stretch is from Baltimore to Buffalo avenues on 91st street.

FOUR SOUTHWEST SIDERS END FIRST GLIDER TRAINING

Four southwest residents were among the 17 who recently completed the initial stage of their training as glider pilots under the army air force's glider program. The training, including ground school work and elementary flying, was given at the University of Chicago under the civilian pilot training program of the Civil Aeronautics administration. The men have left for air force fields to learn dead stick flying of regular planes, after which they will begin their work in gliders. The southwest siders are Stephen J. Gasperik, 9314 Cottage Grove avenue; Raymond J. Hughes, 512 West 44th street; John N. Murray, 340 Normal parkway, and Robert J. Weeden, 318 Normal parkway.

SERVICE PLAQUE TOO SMALL; NEW ONE DEDICATED

A new and larger plaque to replace the original one for service men at the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue, was dedicated last Sunday night. The original plaque carried space for 100 names. The additional men called to service from the parish resulted in the creation of the new plaque, which will provide space for 200 names. The Sunday school, of which Carl Sommer is superintendent, presented the new plaque.

WALKER BUTLER PLEDGES AID TO PAROLE REFORM

State Senate Candidate Asks New Law.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Walker Butler, Republican nominee for state senator in the 13th district, last week pledged his aid to revive the power of trial judges to fix minimum and maximum sentences for criminals.

Walker Butler.

The Illinois Supreme court recently threw out the law enacted in 1914 giving judges this power, because it also provided that the action of the judges could be modified—actually nullified—by a board of state officials. This feature was unconstitutional, the court said.

Butler said he was eager to introduce a bill embodying the provisions of the parole reform law which the Supreme court indicated are acceptable. He is running against Sen. Francis J. Loughran, Democrat, in the district made up of wards 7, 8, 9, and 10; parts of wards 6, 17, and 19; also that part of Calumet township outside of Chicago.

Fears Increased Crime.

"Unless the parole reform act is revived in its proper form, the old evils of parole with its racketeering and increased crime will be back with us," Butler said. "As senator, I would either introduce such a bill or support one aggressively if it bore the name of another senator."

In its original form the parole reform bill was introduced by Rep. Elmer J. Schnackenberg of this same legislative district, now speaker of the house.

The law was passed by the legislature in 1937 but vetoed by Gov. Horner. In 1939 it missed passage in the house by one vote, altho it was passed in the senate. To meet the objections of some opponents in 1941, Gov. Green suggested modifications which the Supreme court found unconstitutional.

Butler said that his 13 years of experience in prosecuting criminal cases probably gives him the edge in this respect over any other candidate for the Illinois legislature. He was an assistant state's attorney for seven years, handling the prosecution in many well known trials. Between 1933 and 1940 he was a special assistant attorney general for certain downstate cases, including the murder cases which resulted in the first convictions in the southern Illinois miners' war. He also was in charge of the Champaign vice grand jury in 1939 after a University of Illinois student was killed.

Experienced with Parole Board.

"My idea is to have the courts retain jurisdiction over the cases after sentencing, and to provide that the state board make recommendations concerning the length of the sentence according to the prisoner's behavior in the penitentiary."

His experience includes many sessions of the parole board, so that he feels that he knows the criminal's as well as the public's problems concerning the punishment and prevention of crime.

As background for the campaign he said he is carrying on aggressively, Butler has had 20 years of political activity in the district. He has found time to support Boy Scout activities, has been a director of Civilian International, is vice chairman of the Church League of America, and director of the training school of the Illinois state police.

"The people of this large district are entitled to a state senator who will work at the job of senator and who will earn his pay. The record of ineffectiveness of the present senator proves him unfit for reëlection.

Sen. Loughran, a brother of Mrs. Elizabeth Conkey, Democratic national committeewoman, has had the office for 12 years. His record as given by him in the Illinois Blue Book states that he is associated with the General Court Reporting Service, Inc.

Neither Sen. Loughran nor Butler had any opposition in the April primary.

Fruits of the summer's labor—Bobby Hill, age 7, of 5542 West 64th street, second grade pupil at Hale school, is loaded with carrots, beets, turnips, and other vegetables grown in the Hale school garden.

Brooks fought to passage the amendment to the soldier vote bill that exempts service men and women from the payment of poll taxes before they can vote for national officials. Eight southern states have such poll tax laws.

Simmons described the poll tax as "a device by which the Democratic party has disfranchised at least five million colored citizens and reduced them to political slavery." To these Negroes and to colored persons everywhere Brooks is a hero because he is "the first statesman in more than 60 years to force a vote on any phase of Jim Crow.

The other important factor in the coming Republican victory is the new unity of the party under the combined leadership of Bernard S. Black and Hobart E. Neff of the Business Men's committee, and of King and other colored leaders in the district.

Black is state lodging house commissioner and Neff is the G. O. P. candidate for state senator from the 1st senatorial district. Both are white men. They have attacked bipartisanship in the colored section and have provided a rallying point to which are flocking the voters who have deplored such bipartisan deals as the one which made a city hall Democrat of former Ald. William L. Dawson.

Dawson was the Republican nominee for congressman from the 1st four years ago, and is now the Democratic nominee for the same post. He was made Democratic committeeman of the 2d ward after the 1939 aldermanic election, as a reward for the work he did for the city hall machine.

Hints Given to Keep Them Going for Duration.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to shop carefully for household appliances that are still available for many of our best domestic "helpers" are made of critical materials that have been drafted for our war production.

Now is also the time to keep our household appliances in tiptop shape so that they will function and stay "on the job" for the duration; insurance against a day when we may be told that "there isn't any more."

Our family vacuum cleaner will work longer and give us better service if we keep it well lubricated, empty its bag after each cleaning, keep the nozzle and brush well adjusted, and avoid running over pins and metal objects.

Our electric fans, before storing away this fall, should be oiled and cleaned and wrapped in paper. And during seasons of use, they need occasional lubrication and oiling.

Keep Heating Pads Flat.

Our heating pads should be kept flat when not in use. When in use they should not be creased or immersed in water or have any pin thrust into them.

Our refrigerator should be checked occasionally by an expert to see that its mechanism is performing properly. It should be defrosted according to manufacturer's instructions and if one has lost the instructions on the general care of the refrigerator it would be well to get another copy.

Tips on Care of Washer.

Our washers should never be overloaded, dirty suds should never be left in them, and after using a washer it should be drained thoroly. Wringer rolls should be rinsed and wiped dry and connecting cord should be wiped dry.

Our ironers should be kept covered when not in use and if an ironer is kept in a cold room in winter it should be taken into a warm room for at least an hour before using.

Our electric fuses protect any electrical equipment that we have and if they give evidence of too frequent burning out, a reliable electrician should be consulted. Every care should be taken not to overload a circuit or to use wiring and cords that have become defective.

Our toasters and grills, our mixers and coffee makers and waffle bakers deserve redoubled care these days since the service they will render depends on proper care and use.

BISHOP WALDORF TO OPEN BAPTIST CHAPEL SERVICES

The first in a series of four Sunday evening chapel services at the Englewood Baptist church, Englewood and Stewart avenues, will be addressed tonight by Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf, resident bishop of the Methodist church in the Chicago area. The Englewood Baptist chorus choir will provide the music.

Wed in Normal Park Church

The Normal Park Presbyterian church provided the setting for the recent marriage of Miss Geraldine Jackson and Floyd E. Cooper. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Jackson, 7023 South Wabash avenue. Mr. Cooper is the son of Mrs. H. Adele Cooper of Orland Park.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Oct. 5

The best way to keep hardy chrysanthemums over winter is to heel them in in the coldframe and utilize the single shoots for planting. Do not transplant in fall unless the plants are well protected. Fine effects can be obtained by careful selection of colors.

Never use wet soil when potting plants and never use dry soil. If it is too wet mix dry soil with it until it is of the proper consistency; if it is too dry sprinkle it and work it over with a spade, trowel, or hands until it is crumbly and moist.

Tuesday, Oct. 6

Pot paperwhite narcisii for Thanksgiving bloom. The amaryillis should enter a period of rest from now until spring. Simply withhold water and when the leaves turn yellow and die down place pot and bulb in the basement until spring or when it becomes active, then bring it to the window.

Wednesday, Oct. 7

Planting deciduous shrubs [those that drop their foliage in fall] with evergreens forms a pleasing contrast, and gives variety. Evergreens are for warm winter effects, but when planted under certain conditions they may become dull and uninteresting. Use shrubs of fine texture and small leaves, such as box barberry, pointella, hypericum.

Thursday, Oct. 8

Protect roses by hilling up soil around them. Simply draw the soil as high as possible from between the plants and later cover the area with straw and strawy manure. The tops will stick out above the plants, but they will need pruning in spring; they serve to hold the mulch in place.

Friday, Oct. 9

It is a fine time to cut out deadwood from shrubs. Tender water lilies can be easily carried thru the winter when allowed to remain in their containers and placed in a basement. Cut back the leaves, place on the floor and examine them occasionally that they do not become so dried out they shrivel up and are seriously injured. To prevent this simply water the soil but not sufficiently to cause reawak-

Glass gardens offer the person who lacks outdoor facilities for a garden an opportunity to work out a most interesting minature garden. Select the container and place a layer of coarse sand or gravel over the bottom. Over it place a layer of half sand and peat, or leafmold and rich garden loam. The soil buildup can be arranged in the shape desired by the builder.

CHARLES F. M'KIM RETIRING AS HEAD OF SWIFT PLANT

Ends 44 Years with Meat Packing Concern.

Charles F. McKim, Chicago plant superintendent of Swift & Co. since 1930, will retire Saturday at the age of 65 after a lifetime spent in the cattle and meat packing business.

He was superintendent of the Fort Worth plant until 1915, when he went to South America, where he remained until 1928. There he was superintendent of plants at La Plata, Argentina; Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil; Asuncion, Paraguay, and Montevideo, Uruguay.

THEATER OF AIR STAGING STRAUS WORK SATURDAY

Feature Marion Claire, Knight on W-G-N.

Felix Knight, young American lyric tenor, will be starred with Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, next Saturday, when Oscar Straus' operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," is presented from 8 to 9 p. m. on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

Knight, American born and American trained, has made rapid strides in the concert world. He was featured this summer on W-G-N and Mutual's "America Loves a Melody" concert series and has been guest artist on other network programs, including the Sunday afternoon symphony series and the Ford concerts.

Miss Claire will be cast in the rôle of Nadina, beautiful Bulgarian girl who is the leading character of the operetta. Knight will sing the rôle of Lieut. Bumerli, a young Swiss officer and professional soldier serving with the Serbian forces. Ray Charles will fill the third principal singing rôle as he will be cast as Alexius, a young Bulgarian hero.

The theme of the story is built around the romance of Nadina and Lieut. Bumerli. Serving with the Serbian forces, Bumerli is forced to flee a Bulgarian patrol and to save himself he climbs into Nadina's boudoir. He captivates the three women of the family by his suave manner and quick wit. At first his affair with Nadina is a mere flirtation carried on to save his life. Later, Bumerli falls genuinly in love with Nadina. She is engaged to Alexius, but she switches her affections to the lieutenant.

Musical background for the operetta will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and by the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor, W-G-N chief of production, will produce the program.

An outstanding dramatic cast will portray the speaking rôles. Much of the story will be told by narration so that as much music as possible will be heard during the program.

Football Reporter

Jack Drees reports the pro football games over WENR at 1:30 p.m. Sundays. Today he will cover the Bears' game with the Cleveland Rams.

MEET YOUR NAVY! GREAT LAKES BID IS WORTH TAKING

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Rita Ascot,
Chief "Pretty" Officer.

Meet Your Navy! That's the invitation the Great Lakes Naval Training station extends to the nation with its all-sailor radio show by that name, presented every Friday evening. It's a bid well worth accepting for every show from Great Lakes is great entertainment, reflecting the talent, the enthusiasm, and the fighting spirit of the bluejackets.

When you Meet Your Navy in this fashion you get a glimpse of the human and personal side of the navy—a half hour of stirring music and salty laughter.

Great Lakes has some of the finest musical talent in the country. Bandmaster Frank R. Mattlach gets those thrilling airs out of his band in part because the personnel includes men from many of the top orchestras and bands in the country.

A New Chorus Monthly.

Then there's the mighty chorus, trained and directed by Chaplain Hjalmar Hansen. Chaplain Hansen knows his stuff. He has to. Every month or so he loses his whole choir and has to develop a brand new one out of the ranks of recruits. When we visited the broadcast the other evening Chaplain Hansen was breaking in a group that had not as yet received their full issue or had their hair cut. But in a half hour's drill before the broadcast they were singing "Anchors Aweigh," "Here Comes the Navy," and "Marching Along Together" like veterans.

Dynamic Eddie Peabody, the lieutenant commander who is in charge of music and entertainment at Great Lakes, not only organizes the whole program, but finds time to entertain the men—and the nation—with his banjo wizardry.

Then there's the Rhythm orchestra, which gives out swing in the authentic manner.

But much of the slickest entertainment comes from individual bluejackets themselves. Men with talent make themselves known to Producer Al Boyd and his assistants, who conduct auditions a week in advance.

The night we visited the show Billy Evenson, who used to work on Harold Teen and Citizens of Tomorrow on W-G-N as a civilian, created a laugh riot with a monolog of light satire on navy life he wrote as well as delivered. Bob Hope and Jack Benny never drew better applause from a service man audience than Billy.

She's Chief "Pretty" Officer.

Last Friday the show was enlivened by the singing of patriotic songs by Robert Morton of Berwyn, who appeared in the movie, "A Gay Señorita," starring Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire. Morton sang with Xavier Cugat's orchestra.

The show is the pride of Great Lakes. Adm. John Downes, commandant, has often spoken on the show and it is beloved by the men.

Actress Rita Ascot writes the scripts and sometimes appears on the show reading letters from home. Because of her contributions she has been designated Chief Pretty Officer of the post. Jack Stilwill is the nar-

SOUTH SIDE WINS 5 SCHOLARSHIPS TO ILLINOIS TECH

600 Students Enroll to Set New Record.

Five south side students recently were awarded scholarships at the Armour college of engineering at the Illinois Institute of Technology. They are part of a record student body at the institute which last week began its third session. More than 600 students have enrolled, compared with the 370 which enrolled for the first semester in 1941.

The scholarship winners are: William R. Beck, 11350 Harvard avenue; Elmer A. Carlson, 8117 Harvard avenue; David Green, 5405 Woodlawn avenue; John Francis Reed, 5838 Union avenue, and Walter F. Pruter, 10515 Church street. Beck, Carlson, and Pruter are freshmen, while Green and Reed are sophomores. All have excellent scholastic records, upon which the awards were based.

Win Eckhart Awards.

Beck and Green hold Eckhart scholarships, established by the late B. A. Eckhart, founder of the B. A. Eckhart Milling company and onetime vice president of Lewis institute, which was merged with Armour to form the Illinois Institute of Technology. Beck was graduated from Fenger High school, and Green attended high school in Des Moines, Ia.

Carlson was awarded a Laverne Noyes scholarship, one of a large group of such awards distributed annually among students in several middle western schools under the will of the late Laverne Noyes. They are available to veterans of World War I. or their descendants.

Belden Scholarship New.

Pruter is the recipient of the Isadora S. Prenner scholarship, which was created in 1934 and is awarded by the president of the institute. One of the Joseph C. Belden scholarships, created by a trust fund established by the Belden Manufacturing company, went to Reed.

PULLMAN HOUSE RETAINS GLORY OF ITS 80 YEARS

Daughter of Builder Is Its Mistress Now.

BY JEANNE M'CARTHY.

Old timers in Pullman speak of the Ver Haar house at 11313 Parnell avenue, in the feminine. They call it she, and say, as they might of a long favored woman, that she's worn her age well. She's well over 80, and when Pullman was young and barren, she was the focal point of a sprawling farm.

Only three families, with a total of 15 children, have lived in the house during its eight decades' existence. The builder was J. C. Stegenga, an old time Pullman resident. A building contractor, he built it for E. K. Beach, a prominent Pullman lawyer of that time. Beach, his wife and four children lived there many years. Then he sold it to E. F. Braren, a real estate man, who spent nearly 20 years there. Then, his two children were grown and wanted to move to the "city," so James Ver Haar, a young employé of his firm, purchased it.

The Ver Haar family has resided there 40 years, and old J. C. Stegenga would be pleased to know that they have. For Mrs. Ver Haar is the former Nellie Stegenga, one of old J. C.'s seven children.

10 Rooms, Wide Porch, Big Lawn.

The house, built in the ornate style of the 60's, is frame, wide and spacious. It's white, and is surrounded by a large lawn. It's set back from its streamlined neighbors, and is fronted by a wide porch. The house has 10 rooms. There are four on the first floor—the kitchen, dining room, small parlor and parlor. The windows are long and narrow, and in the large parlor, a triangular bay is formed by three floor length glass panels. The entrance to the various rooms are wide and square. Fine carved grill work frames each of them.

A wide polished staircase leads the way to the second floor where five bedrooms are located. Seven brides have come down those stairs, for the Ver Haar house has had a long series of weddings. Their oldest son, John, had his bride march down them, and so did their other son, Theodore. John followed his father in death a few years ago. The Ver Haar girls, in brocade, and more recently in lace and satin, have used the staircase for an aisle. The first of these was Mrs. Nettie Le Noble, then Mrs. Bessie Le Noble, who become the brides of brothers; Mrs. Louise Mercier, Mrs. Florence Johnson, Mrs. Alice Rasmussen. Two of Mrs. Ver Haar's daughters are at home with her, Myrtle and Jean.

Mistress of House Active at 75.

Mrs. Ver Haar is 75 now, but she's well and active, and sees to duties around the house. She talks vaguely now and then of selling and moving to a smaller place, but her family knows she won't; there are too many memories imbedded in the ornate walls, the upholstered furniture, the picturesque fireplace.

She remembers cold winters before there was steam heat, when three stoves in the house had to be augmented by hot water bottles at night to keep out the chill. She remembers, too, when there was no plumbing, nor sewers, nor electric lights. The people in the block to the north of her had sewers and electricity before they arrived in her block, and that irritated her. She complained to her husband. She wanted to move unless she had them too. He went down town, and spoke to people, and came back with the assurance that they'd have the lights soon.

Chickens Given Up.

She was told that when two more houses augmented the one they inhabited in their block, sewers would be extended. They were, too. They used to keep chickens who made themselves at home on the lawn. They gave them up, tho, 15 years ago, in deference to city bred neighbors who found the early morning crow of the rooster unpleasant.

The house inside lives up to the impression its exterior creates. They both tell a tale of a comfortable past. The furniture is heavy and ornate, or spindling and fragile. It's polished to a high sheen. The fireplace is large and natural. On the walls are pictures in gilded frames of family groups, of Nettie, and Bessie, and Louise, in starched white dresses, and big wide bows that were stiffened with sugar and water. On the table, too, is the Bible. Its cover is sturdy and flexible, but its pages are well thumbed, proving that it served for more than ornament.

Big Profit on 64 Cents

Sixty-four cents worth of seed produced these vegetables in Mr. and Mrs. John Lozja's war garden at 3517 West 60th place. It also provided a surplus for canning. The pan of vegetables is being held by Mrs. Lozja while her husband adds to the collection. The onlookers are Mrs. J. H. Hegarty, war garden chairman of the Chicago Lawn community, and F. H. Halvorsen, community commander. [Chicago Park District Photo.]

NORMAN PRESENTS
Amazing New Lens!
69% HARDER than ordinary Lens Material!

This is an artist's conception of the official device for testing glass strength. From a predetermined height, steel balls of known weight are dropped right on the lenses to prove their ability to take it.

Guaranteed to meet U. S. Industrial Requirements

For years science has been seeking a glass like this. Imagine the miracle of a harder-to-break eyeglass that can NOT endanger eyes with splinters. Imagine the safety to factory workers, children—everyone. If hit hard enough to break (and that requires 69% greater force than for ordinary lens) this magic lens simply breaks into relatively harmless strips like a safety-glass auto windshield. It leaves no dangerous edges, no splinters or chips to imperil your eyes. See this startling creation of optical science at NORMAN'S.

Dr. Kernis and staff, competent optometrists of years' experience, will give you a complete eye examination without charge or obligation. See our newly installed Bausch & Lomb equipment, the finest of its kind in the country.

EVEN WITHOUT UNIFORMS THEY FLOCK TO ROTC

Enrollment of 11,039 Is Most Since 1920.

BY JOSEPH GREEN.

More than 400 Chicago high school boys are so anxious to get into the Reserve Officers Training corps this fall they have signed up for study and drill despite no uniforms being available for them.

"We would prefer that they have uniforms," Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics and ROTC head, declared. "But the demand has been so great we have lowered uniform restrictions in some cases." The ROTC roll is full now, he said.

Enrollment Is Voluntary.

These nonuniform boys are in 27 high schools, where the entire issue of 8,035 uniforms was snapped up almost as soon as school opened this fall. In all, the ROTC has 11,039 cadets, greatest count since 1919 and 1920, just after World War I., which brought about organization of the public school units in 1918. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE was chiefly responsible for their inception.

Military spirit engendered by World War I. and the fact that the training was compulsory swelled enrollment in 1919 and 1920 to 14,500. This year the surge is entirely voluntary, perhaps engendered by Pearl Harbor of World War II.

Lane Tech Has 1,326.

The more than 400 patriotic boys who are waiting for uniforms—if they become available—are sophomores, juniors and seniors. Freshmen cadets, not eligible for uniforms until their second year, account for about 2,500 of the 3,004 nonuniformed cadets. In uniform are 8,035 cadets.

This 11,039 enrollment tops that of last fall by 445, according to figures released by Col. Morrison. It is 1,288 greater than the 9,751 enrollment of two years ago.

Army Needs Come First.

A few more uniforms were issued by the war department, for use of the Chicago ROTC this fall, Col. Morrison said, but the need was far from filled—for the same reason that the rifles with which the cadets formerly drilled are no longer used. The combat forces come first.

Despite the increase the staff remains the same—40 regular army sergeants as instructors, with five division supervisors, each in charge of a group of schools.

Enrollment also is up at St. Mel's parochial school, only Roman Catholic school in the city with an ROTC unit. It had 840 cadets last fall and has 1,009 this fall. This gives total cadet enrollment in the city of 12,048.

Lane Technical High school again leads the city with 1,326 ROTC members. Crane follows with 586, and others with more than 500 are Lake View with 525; Austin, 517, and Senn, 512.

Foreman showed the greatest increase, from 186 last fall to 291 this fall, a gain of 105. Half a dozen schools showed small decreases, but at least slight gains were recorded at most schools.

Following are cadet enrollments for each school, with enrollment for last fall compared with that for this fall:

PAINT FIRM FINDS SOLUTION FOR A STEEL PROBLEM

Reclaim Thousands of 55 Gallon Drums.

When the government curtailed production of steel for container purposes, officials of the Sherwin Williams Paint company, 115th street and Cottage Grove avenue, were frankly worried. They were using tens of thousands of new steel drums monthly to ship their products. Ninety-eight per cent of these were one time shippers, delivered to their destination and forgotten.

A solution to the problem was offered by Aaron Barkman, a production engineer at the plant. He outlined and later set up a drum reclaiming department which has lengthened the life of each drum from 1 to 10 times.

Reclaim Drum in 45 Minutes.

The reclaiming department is lodged in an old building adjacent to the more modern structures of the company. It used to serve for miscellaneous purposes. Thirty men are at work in the department, and Barkman, who is now the unit's superintendent, says they reclaim a drum and have it ready for another shipment in 45 minutes.

It's done by first moving the rust from the interior and exterior. In bad cases of inside rust, this is accomplished by placing the drum on a revolving tumbler and permitting heavy chains to strike against the inside. This dislodges the rust coating. Twenty per cent of the drums require this treatment. All are placed in a rotary soaking pit, where chemicals, and steam and water remove stain, dirt and the remnants of the drum's contents. A hot air blast dries them thoroly. Most are of 55 gallon capacity.

Get Leak Test.

Before the drums are repainted and pressed into service, they are tested for leaks. The dried drum is coated with soap, and air pressure applied inside. If a leak is present, it causes a bubble to rise on the outside. Existing leaks are repaired by welding. A spray gun paint job is given, and the drum is ready for use once more.

The Sherwin Williams company used to sell its clients the drum and its contents. Now, the company retains title to the drum. Camouflage paints, aircraft finisher, and other paints and varnishes in demand by the army and civilians are shipped in the drums.

Soloist Today

Miss Betty Woodward, 8108 South Green street, will be among the soloists at a concert to be given at 3:30 o'clock today at 103d street and Longwood drive. Miss Crystal Groom will provide a series of piano selections.

Saving Steel

When the government curtailed the production of steel for container purposes, the Sherwin Williams company, 115th street and Cottage Grove avenue, developed a reclaiming process to lengthen the life of its paint drums. Bruno Modolo repaints one of the reclaimed drums, which will soon be in use again. Drums that were used only once now make as many as 10 trips.

His book, published by Harpers, is titled "Industrial Inspection Methods." It is the first text to be written by a war training faculty member. Ensign Michelon was among the group of ordnance inspection instructors who were training inspectors before defense authorities began to study the need for added personnel.

Good Jobs—Serving Their Country

Mechanics like these men from southwest Chicago area towns are badly needed in the air corps, the headquarters 6th service command announced last week in Chicago. They are dubbed plane doctors and are called the flyers' best friends and the right arm of the army air forces, also. Almost any capable mechanic can qualify as a volunteer in the army for this sort of duty. Pvt. Raymond Hall, 3609 Green street, Chicago Heights, left, and Corp. William C. Mahnke, 23 156th place, Calumet City, put finishing touches on a motor change at Randolph field, Texas.

Will Have No Drill in Special Service.

Help wreck the axis with a wrench was the substance of a plea from the 6th service command last week. It stressed immediate and acute need for men with mechanical ability to volunteer for the army air forces, the signal corps, and the ordnance department.

The army has a gilt edged proposition, army spokesmen said, for any man who has worked as an auto mechanic, gunsmith, electrician, radio repair man, filling station attendant, in plumbing work, at machine trades, or in any other work where ability with his hands was an asset. Age limits are 18 to 44, but the air forces are accepting men as old as 50, it was reported.

Pay Up to $138.

The proposition provides benefits as follows:

1. A man who joins this service has the same status as any other army volunteer. He begins as a private, but can look forward to rapid advancement to noncommissioned grades, with pay as high as $138 a month, plus rates, quarters, and family allowance.

2. He continues in the army to do the same sort of work he has been doing in private life. He will not drill.

3. He will be accepted if he passes oral examination as to experience and ability at mechanical trades and minimum physical tests. The average mechanic will have little difficulty passing, it was said.

4. He will be at work within a few days after he is accepted. From Chicago he will be sent to a regular army induction camp, from where he will be assigned to a flying field or other station.

Few Moves Assured.

5. He has reasonable assurance that he will not be shifted from camp to camp. He will simply have a job, but it will be at an army center.

6. In the air service as well as signal corps and ordnance, he will be paid while he is trained for work which should be worth thousands of dollars to him after the war. Airplane mechanics will be in demand after the war, it is commonly predicted.

7. He will be serving his country as surely as do the men on the front lines and in the bombers.

The 6th service command is enlisting men from Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin for these vital jobs. Specialists in mechanical trades have been brought to the Chicago recruiting office to explain to applicants the qualifications, duties, and future in these jobs.

What They Need.

In the air forces recruits are needed to become aircraft armorers, mechanics, welders, metal workers, radio mechanics, and operators. Technicians may be assigned also to flying duty, which brings a 50 per cent increase in their base pay.

The signal corps is enlisting specialists for telephone cable splicers and installers, radio and telegraph operators and mechanics.

Chicago applicants should report to the United States army recruiting office at 515 South Franklin street.

Wed in Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Van Camp of Fenwick, Mich., formerly of Harvey, announce the marriage of their daughter, Marguerite Murd, to William A. Adams Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Adams of 7232 Oakley avenue. The ceremony was performed at Fort Lauderville, Fla. They are at home at 5465 Everett avenue.

DARE HER TO ASK MAYOR FOR $24—SHE DOES, HE PAYS

A dare recently gave the final push to the drive of the Grand Crossing Red Cross unit to buy a $1,500 ambulance for emergency use. The final $24.25 came from Mayor Kelly after Mrs. Kitty Davidson, 7656 Ingleside avenue, solicited his support. She reported that a check of their funds found they lacked only $24.25. She said she told her friends that "Mayor Kelly was the one person in Chicago I hadn't asked for a contribution and they dared me to see him. I really just wanted to show them I would dare to ask the mayor to help, and would have been pleased with the usual dollar donation."

3 U. of C. Students Win Political Science Awards

Three Chicagoans have been awarded civil government prizes by the University of Chicago for excellence in political science studies. The first prize, $100, went to Leonard Berkovitz, 3812 Gladys avenue. Richard S. Williams, 6743 Union avenue, was awarded the $50 second prize, and Herman Schmidt, 5052 Drexel avenue, received the third prize of $25. The prizes were awarded on the basis of the showing made by the students in an examination in the social sciences survey course.

Plays in 'Opry'

Miss Marjorie White, 1716 West 103d street, is one of the Beverly Hills young women who will have parts in the service men's skit, "Open House Opry," being given at 3 o'clock today at Ridge park fieldhouse, 96th street and Longwood drive. Her mother is Mrs. Frank White, whose home has been the scene of Sunday gatherings for service men for many months.

OLD CANNON TO ROLL AGAIN TO WAR

SUBURBAN NAVY AIR VOLUNTEERS START TRAINING

Cadets Initiate Own Primary Course.

Western suburbs, working together, chalked up another mark for their war record last week, when Lieut. Comm. Carl G. Olson, senior member of the Chicago naval aviation cadet selection board, announced officially the names of 189 west suburban youths who now make up the five newly organized west suburban squadrons of naval aviation cadets.

"The western suburbs have every reason to feel proud of the remarkable record made by the large number of young men who have qualified from that territory in response to the navy's drive for aviation cadets," was the comment of Lieut. Comm. Olson. "Their total enlistments represent approximately 10 per cent of the total cadets we have enrolled in the Chicago office during the drive."

On Suburban Committee.

This drive for flying officers, which began Aug. 1 and closed Oct. 1, was conducted in the western suburbs by a World War I. naval aviators' committee. Otis Beeman, 742 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, is chairman, assisted by Sampson Rogers Jr., 735 North East avenue; N. D. Holman, 622 North Marion avenue, and C. W. Baker, 325 North Humphrey avenue, all of Oak Park; Gordon D. Shorney, 1030 Jackson avenue, River Forest, and Dr. Spencer W. Magnuson, 1011 Lake street, Oak Park.

The five west suburban squadrons are made up of young men from 31 communities of the western suburbs. They have officially adopted their own names and insignia. These are as follows: "Flying Huskies" for Oak Park and River Forest, "Flying Avengers" for Cicero, Berwyn, Lyons, and Stickney; "Flying Tornadoes" for Forest Park, Maywood, Melrose Park, Bellwood, Broadview, Hillside, Elmwood Park, River Grove, and Franklin Park; "Flying Thunderbolts" for Riverside, Brookfield, La Grange, Western Springs, and Westchester, and "White Eagles" for Hinsdale, Downers Grove, Elmhurst, Villa Park, Glen Ellyn, Wheaton, Naperville, Clarendon Hills, Roselle, and Warrenville.

Already in Training.

Insignia designs were made and contributed by J. A. Hollander, 521 Marengo avenue, Forest Park. Preliminary sketches were made by F. M. Burt, 8148 South Eberhart avenue, Chicago.

What is generally believed to be the first school of its kind in the United States started last week in the Oak Park-River Forest Township High school. All members of the west suburban squadrons who are now awaiting the call to active duty to begin training have already started training on their own volition in this school.

Thru the coöperation of High School Supt. Dr. Eugene Youngert and five high school instructors, who are donating time and effort, ground school classes are now meeting Monday and Thursday evenings. Subjects include radio signaling, international code, blinker lights, elements of aviation and aeronautics, mathematics of aviation, and physics.

Called Outstanding.

The high school teachers who make up the faculty of this V-5 preliminary training school are Frank M. Foster, 140 North East avenue; John E. Bjorlie, 806 North Harvey avenue; R. H. Gocker, 1121 North Harvey avenue; R. Emerson Park, 837 Woodbine avenue, all of Oak Park, and Max T. Hohn, 1001 Thatcher avenue, River Forest.

Commenting on the school and the recruiting results in the western sub-

A West Sider Brings Stage Fame to City

BY MAURINE MYERS.

If you're riding a loop bound Lake street "L" one of these days and the girl sitting across the aisle is as pert and saucy as any you've seen, most likely it's Maureen Cannon, ingénue lead of "Best Foot Forward," Chicago's latest musical comedy hit.

Maureen may have skyrocketed to stage prominence in the last year, but it's no suite in an expensive hotel for her. Now that her show is playing in Chicago, she's home again. Home is the Edward J. Cannon residence, 4939 Potomac avenue. She rides the L to the loop every day, so that she can slip into her costume about an hour before curtain time. Every evening the "stage door Johnnies" who meet her are her father, or her mother, or her younger brother, Edward John.

Family Life Back to Normal.

The course of the Cannon family life, disrupted for the last year while Mrs. Cannon stayed with Maureen in the east, is beginning to settle back into a more normal routine. Mr. Cannon is a conductor with the Chicago Surface Lines, working out of the North avenue car barns on the Lake street run. Edward John still goes to St. Philip High school, where he is in his third year. Mrs. Cannon still keeps the household moving. Only difference is they get to bed a little later now, Maureen sleeps a little later in the mornings, and the house seems always to be brimming over with young people.

But the Cannons, who came over from County Donegal, Ireland, when they were youngsters, are proud of their colleen. They're accustomed to upheaval—they used to trot Maureen and Edward John around to entertainments and theaters several years ago, when the youngsters were billed as the "Cannon Duo," with a singing and dancing act.

Becomes Hit of New York.

The papers were full of the news of Maureen's good luck last fall when she was auditioned by Ezra Stone for the George Abbott production. Every one in town knew about the lucky little girl, not yet graduated from Providence High school, who suddenly became the hit of New York. Few expected they would ever again see the same Maureen Cannon who played the lead in "My Maryland," the school operetta, the girl with the glamor girl bob and the skirts and sweaters.

But when Maureen came home the only thing changed about her was her haircut. She's been in the show business for a year now—and it's still all thrills for her. Maybe next year she'll be blasé and bored, but this year she's 16 and everything from the producer to the costumes to the notices in the paper makes her shiver with joy.

Learns Rhumba at Yale.

She really hadn't "started to live" until she got to New York, Maureen declares. She had never had a date and didn't know anything about ballroom dancing. "But I learned on the best floors in New York," she explained, "the Starlit roof, the Stork club, and the Rainbow room." She gets a little breathless when she tells about the night she was queen of the junior-senior prom of New York university, and the night the Yale men taught her how to rhumba.

When the show closed for a few weeks during the summer, Maureen went on a busman's holiday and did entertainments at the Stage Door canteen and for several USO centers.

Back in New York Maureen's biggest thrills came when the famous names of stage and screen came to see the show. "The word would go around backstage that Spencer Tracy or Bob Hope or Errol Flynn were out front. Then when I went on-stage I'd remember that they'd paid $4.40 just to see us instead of us paying to see them. Gosh!"

Meets Judy Garland.

Afterward the stars often came backstage to meet the show cast. "Bette Davis had on a polka dot dress and a big black hat trimmed with polka dots. And I thought I'd faint when some one called that Judy Garland had asked to meet me."

But neither the opening night in New Haven nor the first performance in New York held the terrors for her of the opening night here in Chicago. "In those other places there were only people out front—here they were my friends, and I knew they were expecting an awful lot."

Medill-Tribune Legion Post Installs Officers Saturday

Medill-Tribune post of the American Legion will hold a grand installation party at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night at the Svithiod Singing club, 624 West Wrightwood avenue. There will be a musical program, and a smorgasbord supper will be served. Members of the post are requested to contact their division or department comrades for tickets.

Elmhurst PTA to Hear FBI Agent Wednesday

R. P. Baldwin, special agent for the Chicago office of the FBI, will be the speaker at the Hawthorne school, Elmhurst, at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. The meeting is sponsored by the Elmhurst Parent-Teacher council, of which Mrs. David Van Doren is president.

Naperville Mansion Keeps Faith with Pioneer Generations of the Town

With family pride, the George Martin mansion was built at the edge of Naperville nearly 60 years ago. Today, its high ceilinged rooms are utilized for housing relics not only of the generations that lived beneath the roof, but for souvenirs of early days in the vicinity. Trees and shrubbery were planted on the 12 acre site before the house was built.

On the walls of the drawing room in what is now known as the Caroline Martin Mitchell museum are paintings of ancestors belonging to a period too far past for them to be identified. Miss Sue Du Brock, one of the girl guides at the museum, stands beside one of the six fireplaces with which the house was heated in pioneer days.

Miss Betty Marshall, girl guide, is an admirer of the hall staircase and balustrade of hand carved black walnut. The red stair carpet and brass rods remain serviceable despite years of wear.

Articles used by the Martins have been retained in the living room. The glass case in the corner contains the silk hat, shawl and cane worn by George Martin II. when he attended the Lincoln-Douglas debate held at Freeport in 1858. Miss Marian Augustine takes special interest in the Martin samovar and tea cups once used for entertaining afternoon guests.

Bible Areas Being Farmed by Americans

Letters from American service men now on furlough from middle east combat bases tell of tours they are taking thru the Holy Land. Many of the Americans have expressed surprise to find amid spots mentioned in the Bible men and women farmers from American cities, who are pooling their farm products in the common war effort.

These service men report that agricultural conditions in Palestine are improving, with wheat growing now a prosperous pursuit, and an excellent local market developing for fruit, eggs, and poultry. Shipping difficulties have wrecked the overseas citrus market, but dairying and poultry raising are limited only by the feed supply.

Adapted to New Life.

One village visited was the American Jewish settlement, Ain Hashophet, or Judge's Well, named to honor the late Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis. Young American-Jewish men and women, born and reared in urban surroundings before going to Palestine, have adapted themselves to the somewhat primitive conditions.

One of the new American-Jewish settlements, Kfar Menachem, was begun on the eve of the outbreak of the European war in an arid wilderness on the fringe of southern Palestine. Several of its 35 members came from America during the early part of the war to join the original pioneers. While their hardships were accentuated by wartime restrictions, they are helping raise food for the war effort.

Twentieth Century Pioneers.

These young farmers are making pioneering history, the soldiers report, even as the 18th and 19th century Americans who cultivated the western United States.

These Americans maintain good relations with their Arab neighbors in isolated outlying areas. It is too early, they declare, to speak of any general reapproachment between the Jews and Arabs as an outcome of their common endurance of wartime rigors, but the contacts established between individuals and groups furnish ample testimony that a racial understanding will be possible if present efforts succeed.

ITALO-AMERICAN UNION GIVING 3 AMBULANCES TO RED CROSS SUNDAY

Three ambulances purchased with money from a campaign conducted by the Italo-American National union will be presented the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross in a ceremony in Grant park at 2 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

Lawrence N. Marino, president of the Italo-American union, will present the ambulances on behalf of the entire Italian-American population of Chicago, it was announced. The Oct. 11 date was chosen because it nearly coincides with Columbus day, Oct. 12. The presentation will be made at the foot of Columbus monument.

Pledges to donate blood to the Red Cross will be turned over to a Red Cross representative during the ceremony. These pledges may be signed at the Italo-American union office, 30 West Washington street.

OCD Leader Kindles Spirit of Friendship

If Community Commander Ralph A. Neff has his way, South Austin will soon be a small town in spirit, if not in population. Neff came to Chicago from Kansas City only a few years ago. Even tho that Missouri metropolis has a census that runs into the hundreds of thousands, it could teach South Austin plenty about neighborliness and just being friends, Neff declares.

Comm. Neff's Civilian Defense organization has mushroomed from nothing into a well integrated setup involving thousands of persons. Neff's appointment as commander came in March, after the work had been under way for only a few weeks. Harry J. Allenbrand and Erwin Weiner were active in primary stages of the organization, soon after Pearl Harbor. Neff came into the work along with Benjamin B. Kolkey, Harry McSteen, Jack Nemerovski, and Samuel Tietelbaum, when it was necessary to seek block organizers late in December.

Variety of Excuses.

The excuses Neff received in his interviews made him realize how many Chicagoans had forgotten what it was to be friendly. The men were "too old" or "too fat" to put out the extra effort the work took; they couldn't be away from home and wife for so much time; they had had differences with neighbors down the block, and refused to ask their coöperation.

When Neff received his appointment as community commander from Division 4 Chief Wallace D. MacClay, he set about to teach South Austinites a few things about neighborliness.

RELICS OF WEST TOWNS WILL GO AS STEEL SCRAP

Legion Posts Plan Caravan to Mills.

Cannons of World War I., that have served as memorials on village greens are scheduled to roll again next Sunday. This time, according to plans of Legion posts in the west suburban area, the field pieces will form a caravan with the steel mills as destination. It is estimated that should all the Legion posts now being contacted turn in the relics the result would be 100 tons of first class steel scrap.

Suggestions for the "West Suburbs' Cannon Caravan" to aid Uncle Sam was made in a recent letter to posts of the 5th district, American Legion, and suburban posts along the "Q" railroad, from Edward Meine, adjutant of Emil Scheive post, of which Frank Humbard is commander.

Serving on the committee with Retiring Commander C. G. Jacob in promoting the caravan are H. J. Hennen, Paul Gaffke, William Petter, and Joseph Svacha.

Three Posts Take Lead.

Elmer Pflug, commander of the 5th district, who attended the meeting recently held at the Legion cabin in Lyons to discuss the project, listed Edward Feely post, Brookfield; Sarlo-Sharp post, Melrose Park, and Forest Park post as among the first groups agreeing to coöperate in the caravan.

Commander Pflug said plans called for brief programs to be held next Sunday at the sites of the cannons at various village halls. Later, the field pieces are to be transported on trucks to a central location from which the caravan would take off for the steel mills. The caravan is to be escorted by the state police with police of the villages coöperating.

Two Are English Cannons.

The two cannons at the Lyons village hall weigh six and one-half tons each. They are of English make and were first captured by the Germans and later retaken by the victorious Americans at Chateau Thierry. Their dedication in Lyons took place May 19, 1935. The local post received them from the United States arsenal at Rock Island, Ill.

The Brookfield cannon also weighs six and one-half tons. Melrose Park has two cannons, one weighing six and one-half tons and the other three and one-half tons. Forest Park post has one large cannon, a trench mortar and a machine gun.

Recall Dedication Day.

Al Freitag, past commander of the Brookfield post, recalls that when the cannon at the village hall was dedicated in 1935 the occasion was marked by one of the most patriotic demonstrations ever held in the suburb.

The Legion leaders interested in sending back the field pieces to finish the job they thought was finished in 1918, will make further plans for the cannon caravan at a meeting tomorrow night in the Legion cabin at Lyons.

JAPS' PRISONER TALKS SUNDAY AT LA GRANGE CLUB

Robert Bellaire, the reporter who for many months was a captive of the Japanese, will be the speaker next Sunday night at the LaGrange Sunday Evening club. Mr. Bellaire is quoted as having said he would rather die than again go thru the experience of Japanese imprisonment. He refused the request of the Japanese that he go on the air broadcasting their propaganda beamed at the United States.

The lecture, second of the present series, will be given in the auditorium of Lyons Township High school, La Grange.

For this season, Marshall Mathews has booked speakers in a position to deal authoritatively with the various war fronts.

EXTEND JUBILEE OF LUTHERANS IN ELMHURST TODAY

Christian education Sunday today will mark the beginning of the climax of the golden anniversary year of Immanuel Lutheran church, 3d and Michigan streets, Elmhurst. Special services will be held at 9:30 and 11 o'clock this morning. Children of the parish will provide the music.

There will be a song service Wednesday night. Next Sunday will be jubilee Sunday. Synodical and reunion services will be held Oct. 18.

The anniversary year began last fall with the dedication of a large neon memorial cross that had been erected in the tower of the church.

Baptist Education Board Official to Talk in Austin

Dr. Luther Wesley Smith of Philadelphia, executive secretary of the board of education and of the publication society of the Northern Baptist convention, will speak to the Baptist young people and Sunday school workers at the Austin Baptist church tomorrow evening. The meeting is in connection with the inauguration of the newly organized Baptist Youth fellowship, and the launching of the Baptist church school advance program.

PROPOSES CHIEF WAR COMMAND FOR MacARTHUR

Trafelet Says U. S. Needs Leader at Home.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Immediate return of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to the United States to take supreme command of our war effort was demanded by Raymond E. Trafelet, Republican nominee for representative from the 6th congressional district, in a talk before the Cicero Republican business men last week.

Trafelet charged that allied victory is being delayed by retention of "swivel chair generals" in Washington and by the self seeking and the political maneuvering of burocratic chiefs. He accused administration leaders of burying Gen. MacArthur in a minor sphere.

"They do this," Trafelet said, "because they know if MacArthur were given complete command of the war effort—our man power, material resources and production—the lightweights of our national capital would no longer be Washington big shots."

Sees Upturn in Morale.

"Today MacArthur leads a force, in man power and equipment, inferior to that of many a smaller South American republic. I pray his command will not be a repetition of Bataan and Corregidor.

"The return of Gen. MacArthur to America would result in an increase of morale that could be achieved quickly in no other way. Fighting men would take new heart. Industry would know its efforts could help swell the mighty tide that will bring American victory.

"No one in Washington has demonstrated the ability to take charge, or else the existing powers so cramp our potential leaders that it would be better if the leaders had missed the train to Washington.

"We must—we can—we will end the fumbling, the bungling and the politics of Washington. We must awake to the fact that we are in an all out war that threatens the American way of life. Why then leave it to amateurs? The people have demonstrated that they will supply whatever a true leader demands."

Quotes Douglas Farewell.

Trafelet also struck out at the city hall machine that has a powerful grip on the Chicago part of the 6th. He quoted this passage from the farewell of Ald. Paul Douglas of Chicago when he left the city council to become a private in the marine corps:

"Every dollar wasted in graft or padded pay rolls is a dollar for Hitler and the Japs. If you really want to win the war, eliminate corruption and waste at home."

Trafelet declared that the Douglas statement is peculiarly applicable to the congressional race in the 6th district, where Trafelet is pitted against Sheriff Thomas J. O'Brien, the former congressman who was nominated this year in place of the incumbent, A. F. Maciejewski.

"Are you satisfied with the conduct of the sheriff's office for the last six years?" Trafelet asked. "That is the gentleman whose theme song is 'O, where is my wandering chief of police tonight?'

"I give you one unqualified pledge; when you elect me I will go to congress to give full, honest, intelligent voice to the people of the 6th district."

Bartell for Moreland.

In the big 7th district, which dips down into the west side, Democrats dissatisfied with the do-nothingism of their own congressman, Leonard W. Schuetz, continued to give pledges of support to the Republican nominee, former Ald. James C. Moreland.

One of these is Fred E. Bartell, former Horner-Courtney leader in the 39th ward, Schuetz' home until he moved to the 35th. The Hornerites carried the 39th in the 1938 primary, 9,173 to 8,200.

Announcing his full support of the Republican, Bartell said: "I am backing Moreland for congress and am urging that all my friends do likewise.

"This congressional district has the largest population of any district in the United States, yet has practically no representation in congress. The present congressman has been elected six times in Democratic landslides. He has always managed to squeeze thru by ever narrowing margins, by hanging on the coattails of the head of the Democratic ticket.

Says People Forgotten.

"It is high time we Democrats seize this opportunity to get rid of this ineffective congressman. During his twelve years in office he has accomplished nothing for the people of his district. He has been content to sit and sit, drawing his salary and allowances and doing nothing.

"He is hard to approach and is evasive when asked to do favors for his people. In that way he has discouraged those who need his help. He has actually rebuffed delegations from his district. As a result, his constituents are forgotten people.

"Let's repudiate him and join in the popular surge to elect Jim Moreland, who has a record of efficiency and attention to detail. Moreland will support the people, so let us support him."

Engaged to Minister

Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Hardie of Riverside announce the engagement of their daughter, Wilma Jane, to the Rev. Grady B. Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs Thomas W. Wilson of Charlotte, N. C. Both Miss Hardie and the Rev. Mr. Wilson have been attending Wheaton college. Miss Hardie received her B.S. degree in August, and the Rev. Mr. Wilson will complete his studies in January. For the last five years he has been engaged in evangelistic and radio work in southern states.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Oct. 5

The best way to keep hardy chrysanthemums over winter is to heel them in in the coldframe and utilize the single shoots for planting. Do not transplant in fall unless the plants are well protected. Fine effects can be obtained by careful selection of colors.

Never use wet soil when potting plants and never use dry soil. If it is too wet mix dry soil with it until it is of the proper consistency; if it is too dry sprinkle it and work it over with a spade, trowel, or hands until it is crumbly and moist.

Tuesday, Oct. 6

Pot paperwhite narcissi for Thanksgiving bloom. The amaryillis should enter a period of rest from now until spring. Simply withhold water and when the leaves turn yellow and die down place pot and bulb in the basement until spring or when it becomes active, then bring it to the window.

Wednesday, Oct. 7

Planting deciduous shrubs [those that drop their foliage in fall] with evergreens forms a pleasing contrast, and gives variety. Evergreens are for warm winter effects, but when planted under certain conditions they may become dull and uninteresting. Use shrubs of fine texture and small leaves, such as box barberry, pointella, hypericum.

Thursday, Oct. 8

Protect roses by hilling up soil around them. Simply draw the soil as high as possible from between the plants and later cover the area with straw and strawy manure. The tops will stick out above the plants, but they will need pruning in spring; they serve to hold the mulch in place.

Finish planting narcissi bulbs. Tulips now can be planted. Try a few tulip species in the rockery. If an even growth is desired, excavate the bed to a depth of eight inches and place the bulbs in position by hand. Cover gain with soil.

Friday, Oct. 9

It is a fine time to cut out deadwood from shrubs. Tender water lilies can be easily carried thru the winter when allowed to remain in their containers and placed in a basement. Cut back the leaves, place on the floor and examine them occasionally that they do not become so dried out they shrivel up and are seriously injured. To prevent this simply water the soil but not sufficiently to cause reawakened activity.

Saturday, Oct. 10

The daylilies are attracting more and more attention because of ease of culture. They like full sun, but will endure partial shade. The plant will establish itself along the roadside if given the opportunity and there are many varieties in new shades.

Glass gardens offer the person who lacks outdoor facilities for a garden an opportunity to work out a most interesting minature garden. Select the container and place a layer of coarse sand or gravel over the bottom. Over it place a layer of half sand and peat, or leafmold and rich garden loam. The soil buildup can be arranged in the shape desired by the builder.

Hints Given to Prolong Use for Duration.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to shop carefully for household appliances that are still available for many of our best domestic "helpers" are made of critical materials that have been drafted for our war production.

Now is also the time to keep our household appliances in tiptop shape so that they will function and stay "on the job" for the duration; insurance against a day when we may be told that "there isn't any more."

Our family vacuum cleaner will work longer and give us better service if we keep it well lubricated, empty its bag after each cleaning, keep the nozzle and brush well adjusted, and avoid running over pins and metal objects.

Our electric fans, before storing away this fall, should be oiled and cleaned and wrapped in paper. And during seasons of use, they need occasional lubrication and oiling.

Keep Heating Pads Flat.

Our heating pads should be kept flat when not in use. When in use they should not be creased or immersed in water or have any pin thrust into them.

Our refrigerator should be checked occasionally by an expert to see that its mechanism is performing properly. It should be defrosted according to manufacturer's instructions and if one has lost the instructions on the general care of the refrigerator it would be well to get another copy.

Tips on Care of Washer.

Our washers should never be overloaded, dirty suds should never be left in them, and after using a washer it should be drained thoroly. Wringer rolls should be rinsed and wiped dry and connecting cord should be wiped dry.

Our ironers should be kept covered when not in use and if an ironer is kept in a cold room in winter it should be taken into a warm room for at least an hour before using.

Our electric fuses protect any electrical equipment that we have and if they give evidence of too frequent burning out, a reliable electrician should be consulted. Every care should be taken not to overload a circuit or to use wiring and cords that have become defective.

Our toasters and grills, our mixers and coffee makers and waffle bakers deserve redoubled care these days since the service they will render depends on proper care and use.

PACELLI DEATH END OF AN ERA ON WEST SIDE

Political Situation Now a Question Mark.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

The unique political situation in the adjoining 2d and 17th legislative districts seethed with uncertainties after the death on Wednesday of Ald. William V. Pacelli of the 20th ward, which is the heart of both districts.

Altho Pacelli had enrolled under the Republican banner and was expected to support the regular G. O. P. ticket on Nov. 3, his organization had its own attitude toward party lines. Therefore Democrats as well as Republicans await the answers to several questions with great interest. These questions include:

1. Who will succeed Pacelli as Republican 20th ward committeeman?
2. What will be his successor's attitude toward the Granata boys and their mentor, William Parillo, G. O. P. committeeman of the 25th ward?
3. What will be the new attitude toward the Democratic candidates including those running for the state legislature?

Held Unusual Power.

As the sole distributor of the Cook county patronage of State Auditor Arthur C. Lueder, Pacelli wielded unusual power for a ward committeeman. Besides these G O P. jobs he controlled many bearing the label: "Made in the Kelly-Nash machine." He supported Mayor Kelly for reelection in 1939. In 1936 he was read out of the Republican party for Kelly-Nash connections.

Two volunteer workers of the Business Men's committee, the anti-fraud organization in recent elections, said they had spent considerable time in the 20th ward in 1940 and on this basis predicted that Republican prospects there would improve. About half of the ward's population now is colored, they said, and would vote Republican if given the chance.

Pacelli's death marked the passing from power of the second well known Italian-American leader within a few months. In the 1st ward State Senator Daniel A. Serritella was defeated for renomination in April by Hobart E. Neff, aggressive BMC volunteer and former football star who is obtaining hundreds of private industry jobs for the unemployed and counteracting Democratic patronage.

May Bring Profound Changes.

This double loss among a certain hierarchy may have paved the way for profound changes in the Italian-American bloc, some observers said. They doubted whether the time will soon come again when the Springfield actions of two or three state senators and half a dozen state representatives can be controlled by one man, contrary to party interests.

The "Granata boys," who have been the object of Pacelli's wrath, are Willian John Granata, 27th ward Republican committeeman and nominee for Probate court clerk, and his older brother, Peter C. Granata, who has served a term in congress and is completing his fifth term in the house at Springfield.

John Granata, for personal reasons, ran against Pacelli's Rep. James J. Adduci in the 2d legislative district in April and was soundly trounced. Recently this Granata had three men file against Adduci under a "New Party" label. One of them was Scott J. Vitell, 1640 West Adams street, a young lawyer who was attacked with ball bats by two men Sept. 21 in Peter Granata's vestibule at 771 Arthington street.

Withdraw Their Petitions.

A few days ago Vitell and A. C. Cope of 37 North Paulina street withdrew their petitions of candidacy. Vitell did not travel in a Brinks Express company armored truck when he visited the county clerk's office to withdraw, as he did when he filed the petitions. However, his warrant charging assault against Adduci's nephew, Joe Mondo, is still in hands of police.

Remaining to oppose Adduci is Harry Teune, 1244 South Ashland boulevard, another young lawyer who is friendly with John Granata. His petition of candidacy is being assailed by Adduci spokesmen. In April, Teune managed the 20th ward precincts in the 2d district for John.

In 1940's primary, Teune lost to Adduci, 1,305 to 5,360, and a year before he ran against Pacelli for alderman, the result being 1,304 to 12,313 against Teune. John Teune, a brother, ran against Adduci in 1936, getting 3,627 to Adduci's 10,889. Oddly enough, the Teunes finished second in each race.

If Harry Teune is able to get on the ballot, Adduci will be denied the "free ride" he otherwise would have because of only three nominees for three house seats. The other two are Democrats, Representatives James J. Ryan and Vito Marzullo.

May Benefit Peter Granata.

In the other legislative district of importance to this story, the 17th, Peter Granata is most likely to benefit by recent events. When the Republican senatorial committee for this bit of the west side decided to nominate two instead of one, it was generally recognized as a move unfriendly to Peter.

Just recently the 20th ward organization of Pacelli met [the leader was ill and absent], and Rep. Adduci is reported to have proposed the plan which was adopted—to throw the entire voting strength to the new candidate, Frank Novelli. Normally, here, too, this would have been a three man setup, not a four man battle to see who will be left at home. So the genesis of the John Granata program is not difficult to find.

Rep. Granata happens to be the only one of the four candidates who has legislative experience, which adds another complication. In addition, he is known for his energy and alertness in Springfield.

Strong Democratic Candidates.

Democrats have nominated two organization choices who are hailed as outstanding by spokesmen for that party.

Andrew A. Euzzino, 917 Blue Island avenue, is a graduate of De Paul university. He was an assistant attorney general for more than three years, until the Grand Old Party returned to power in 1941.

"I want to do everything possible to make this community a desirable place to live," Euzzino said.

Alfred J. Cilella, the other Democratic nominee, was an honor student at Northwestern university and while there contributed articles to the Illinois Law Review.

To run against Sen. James B. Leonardo, Republican of 16 years' experience, the Democrats have shifted Rep. Roland V. Libonati from the house spot. Here again the district politics are of a style to make the outsider dizzy. In past elections the Democratic opponents have courteously withdrawn, leaving Leonardo unopposed. This time that won't happen, it is known. But just to keep the record hectic, Libonati is a former Republican house member who lost out and turned up as a bright new Democrat.

11,039 ENROLLED IN CITY'S ROTC; MOST SINCE 1920

400 Youths Join Eagerly Despite No Uniforms.

BY JOSEPH GREEN.

More than 400 Chicago high school boys are so anxious to get into the Reserve Officers Training corps this fall they have signed up for study and drill despite no uniforms being available for them.

"We would prefer that they have uniforms," Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics and ROTC head, declared. "But the demand has been so great we have lowered uniform restrictions in some cases." The ROTC roll is full now, he said.

These nonuniform boys are in 27 high schools, where the entire issue of 8,035 uniforms was snapped up almost as soon as school opened this fall. In all, the ROTC has 11,039 cadets, greatest count since 1919 and 1920, just after World War I., which brought about organization of the public school units in 1918. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE was chiefly responsible for their inception.

Enrollment Is Voluntary.

Military spirit engendered by World War I. and the fact that the training was compulsory swelled enrollment in 1919 and 1920 to 14,500. This year the surge is entirely voluntary, perhaps engendered by Pearl Harbor of World War II.

The more than 400 patriotic boys who are waiting for uniforms—if they become available—are sophomores, juniors and seniors. Freshmen cadets, not eligible for uniforms until their second year, account for about 2,500 of the 3,004 nonuniformed cadets. In uniform are 8,035 cadets.

Army Needs Come First.

A few more uniforms were issued by the war department for use of the Chicago ROTC this fall, Col. Morrison said, but the need was far from filled—for the same reason that the rifles with which the cadets formerly drilled are no longer used. The combat forces come first.

Despite the increase the staff remains the same—40 regular army sergeants as instructors, with five division supervisors, each in charge of a group of schools.

Lane Tech Has 1,326.

Lane Technical High school again leads the city with 1,326 ROTC members. Crane follows with 586, and others with more than 500 are Lake View with 525; Austin, 517, and Senn, 512.

Foreman showed the greatest increase, from 186 last fall to 291 this fall, a gain of 105. Half a dozen schools showed small decreases, but at least slight gains were recorded at most schools.

Following are cadet enrollments for each school, with enrollment for last fall compared with that for this fall:

WAR FAT THRIFT CUTS IN ON OAK PARKER'S HOBBY

Her Former Supplies Now Go Into Munitions.

If soap is ever included on the list of articles to be rationed, it will be the least of the worries of Mrs. John Millice, 727 South Maple avenue, Oak Park. She makes her own—a hobby she has pursued for the last 15 years.

Mrs. Millice declares she never thought she'd see the day when she would be in competition with the government. But now the waste grease her friends used to give her is being turned over to the butcher to be sent to commercial soap factories where the glycerin can be saved. The glycerin, in turn, is used to make explosives.

Grease Not Only Ingredient.

Waste grease may be the bulk of the soap, but there are other ingredients which turn it into the pale brown cakes of cleansing magic that Mrs. Millice used to give out so liberally as gifts and bridge prizes.

Mrs. Millice follows a formula which includes concentrated lye, a little powdered borax and some oil of sassafras. The last two ingredients are her own addition to refine the old-fashioned crude soap recipe. She believes the borax adds special cleansing properties, and the sassafras oil ing properties, and the sassafras oil serves as deodorant. The oil is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain since the war began, however, and has tripled in price.

Here's How Soap Is Made.

First step is to clean the grease, which must be boiled in water to remove salt and foreign particles. When the cleaned grease reaches a certain temperature, the other ingredients are added. The soft mixture is then poured into a large wooden box, which has been lined with a moist cloth. This is covered to retain the heat, and is left for a day. Then Mrs. Millice cuts it into convenient sized bars, using a wire instead of a knife. The bars are stored in a dry place, and Mrs. Millice believes that the older they get, the better they are.

While Mrs. Millice makes soap only once a year, she may prepare as many as six or seven recipes within a few days' time. That way she accumulates a year's supply for herself and Mr. Millice, as well as for the innumerable gifts she makes to friends and acquaintances.

THEATER OF AIR STAGING STRAUS WORK SATURDAY

Feature Marion Claire, Knight on W-G-N.

Felix Knight, young American lyric tenor, will be starred with Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, next Saturday, when Oscar Straus' operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," is presented from 8 to 9 p. m. on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, will speak.

Knight, American born and American trained, has made rapid strides in the concert world. He was featured this summer on W-G-N and Mutual's "America Loves a Melody" concert series and has been guest artist on other network programs, including the Sunday afternoon symphony series and the Ford concerts.

Miss Claire will be cast in the rôle of Nadina, beautiful Bulgarian girl who is the leading character of the operetta. Knight will sing the rôle of Lieut. Bumerli, a young Swiss officer and professional soldier serving with the Serbian forces. Ray Charles will fill the third principal singing rôle as he will be cast as Alexius, a young Bulgarian hero.

The theme of the story is built around the romance of Nadina and Lieut. Bumerli. Serving with the Serbian forces, Bumerli is forced to flee a Bulgarian patrol and to save himself he climbs into Nadina's boudoir. He captivates the three women of the family by his suave manner and quick wit. At first his affair with Nadina is a mere flirtation carried on to save his life. Later, Bumerli falls genuinely in love with Nadina. She is engaged to Alexius, but she switches her affections to the lieutenant.

Musical background for the operetta will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and by the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor, W-G-N chief of production, will produce the program.

An outstanding dramatic cast will portray the speaking rôles. Much of the story will be told by narration so that as much music as possible will be heard during the program.

FUTURE CITIZENS SHOW OPENING IS NEXT SUNDAY

The first program of the fourth series of "Citizens of Tomorrow" will be aired from 1 to 1:30 p. m. next Sunday, Oct. 11, on W-G-N. The entertainment, sponsored by The Chicago Tribune, will feature high schools of Chicago and nearby Chicago. Philip Maxwell of The Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies, will have an added interest in the program this season, as his own daughter, Barbara, 14 years old, has just entered Evanston Township High school.

Kenneth MacGregor, production manager of W-G-N, has assigned Holland Engle to be announcer. It will be produced by Morrison Wood, who had charge of the entertainment last spring. Collaborating on the script will be Carlyle Stevens and Don Brinkley. Harold Turner will be the pianist.

'Her Regiment' Medley on Northerners' Hour Tuesday

A medley from Victor Herbert's "Her Regiment" will highlight the Northerners' program on W-G-N from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Tuesday. The selection will include "I Know I'm in Love at Last" and "Regimental Song," and will feature Isabel Ebert and Harold Turner at the twin pianos. Lois Wallner, soprano star, will sing Jerome Kern's "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes."

An original play, "Dead Man's Shoes," will be presented on the First Nighter program from 5 to 5:30 p. m. today on W-G-N and the Mutual network. Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne will co-star in the presentation from the "Little Theater Off Times Square."

For the last month the series has been aired in coöperation with the Office of War Information and heard from 7 to 7:30, but with a sponsor taking over the show the time has been changed to 5 to 5:30 p. m. Musical background for the show will be supplied by Eric Sagerquist and the orchestra.

MANSION STANDS AS DAILY LESSON IN TOWN HISTORY

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Conversion of the George Martin home in Naperville into a museum not only has served to perpetuate the memory of a family and the period it occupied in Chicagoland history but provide a place for heirlooms of value collected in the vicinity. The Caroline Martin Mitchell museum is perhaps the outstanding project in the area for preserving an old mansion and its tradition for those who would enrich day to day living with an appreciation of backgrounds.

With family pride the big brick house was built in 1883 on high ground along Ogden avenue. It is evident that elms and oaks and the shrubbery of snowballs and lilacs were planted when the 12 acre site was selected. The imposing front entrance with the family monogram in the transom above the door, the covered carriage drive, the iron grill work on the roof, and the deck in the attic for observing the countryside for miles around have all been retained.

Black Walnut Staircase.

At least a third of the intrinsic value of the old home is placed on the hall staircase and balustrade of hand carved black walnut. There are six fireplaces in the 12 high ceilinged rooms. Silver, china, and linen in closets and chests were numbered to serve 24 persons should the occasion arise.

The family of George Martin I. emigrated to the Naper settlement from Scotland in 1831. The first family home was north of Ogden avenue and opposite the mansion. The first house, which still stands, was erected from material grown and hewn on the grounds. George Martin II., a private banker and operator of a brick and tile works, gravel pits, and stone quarries in the vicinity, utilized the products of his business when the big house was built.

George Martin II. married Sibelia Ridder and to them were born three daughters and one son. The last survivor, Mrs. Caroline Martin Mitchell, died in 1936 at the age of 74. In her last will she gave to Naperville 205 acres of land and the two dwellings. Three years ago executors of the will completed the gift to the city. Since then the big home has been opened as a museum during the hours from 3 to 5 o'clock on Sundays and on national holidays.

Seven Named Directors.

Upon assuming possession of the property the Naperville city council appointed as directors Mrs. Grace Fredenhagen, president; Mrs. Elizabeth B. Simpson, Mrs. Florence DuBrock, Prof. C. C. Pinney, Herman E. Beckman, William R. Friederich, attorney, and W. M. Givler, secretary. Trained girl guides have been selected to escort visitors thru the mansion, which is also available for the use of club organization meetings and social events. The museum is a member of the American Historical society.

The visitor finds that the drawing room at the right of the entrance hall has been restored much as in the days when the family received guests. On the walls are the portraits of relatives of a period too far past to be identified.

At the left in the living room is a glass case containing the silk hat, shawl, and cane worn by George Martin II. when he attended the Lincoln-Douglas debate at Freeport in 1858. In another case there is a dress worn by Elizabeth Christie on the occasion of her marriage to George Martin I. at Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1825. The old lamps in the chandeliers have been electrified.

Old Horsehair Chairs.

A spinning wheel brought down from the attic has been given a place with the set of horsehair upholstered chairs in the dining room.

The only hardwood floor in the mansion is to be found in the kitchen, which is now used for art exhibits. One of the rooms is being designed as a memorial to Joseph Naper, founder of Naperville, and among the historic documents here is a tally sheet of the first election held in the community in 1831.

On the stairway the red carpet and brass rods are still serviceable. In one of the upstairs bedrooms an exhibit is devoted to mementoes of Hannah Ditzler Alspaugh and Nicholas Lodge. Mrs. Alspaugh had a hobby of saving the paper napkins at social functions, and 80 of them with their long ago dates have been pasted together. Mr. Lodge, who had a patent on a brick kiln, was brought from New York by Mr. Martin to be superintendent of his plant.

Members of the committee who have given much time to the choosing of relics to be retained in the old mansion and gathered there for posterity seem to have met Macaulay's requirements for the perfect historian: "By judicious selection, rejection and arrangement, he gives to truth those attractions which have been usurped by fiction."

LA GRANGE CLUBS TO HOLD LADIES' NIGHT BANQUET

Instrumental music and group singing will be featured at the first annual La Grange Inter-Club Ladies' night banquet Oct. 13 at the La Grange Country club. The fall banquet for planning activities has been a custom of the La Grange Chamber of Commerce for several years. Other groups joining in the program have been the "Q" Suburban Credit bureau, the Kiwanis club, and the Young Men's Business club. Attending the dinner this year will be the Coöperative club.

The five organizations will be cosponsors for the chicken dinner and the program of entertainment, and each group will be represented on the planning committees.

HER HOBBY LEADS TO WRITING OF CHILDREN'S BOOK

Josephine Blackstock.

If a hobby is something you'd rather do than anything else, then writing is the hobby of Miss Josephine Blackstock, director of playgrounds for the village of Oak Park. And only last week Miss Blackstock's hobby led to the publication of her first book for children, "Wings for Nikias."

Her writing career started when she was 8 years old, Miss Blackstock recalled. "I attended a small private school in Ottawa, Canada. When the teacher gave us a half hour in which to do anything we wanted, the other pupils made a mad scramble for the playground. But I always sat at my desk in a happy daze, scribbling some endless, optimistic fairy story in a lined tablet."

Studies Under Harriet Monroe.

At the University School for Girls in Chicago, her English teacher was Harriet Monroe, editor of Poetry magazine for many years. At Northwestern university, Miss Blackstone won a prize for short story writing, while she took practically every English course offered, as well as one at the University of Chicago. She had a three act play which was a prize winner for the Drama League of America, and was later produced by the Northwestern University Workshop.

After a course at the American College of Education, Miss Blackstock took a position with the newly organized Oak Park playgrounds, and in a few months was made director. And there she found an outlet for her hobby! Plays and pantomimes for children were hard to find, and Miss Blackstock solved the problem by writing her own.

Writes Playground Pantomimes.

During the 21 years she has been in charge of the playgrounds in Oak Park, she has continued to write nearly all the pantomimes, and many of the plays. One of these—the story of electricity—was presented on the radio. Another, the Golden Jubilee of Basketball, was staged this year by groups in schools in seven states.

One of the most satisfying accomplishments in Miss Blackstock's career was Enchanted Island, that paradise for children at A Century of Progress exposition. She served as supervisor for the project, and created many of its features.

"Two years ago, I got to thinking of the gallant fight little Greece was putting up against the Nazis. I wondered what part that country's thrilling tradition had in fashioning the pattern of its thinking." So she wrote "Wings for Nikias" for a class she was taking under Prof. Percy Boynton of the University of Chicago. He liked it so well he interested a publisher in the book. The manuscript was read, accepted, and last week it appeared on the bookseller's shelves, resplendent in a red and blue jacket, and with illustrations by Rafaello Busoni, authority on Greek costumes and customs.

Story of Boy Hero.

The book recalls old Greek legends and picturesque beliefs still held in rural Greece. Mainly, however, the tale is concerned with the fight a small boy of today waged with himself to overcome fear. Nikias' part in carrying food to Greek troops in the mountains, his adventures with the enemy, and the exciting outcome make entertaining reading.

Miss Blackstock came from a bookish family. Her great-grandfather was a tutor of Disraeli. Her father was a professor at Upper Canada college in Toronto, and like herself, enjoyed reading. Once, as a pupil teacher, he taught Sir James Barrie, then three months his senior. Both were 13!

300 LA GRANGE WORKERS BUSY IN CHEST CAMPAIGN

More than 300 civic minded citizens of La Grange and La Grange Park are now in the midst of a community chest fund drive with $14,400 as this year's goal. Bowing to wartime the annual kickoff dinner was eliminated this year for the sake of economy and solicitors are traveling on foot rather than by automobile to conserve gas and tires.

Russel J. Turney and William Spicer are co-directors for the chest which will benefit eight agencies under a budget fixed as follows: Boy Scouts, $3,700; Nurse Service association, $4,000; Infant Welfare, $2,500; Girl Scouts, $2,000; Volunteers of America, $200; Salvation Army, $300; Tuberculosis institute, $700; Camp Fire Girls, $375, and expense, $625.

Bringing of the solicitors' cards up to date has been the work of the infant welfare committee composed of Mrs. C. F. Dissinger, chairman; Mrs. Norman Korfist, Mrs. Leonard Vaughan, Mrs. John Beckley, Mrs. C. H. Bennett, Mrs. J. A. Gillen, and Mrs. W. B. Robinson. Ossian Nystrom is chairman of the solicitors' committee. Members of the finance committee, of which Ray Ryder is chairman, are Frank Dean, James Wallace, Jack Drewes, Donald Ryder, and Vincent Parshall.

SCHOOL SYSTEM FAULTS WILL BE TOPIC AT CICERO

Other events planned at a recent meeting of the council include a benefit party to be held Oct. 28 at Odd Fellows hall, 25th street and 55th avenue, Cicero. The council will coöperate with the Junior Program, Inc., which will enact "Doodle Dandy of U. S. A." at Sterling Morton High school on Dec. 7.

"Advantages of Our Public School System" will be the topic of a future meeting of the council.

MEET YOUR NAVY! GREAT LAKES BID IS WORTH TAKING

Bluejacket Show Reflects Fighting Spirit.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Rita Ascot,
Chief "Pretty" Officer.

Meet Your Navy! That's the invitation the Great Lakes Naval Training station extends to the nation with its all-sailor radio show by that name, presented every Friday evening. It's a bid well worth accepting for every show from Great Lakes is great entertainment, reflecting the talent, the enthusiasm, and the fighting spirit of the bluejackets.

When you Meet Your Navy in this fashion you get a glimpse of the human and personal side of the navy—a half hour of stirring music and salty laughter.

Great Lakes has some of the finest musical talent in the country. Bandmaster Frank R. Mattlach gets those thrilling airs out of his band in part because the personnel includes men from many of the top orchestras and bands in the country.

A New Chorus Monthly.

Then there's the mighty chorus, trained and directed by Chaplain Hjalmar Hansen. Chaplain Hansen knows his stuff. He has to. Every month or so he loses his whole choir and has to develop a brand new one out of the ranks of recruits. When we visited the broadcast the other evening Chaplain Hansen was breaking in a group that had not as yet received their full issue or had their hair cut. But in a half hour's drill before the broadcast they were singing "Anchors Aweigh," "Here Comes the Navy," and "Marching Along Together" like veterans.

Dynamic Eddie Peabody, the lieutenant commander who is in charge of music and entertainment at Great Lakes, not only organizes the whole program, but finds time to entertain the men—and the nation—with his banjo wizardry.

Then there's the Rhythm orchestra, which gives out swing in the authentic manner.

But much of the slickest entertainment comes from individual bluejackets themselves. Men with talent make themselves known to Producer Al Boyd and his assistants, who conduct auditions a week in advance.

The night we visited the show Billy Evenson, who used to work on Harold Teen and Citizens of Tomorrow on W-G-N as a civilian, created a laugh riot with a monolog of light satire on navy life he wrote as well as delivered. Bob Hope and Jack Benny never drew better applause from a service man audience than Billy.

Last Friday the show was enlivened by the singing of patriotic songs by Robert Morton of Berwyn, who appeared in the movie, "A Gay Señorita," starring Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire. Morton sang with Xavier Cugat's orchestra.

She's Chief "Pretty" Officer.

The show is the pride of Great Lakes. Adm. John Downes, commandant, has often spoken on the show and it is beloved by the men.

Actress Rita Ascot writes the scripts and sometimes appears on the show reading letters from home. Because of her contributions she has been designated Chief Pretty Officer of the post. Jack Stilwill is the narnator.

And there are many others that contribute to making this navy show the success it is. But it's impossible to capture the flavor of the show with words. You need to listen—9 p. m. Friday on WLS and the Blue network.

The Mail Must Go Thru

OCD COMMANDER ADDS FRIENDSHIP TO STERNER DUTY

Teaches Neighbors to Become Acquainted.

ganization, of course, is to develop a protective program to handle any emergency. Comm. Neff saw to it that that job was well on its way to accomplishment before the "extras" began creeping into the program. Headquarters were set up in part of John S. Clark's office at 211 South Cicero avenue. Equipment was borrowed "for the duration," and soon a full staff volunteered to do the work.

600 Trained in First Aid.

More than 600 block personnel have been trained thus far in first aid work. At least 600 have taken the central OCD course in fire control. Complete programs are being carried out by messenger groups, air raid wardens, and conservation committees. A finger printing bureau has been set up under Boland Hosie and George Johnson, 5510 Harrison street, and prints from 402 workers have been accepted for checking against FBI files in Washington, D. C.

But Comm. Neff has gone further. In the Civilian Defense activities he recognized an opportunity to bring his people closer together. So the list of auxiliary groups within the South Austin OCD has multiplied. The men and women participating are surprised to discover they now have a wider circle of acquaintances than ever before during their residence in Chicago.

Orchestra of 20 Pieces.

For instance, there is the community orchestra, with 20 amateur musicians under leadership of Carl Gruber. They have played at inductions, flag raising ceremonies, and the three dances for service men which have been attended by a total of 25,000 persons. Another active group is the speakers' committee, furnishing addresses for patriotic programs in the community.

On the committee are John P. Coffey, Nicholas P. Conglis, William McGowan, R. R. Grandy, Robert A. Graves, Marion L. Groves, Joseph Foredman, Boland Hosie, Leslie B. Levin, William Lennon, Mel Noel, Mort Porges, S. S. Rosenstein, Justin Turner, Mrs. Rose Turner, and Dooley Ripper.

Takes Pictorial Record.

John Coffey is serving as coördinator of information, assisted by Miss Theresa D'Addio. Frank Horwath, 4739 Harrison street, is making a photographic record of the events which South Austinites have staged. The community has been loaned a resuscitator for the duration of the war, and an ambulance and fire truck are now in the building. These will be used to supplement municipally operated equipment in case of emergency. A city plat book has been borrowed so that fire wardens may memorize the layout of each block.

Residents of South Austin have been doing these things together the last few months. Whether it was attending classes, building the ambulance, or marching in a parade, they found a new thrill in sharing experiences with their next door neighbors, or with the interesting family in the next block. Comm. Neff may not say it, but he must be thinking, "I told them so!"

Law Student a WAAC

Miss Lillian Bojar, 2514 South St. Louis avenue, has become a WAAC at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. She became interested in joining the WAACs when Lieut. Edward N. Leigh, assisting recruiting officer, conducted mental aptitude tests for the WAAC at John Marshall Law school, where she was a second year student.

6 Entertainment Units on 'Breakfast Time Frolics'

Six popular entertainment groups headed by John Tyson as master of ceremonies will constitute the lineup for the Breakfast Time Frolics program on W-G-N every Monday thru Saturday from 6 to 7 a. m. The entertainers include the Morgan Family, the Pickens Family, Mariner's Mountaineers, and Pop Stover and His Gang.

SUBURBAN NAVY AIR VOLUNTEERS START TRAINING

urbs, Lieut. J. Smith Ferebee, in charge of the Fly for Navy drive, said: "The recruiting and establishment of the five west suburban squadrons is the outstanding community accomplishment during our drive in the Chicago metropolitan area. The organization of these V-5 cadets, which has been handled by the cadets themselves, is the largest of its kind in the United States. With the beginning of their ground school, these young men are already making a name for themselves in pioneering this type of volunteer school."

Lists Still Open.

Mr. Beeman pointed out that there is still time for young men of the western suburbs to join this group. "High school graduates, 18 thru 26, who are not married and who are in good physical condition, who are interested in becoming flying naval officers, should come to the Oak Park club, Ontario street and Oak Park avenue, on Monday, Wednesday, or Friday evenings between 7 and 9 o'clock to discuss particulars," he stated.

The men from western suburbs who are thus far enlisted in the six newly organized squadrons are listed below. Insignia of the squadrons accompany the lists.

CATCHES 4 POUND BASS FOR PRIZE IN PARK FISHING

The cold, rainy weather of the last few weeks has not deterred the fishermen from trying their luck at the eight park district lagoons. Honors went to the west side recently where the largest large mouth black bass, weighing four pounds, was caught in the Columbus park lagoon. This catch was made by M. S. Callaghan, 920 North Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park. The catch was made with a tubular rod with a pikie-minnow bait. Mr. Callaghan received the first prize of $15 for the week for his catch.

Second prize went to a Garfield park fisherman, Henry Lassen, 1121 South Richmond street, Chicago. He caught a large mouth black bass weighing 3½ pounds, 18¼ inches long. He used a live chub with a bamboo rod. His prize amounts to $10.

Fishing continues at all eight park lagoons until freezing weather, probably after Nov. 1. Boats are available at Jackson park, both lagoons of Lincoln park, Washington, Garfield, Columbus, Douglas, and Humboldt parks. To win a prize a fisherman must register his catch with the attendant at the boat dock, who will make out a registration sheet, which must also be by a third party as witness.

Pipenhagen, president of Sears "Y" Foremen's club, which includes representatives from 43 industries in the community, has made the Sears conferences possible.

ARMY OUTLINES 7 POINT OFFER TO MECHANICS

Will Follow Their Usual Civilian Routine.

Help wreck the axis with a wrench was the substance of a plea from the 6th service command last week. It stressed immediate and acute need for men with mechanical ability to volunteer for the army air forces, the signal corps, and the ordnance department.

The army has a gilt edged proposition, army spokesmen said, for any man who has worked as an auto mechanic, gunsmith, electrician, radio repair man, filling station attendant, in plumbing work, at machine trades, or in any other work where ability with his hands was an asset. Age limits are 18 to 44, but the air forces are accepting men as old as 50, it was reported.

Pay Up to $138.

The proposition provides benefits as follows:

1. A man who joins this service has the same status as any other army volunteer. He begins as a private, but can look forward to rapid advancement to noncommissioned grades, with pay as high as $138 a month, plus rates, quarters, and family allowance.

2. He continues in the army to do the same sort of work he has been doing in private life. He will not drill.

3. He will be accepted if he passes oral examination as to experience and ability at mechanical trades and minimum physical tests. The average mechanic will have little difficulty passing, it was said.

4. He will be at work within a few days after he is accepted. From Chicago he will be sent to a regular army induction camp, from where he will be assigned to a flying field or other station.

Few Moves Assured.

5. He has reasonable assurance that he will not be shifted from camp to camp. He will simply have a job, but it will be at an army center.

6. In the air service as well as signal corps and ordnance, he will be paid while he is trained for work which should be worth thousands of dollars to him after the war. Airplane mechanics will be in demand after the war, it is commonly predicted.

7. He will be serving his country as surely as do the men on the front lines and in the bombers.

The 6th service command is enlisting men from Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin for these vital jobs. Specialists in mechanical trades have been brought to the Chicago recruiting office to explain to applicants the qualifications, duties, and future in these jobs.

What They Need.

In the air forces recruits are needed to become aircraft armorers, mechanics, welders, metal workers, radio mechanics, and operators. Technicians may be assigned also to flying duty, which brings a 50 per cent increase in their base pay.

The signal corps is enlisting specialists for telephone cable splicers and installers, radio and telegraph operators and mechanics.

Chicago applicants should report to the United States army recruiting office at 515 South Franklin street.

The Houlihan Twins and Their Brother Go to War

Pvt. John L. Houlihan.

Lieut. Florence M. Houlihan.

Pvt. Lawrence J. Houlihan.

HOULIHAN HOME IS QUIETER NOW WITH 3 IN ARMY

Twin Girl a Nurse, Her Brother in Australia.

There used to be as many as 15 sit down to the Houlihan dinner table on Sunday noon. The crowd was merry, there was an abundance of talk and laughter. And Mother Mary Houlihan looked over her brood and their friends with a good humored indulgence.

But nowadays Sunday dinner at the Houlihan home, 3430 Flournoy street, is a quiet affair. The twins, Florence and Lawrence, 24, and John, 29, are in the army. The gang they used to bring home from church no longer lines up around the Houlihan table, and a half dozen diners make a crowd there now.

Florence, the feminine half of the twins, has the longest service record of the Houlihans, and the only commission thus far. She joined the army nurses corps, with a second lieutenant rating, in June, 1941. She had graduated from Women's and Children's hospital only a few months before, and spent the intervening period at County hospital. In February she was transferred from Darnell General hospital, Danville, Ky., to Camp Croft, Spartanburg, S. C., and only last month she was sent overseas.

Twin Drafted Last December.

Lawrence, her twin, was drafted Dec. 10, 1941. He had been an operator at the main office of Western Union. He was sent to Camp Roberts, California. In January his unit was sent to Australia.

John, the third Houlihan to go into the army, has seen a lot of the United States since he left his job as an accountant at the Ditto company to be inducted Feb. 13, 1942. He was sent first to Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, then to Fort Logan, Colorado, and recently was transferred to Savannah, Ga. He is now a corporal.

Joseph, the eldest son, was put in a 4F classification because of a lameness resulting from a childhood attack of infantile paralysis. He hopes to get into some division of the service, however, since the government recently has opened instructors' posts to men unable to qualify physically for field duty.

Grandchild Center of Attraction.

The fifth Houlihan is now Mrs. Margaret Ware. She and her husband make their home with her mother, and the center of the entire household is their baby, Mary Frances, the first grandchild of Mary Houlihan. Mr. Houlihan died ten years ago.

When Nurse Florence first learned a few weeks ago that she might be sent abroad, she wrote home and expressed anxiety over how her mother would take the news. But Mrs. Houlihan only smiled a little, saying, "If our boys must go abroad, they need nurses to take care of them, and there are none better than our Florence!" Then she went quietly on about her work.

The postman is one of the most welcome visitors at the Houlihans. A letter may be addressed to any one of them, but if it's postmarked Australia, or South Carolina, or Georgia—the first person to get hold of it opens it. And the Houlihans in the army write good, newsy letters.

Visits in Australian Home.

There was the long letter from Lawrence not long ago, telling of his experiences as a week-end house guest in a wealthy Australian home. Servants to wait on him, good food, a good bed, and an invitation to return—and he began to feel that soldiering wasn't so bad after all. Some of the letters he sends are censored, with names of places neatly clipped out.

Then there was the letter Nurse Florence wrote telling of the week-end she spent visiting Brother John at his station in Georgia. She took a sister nurse along. It was the first chance they had had to go out with enlisted men—nurses being officers they are not allowed to date noncoms. But because they were visiting Florence's brother, it was entirely proper, and they had the time of their lives.

Her Schedule the Same.

The fact that three of her brood have left hasn't altered Mary Houlihan's schedule. She's up every morning at 4:45 o'clock, sees to it that breakfast is ready for her son-in-law and her two brothers who make their home with her, and then goes off to church at Our Lady of Sorrows. And there's seldom a night that she's in bed before 10:30 o'clock, which makes a long day if you've passed your 65th birthday.

The sense of humor and the fund of vitality that Mary Houlihan brought over from County Cork, Ireland, 50 years ago, have stood her in good stead. Three children have gone to the army—a fourth is yet to go. But Mary Houlihan would never grumble if she had a dozen and they all went into the uniform of her adopted country.

St. Mary's Mothers.

Mothers' club of St. Mary's High school, 1031 South Hoyne avenue, will hold its first monthly meeting at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday. There will be entertainment in honor of Mother Mary Frances Clarke. Mrs. Blanche O'Brien is president.

GLACIER PRIEST GIVING LECTURE AT OPERA HOUSE

Many families identified with the early history of Chicago will be represented at the lecture of the Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., known thruout Alaska as "The Glacier Priest," Wednesday evening at the Civic Opera house. The occasion will highlight the anniversary of the founding 85 years ago of the old Jesuit parish on the west side. Proceeds of the lecture will go to the benefit of Holy Family church, which still stands and serves parishioners at Roosevelt road and May street, as a monument to the memory of the Rev. Arnold Damen, S. J. He established the parish in 1857, and made possible the erection of the edifice dedicated July 12, 1860.

The church, erected in what was then a sparsely settled prairie community, withstood the ravages of the fire in 1871. At the time Father Damen began his work in Chicago in 1857, a financial panic was in full swing. By the end of May that year, however, he had subscriptions of $30,000 toward the erection of the church, which was completed at a cost of $100,000.

After building Holy Family church, Father Damen turned his attention to educational matters. In 1857 there was only one Catholic school on the west side, St. Patrick's on Des Plaines street near Adams street. There was only one public school within the confines of Holy Family parish—the old Foster school. In 1865 the "Brothers' school" on Morgan street just south of Roosevelt road was completed. In succeeding years six other Catholic schools were erected in the parish, serving more than 5,000 pupils.

URGES PASSAGE OF TUBERCULOSIS LAW AS WAR AID

Overwork, bad housing, and other detrimental aspects of the war, beginning to show up in Du Page county, are tending to light up the tuberculosis problem locally, according to Prof. Harold E. White, who recently made a report to the Du Page County Tuberculosis association, of which he is president. "Validity of the tuberculosis sanatorium law has been attacked," said Prof. White. "It must be passed again by a referendum vote of our citizens at the Nov. 3 election. If the majority do not vote for it, all of its services will be discontinued. We cannot let this happen. Tuberculosis will interfere with our war effort. It will be on the side of the axis. It, too, will kill our people."

War to Bring New Concept of Beauty

[Tribune Studio Color Photo.]

It Will Be Based on Health and Cleanliness

By Eleanor Nangle.

Femininity never goes out of fashion, come peace or war. If anything, it would seem that war imposes even greater necessity on women to retain their femininity, since that quality so magnificently sustains men and provides them with the incentive to prove themselves men.

Beyond doubt much of the flim-flam concerned with the pursuit of beauty will be mercifully missing while the country is prosecuting a war. But it will be small loss. Beauty isn't necessarily femininity, and the phony attributes of "glamor" do not necessarily contribute to beauty.

What will emerge is a new concept of beauty, based on health and cleanliness and fastidiousness. Hair, skin, and hands will be the recipients of intelligent care, without benefit of trimmings bought and paid for just for fun. Of beauty aids women will ask only that they give maximum performance with the minimum expenditure of time and money.

Femininity, however, will be retained, even intensified. Uniforms are dandy, and so is the work women do when they wear them—but for off-duty hours they are costumes that will NOT be worn! Frilly clothes, and alluring ones, are what men like . . . and this is a period in which there can be no quibbling about whom women dress to please. Today's woman dresses to please men, not to impress women.

It's the feminine quality that is accented in the wartime estimate of beauty. In her off-duty hours even the hardest working woman will strive for traditionally feminine allure.

Initiate Children Into Joys of Autumn Walking

Hiking Among the Wonders of Nature Encourages Calmness and Simplicity

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Even now I can see my mother impulsively drawing on her galoshes, slipping on her coat, seizing her umbrella, and faring forth to walk thru the rain, trailed out of the doors by the tart comment of my stay-at-home grandmother: "Never heard of such a thing—ridiculous—tramping around in the rain!"

Perhaps that's where I got my love of walking. I do know it's one of the greatest and simplest pleasures in the world, possible to indulge in at any age and costing nothing. It's not only delightfully rhythmic, it's magnificently healthful exercise. It is known to stimulate the "deep circulation" (that is, the circulation of blood to the vital organs) as no other exercise does, and without strain, tho walking, to do this, must be continuous for about a mile and a half to two miles. The stop and start kind of walking that a woman does when shopping, for instance, will not produce the result.

To be sure, with the war creating the tire and gas situation that it has, automobile users are being forced to walk more than they otherwise would. But this article is to urge you to walk for pleasure and to initiate your children into the joys of this most natural of all "sports." It is also to urge you not to feel that when summer goes, civilization and walls must hem you and the children in completely.

Many children, especially city children, only know the outdoors in summer. They should have some chance to know it in all seasons, but especially spring and fall. In these tense and complex days children as well as adults need relaxation. Walking in the natural world encourages calmness and simplicity. Walk with your children this fall. Plan something outdoors for balmy week-ends in October and the crisp ones in November; you may even snatch at those rare, warm, lovely days that sometimes surprise us in December.

Children love to walk and love nature. To start them a little encouragement may be needed. But given a chance to develop, the love of outdoors and of walking may become one of the deepest satisfactions not only of their youth, but of their adult life.

Walking is a sport within every one's reach, and tho walking in town is fun, walking in the country is a delightful sport and gives one infinitely more exercise.

Haven't you noticed how much more variety of motion there is? You bend over going uphill, you climb a rock or a fence, you twist to look at this and that, you lean down or crouch to see something on the ground, you gaze up at the sky and the clouds and trees or mountain tops, perhaps you race or jump, and you breathe deeper in the country.

So, take some really long walks with your children this fall. It will be one more enjoyable and worthwhile thing for them to learn to do, and to do with you. If you can't walk in the country, then walk in the parks.

Dress warmly enough but lightly, as heavy clothing is exhausting. Carry an extra sweater or windbreaker or coat for change of weather, or to slip on when resting.

Children are often a special problem. They regard walking in an entirely different light from that of grownups. To them it often consists of just putting one foot before the other. The age at which they begin to enjoy the rhythm that comes with real walking varies. You'll have to gauge that yourself. Some children of 5 will plod along for miles, while others will lag and lose interest, which spoils the fun for both them and you. It depends partly on temperament and partly on physique at what age your child can really walk.

Remember that having an objective usually adds to the interest and swing of the walk where children are concerned, tho, of course, it's not necessary.

THE FIRST DAY

asked Vivien, as he turned to go. "We have some very good ones vacant. Georg—"

"No thanks," cut in the agent.

When he had gone thru the revolving door, she shrugged her shoulders.

During the hours when luncheon was being served, she had no time to think of anything besides work. She was constantly between the kitchen and restaurant—serving, giving directions, and exploiting the personal element.

She was watched closely by Edda who had to help wait whenever the number of guests was above the average. Her mind was poisoned with envy as the younger girl welcomed the patrons. She hated her for her blonde coloring, her flair as hostess, but—above all—for her black satin gown.

She could not guess that the positions were reversed and that Vivien would have been profoundly thankful to change places with her assistant. During the slack hour after luncheon, when she was back in the bureau, she had too much time to think and realize her position.

She had saved the others at the price of her own safety.

After the Gestapo had raided the deserted one hundred-and-three, Postgasse, they would inevitably demand an explanation from herself. They would not believe her protestations of ignorance of any fairy tale about a message given to her by an anonymous stranger. To them, she would be merely a girl who knew something—and who must be persuaded to talk.

As the minutes crawled by she began to feel on the verge of hysteria. Her nerves frayed by the strain of waiting for catastrophe.

When the lounge was beginning to fill with afternoon patrons, she noticed a girl who was greedily sucking up raspberry sirup at one of the small tables. Her short fur coat, the tilt of her veiled hat, and the way she crossed her legs were all familiar, but she could not place her immediately. She frowned because it was her boast never to forget a face. But within a few seconds her professional prestige was restored.

She recognized the girl as the daughter of a well-to-do business man and—incidentally—a minx. She was fond of sweets and had patronized the Monopol café regularly until recently. Presumably her absence was caused by illness, for her full cheeks were pale and her little dark eyes no longer shone with vitality.

Vivien noticed also the nervous twitch of one eyelid as she approached the girl.

"You've deserted us," she said reproachfully. "Why? Is the sirup better somewhere else?"

"O, no," the girl assured her. "It's divine. I've missed it terribly. But I've been away in—in a holiday camp."

Edda Tells of Girl's Arrest by Gestapo

The explanation was overheard by Edda who commented on it when she returned to the Bureau.

"That little fool is learning sense," she whispered spitefully to Vivien. "'Holiday camp?' Another name for it is 'concentration camp.'"

The blood seemed to drain from Vivien's heart as she listened.

"What did she do?" she asked.

"Nothing, so to say. She was having a drink with a pickup when the Gestapo pulled him in and her as well. It took time to persuade them that she didn't know the man from Adam, but they let her go. She was lucky."

Only yesterday, Vivien would have heard such a tale in silence and then tried to forget it, with all the other things which must not be remembered. . . . Since then, a gulf had been crossed and this story was her own—with one ominous difference. The girl was innocent of intrigue while she was deeply involved.

Their fates would be the same. She shuddered as she thought of 'rough treatment' and wondered whether she could endure protracted pain. Her chief dread was that an admission might be wrung from her when she was in a dazed condition. Then she realized that Edda was speaking.

"What a fool to pick up a stranger! You and I, fraulein, are too wise. We know that the hotel is packed with Gestapo agents posing as business men. Sometimes I wonder if your brooch keeps them guessing. Of course, here we know it is your initial."

The words made her realize that while she was facing the gravest peril, there might be worse to follow—the bitterness of betrayal by some one very dear. . . . Suddenly she could endure the confinement of the lounge no longer. Altho she remained miraculously fresh with the minimum of air and exercise, she occasionally took a walk during the afternoon.

"Carry on, Edda," she said. "I am going out."

Too overwrought to wait for the lift, she ran up to the first floor. Old Steiner was his own best patron, for he occupied a vast apartment, furnished with stuffy Victorian splendor. He was bed-ridden but, in spite of his age, his vast bulk had not shrunken. Just as in his youth, he prided himself on filling out his coat, he boasted now of the size of the coffin he would require.

"I'm going to the shops, darling," Vivien told him. "Can I get anything for you?"

"No, my dear," he replied, "but you can do something for me." He pointed to her initial brooch. "Don't wear that again. Didn't you know it is the Victory sign? I hear the Gestapo are testing the loyalty of all the hotel staffs while they pose as guests. There is leakage everywhere, messages and thus and thus . . . You might give the wrong impression with that brooch—and sometimes it is difficult to explain. Authority has a mouth—but no ears."

Vivien had never seen his jovial face so grave. . . . Suddenly the sour atmosphere of the sealed room swept over her like a stinking dun wave. She felt on the verge of fainting as the spark of suspicion, smoldering in her brain since she had heard Edda's story, now flared up in distrust of John.

She remembered that she had accepted him without credentials, other than his alleged British birth. That claim might be false, and even were it genuine, nationality excludes no one from the ranks of traitors. As a matter of cold fact, she had been attracted to him so strongly that she had walked voluntarily into his net.

She kissed her great-uncle fondly and when she reached the door, she looked back at him, wondering whether she would see him again. Then she rang for the lift which jerked her up to her room. Without a plan and not daring to pause for reflection, she rammed on her hat and dragged on her coat. Her sole provision for the future was to put her passport and money into her handbag. Then she ran downstairs, hurried thru the lounge and passed thru the door out of the Monopol.

When she was in the street, she boarded the first tramcar. She did not know its destination, but, when the conductor came to collect her fare, she had presence of mind to say "All the way."

In a half comatose state, which was the aftermath of her brainstorm, she gazed thru the dirty glass at the parks, the avenues, the groups of statuary and fountains. Large houses, which still appeared grand and imposing when veiled with the first blue blur of twilight, gave way to meaner streets and blocks of apartment flats.

Suddenly she thought of old Steiner, and for the first time realized that he might pay the penalty of her disappearance.

"They won't believe he knows nothing," she thought. "I must go back—at once."

Because she was going to her doom, the return journey seemed much shorter. After she had leaped off the tram, she waited only a few minutes before the return car clanked along the misted road. She boarded it and then sat, sunken in depression, until brighter and more frequent lights flashed past and she realized that they were passing thru the main avenues.

It was while they were waiting for the traffic signals to change color that something happened—something as hideously unnatural as an evil dream, where a friend turns suddenly into an enemy. Suddenly she saw John in the street, standing on the pavement curb. Acting on impulse, she jumped from the car and ran toward him. Apparently he recognized her for he half waved to her before he hailed a taxi and was driven away.

"He can't look me in the eyes," she thought bitterly. "Well, that's told me all I want to know."

When she entered the Monopol, she was dead to sensation. Sustained by courage bred of force of habit, she smiled and chatted to acquaintances on her way thru the lounge. Afterward, she put on her overall, as usual, and helped the chef in his preparations for the dinner. When the meal was being served, she was kept busy in the restaurant, greeting old patrons, laughing at their jokes, consulting the tastes of new clients.

Again she watched the clock as the hands left the numeral eight and began to travel imperceptibly around the dial. When they reached the half hour, she knew that at any moment she might be interrogated.

But altho she expected a summons, when it came, it took her by surprise. She was listening with unfeigned interest to a stout man's account of his triplets and looking at the snaps of three super babies, when the waiter touched her arm.

"Pardon, Fraulein," he said. "A gentleman wishes to speak to you in the lounge."

Her heart leaped and then seemed to stop as she forced herself to walk out of the restaurant. When she entered the lounge, it was nearly deserted, so that the first person she saw was the Prussian, Von Ringner. Because her sight suddenly blurred, his figure appeared magnified and inhuman as a statue, devoid of all natural feeling.

"You asked for me," she said with desperate courage.

His smiling eyes menaced her with the terror of a cat playing with its prey.

"Fraulein," he asked softly, "who gave you that message for me?"

She moistened her lips to utter—for the first time—the lie that must be repeated, while her endurance availed, or to the end.

"I don't know. I never saw him before."

His smile broadened as he patted her shoulder.

"Wise girl," he said, "you know when to forget. Good. I will buy you something pretty."

Snapping his fingers at Edda—who produced a withered bunch of Neapolitan violets from the flowerstall—he presented them to Vivien, clicked his heels and marched out of the lounge. . . .

John Tells Vivien About Day's Activities

She stood staring after him in dazed wonder as she fastened the violets to her dress. While she was fumbling with them, John passed thru the revolving doors and walked toward the girls.

"I see you've been decorated. Who's my rival? Well, I've had a successful day. What about a drink?"

As Vivien walked beside him to a table in a distant corner, he spoke to her in an undertone.

"Never run after me again in the street. It might give a wrong impression and attract unwelcome attention to yourself. I'm not safe to know intimately."

"You cut me," she reproached him.

"You? Never. I only want to protect. . . . But I gather, from the violets, that your gentleman friend approved your discretion?"

"Yes. I can't understand it, John. I made a terrible blunder."

"I know, and it's all been taken care of. Our Mr. X reported to me. It was stinking luck—the sort of thing which would only happen once in a hundred times. After this, I shall have to work out a foolproof method of identification."

"Was the nice second man Mr. X?"

"Of course. We don't mention names. He tumbled to your bluff and called the tea party off. He told me you were like an old timer. Nice work."

"The snag was this," went on John, "it put you on the spot. Von Ringner would know that no girl would dare to play a practical joke on him and he would make it his business to find out who was behind you. I couldn't stand for that. . . . I've been on the job all day, saving you. My hat, what a day."

"What happened?"

"Nothing much. Von Ringner & Co. turned up at 103 Postgasse, on the stroke of 8. They found it dark and shut up. A man stood in the doorway, expecting them. He pushed a parcel into Von Ringner's hand, whispered what it was and then cleared off."

"Wasn't he followed?"

"Definitely no. Von Ringner loves his stomach—and the Black Market penalties are stringent. You see, I fixed up a pleasant and natural solution of the mystery. Food. Food—the one subject about which no questions are asked."

John tossed off his drink and laughed again.

"He'll look on it as a bribe—necessarily anonymous. He'll probably connect it with the next person to hint at preferential treatment. But nothing will be said. Some other blighter will get the credit for my day's hard labor. . . . And how. Every hour of the day. I've bought, I've begged, I've borrowed—I've even stolen. Nothing too small to swell the main amount. You must bribe handsomely or not at all."

"What was it?" asked Vivien.

"Butter."

As their laughter rang out she looked at him with shining eyes.

"What a thrill it is," she whispered. "And you and I are in it together."

Turning to a guest who drew near—as tho to share the joke—she pointed to a vile caricature of an Englishman in an illustrated paper.

"Mr. Vanderpant was showing me this funny picture," she said. "But he won't believe me when I tell him I'm English."

Then the man joined in their laughter. . . . But the eyes of both John and Vivien were dreamy. He was thinking of the future. Some day. . . . And she was hearing faint far-away thuds, all beating in time together.

A vast underground army was marching on to victory.

Somebody Whispered

they'd be there watching to see that I got it.

"They wanted to know where I had Miss Marshall. I told them the Lake Crescent, apartment A. I even gave them the telephone number. What the hell? If anybody ever tries to crash that mob the coroner will think the body is a lead anchor. And somebody might hear them telephoning. Then I told them them and me ought to get together. I wanted to find out who they were. I wanted to turn them over to the law. But they're smart. They laughed at me. So right after I talked to them, I had one of my boys call you.

"Here's what you do. You call O'Malley. Now. Tell him to tell his pal, Capt. Mercer, to fill Union station with cops and arrest anybody that talks to me or that they think looks like a kidnaper. While the police are doing that, see that O'Malley meets you in apartment A, Lake Crescent apartments, where you'll be with Miss Marshall. I got that all fixed. My best driver's at the wheel of my fastest car. It's at the curb in front of this joint, waiting for you. I guess that's the works."

"Monoco," Jim acknowledged. "I guess I owe you one."

"Don't mention it," the racketeer said formally. "You throw a nice punch."

The door closed gently behind him. Jim telephoned his own apartment and got Dan there.

"I've located Ann," Jim told him. "Tony Monoco helped me. He snatched her. He's on his way now to Union station to pick up 10 thousand dollars the Whisperer promised him for the job."

"Somebody whispered again, eh?" Dan commented. "Maybe this time, they put their foot in it."

"They did," Jim informed him. "Monoco wants you to tell Capt. Mercer to get plenty of cops over to the station right away. Maybe he can pick up the Whisperer. But meanwhile you're to meet me at the Lake Crescent, apartment A, where Monoco took Ann when he snatched her, with her full consent."

"O. K.," Dan agreed and repeated the address. "What'll I do with Dick?"

"Is he all right?"

"He's sober."

"Bring him with you."

He replaced the telephone and put on his coat and overcoat and hat. Then he and Nick walked to the door and stepped thru it into the Krazy Kat.

Two gunmen swung in behind them as they walked thru the corridor from Tony's office to the bar and thru it to the sidewalk.

A long gray car waited with purring engine at the curb. The two gunmen stepped ahead and opened the door. Jim and Nick climbed into the car and sat in the back seat. The gunmen took their places in the two side seats. The driver and another gunman sat up in front.

"O. K." said one of their escort.

The big car slid away from the curb and crawled eastward. At Michigan, it turned north and gathered speed but not too much of it. Their escort faced to the front but Nick took his automatic from his overcoat pocket and held it in his hand.

"I don't like this setup," he said thru lips that didn't move. "It looks like a one way ride."

"If it were a one way ride," Jim pointed out, "we'd be sitting in front. The torpedoes would be behind us."

The speed of the car diminished almost imperceptibly. They nosed toward the curb. The huge pile that was the Lake Crescent apartments loomed ahead. The car sighed to a stop.

The three gunmen, their escort and the one on the front seat, oozed out of the car at either side. One left the curb door open and Jim and Nick followed them. The three were already walking ahead of them abreast. They walked fast. Jim and Nick followed them at the same speed. They passed five men who walked toward them at intervals. All were gunmen. They turned in at the Lake Crescent and saw a man leaning at either side of the entrance.

The three accompanying them were already in the elevator. They stepped into it. It shot up one flight. They got out and followed their escort to an apartment door near which another gunman lounged. One of the escort rang the bell. The door swung open immediately.

Jim took a deep breath and walked thru it. He continued into the living room. At first he didn't see Ann. Then she rose from the couch on which she had been sitting. She was radiant.

He looked around the apartment. It was richly and tastefully furnished. The carpet was thick. Costly curtains lined the windows which faced east and Lake Michigan. He saw no one. Even Nick had vanished.

"There is only one man in the apartment, itself," Ann explained, "and he's invisible. I've only seen him twice all evening. But the others are all around it. I never saw so many quiet, deadly looking men. And they're rigidly disciplined. Like an army. None of them ever talks. Tony's been wonderful. He treated me like a queen."

Dan said, "It's good to see you again, Miss Marshall."

"That means you were worried," she smiled. "I wasn't, you see. I knew I was perfectly all right."

Dick didn't say anything. He took her hand and devoured her with his eyes.

They heard a telephone ringing somewhere in the apartment and a moment later, the invisible man materialized and came to Ann.

"There's a call for you, Miss Marshall," he said softly.

"For me!" Ann repeated. "But how can that be? Who would know I was here?"

"It ain't the boss," the gunman pointed out, "so it can only be one other."

"O!" Ann gasped, and her eyes were bright. "Where's the telephone?"

The gunman disappeared and reappeared again. He was carrying a telephone on a long cord and handed her the instrument while he held the base.

"Hello," Ann said faintly out of a deep silence while Jim leaned over to listen.

"Miss Marshall," the Whisperer whispered. "I am going to kill you. I warned Jim Hallard to get off this case. He is still on it. So you die."

Out of the ambush in Jim's mind emerged the murderer. Jim looked at Dan and grinned.

"You think you know, too?" Dan asked. "They made one call too many."

"Wait!" Dick Barcland said suddenly. They looked at him. He was staring blankly. His eyes widened. "Ann!" he yelled, "and Jim! I remember where Dad put those papers. It was in a cabinet. He walked over to the exact center of——"

"Easy!" Dan warned. "Take it easy, boy. Could you find it if we went to the apartment now?"

"Certainly," Dick told him. "I know exactly where that hidden spring is."

"Then let's go down and press it," Dan chuckled, "because I got a hunch we'll meet the Whisperer there."

"I'm coming, too," Ann insisted.

Nick and the invisible man appeared from the kitchen. The invisible man said:

"The boss said the car is yours until you don't need it any more. The driver's the best. I hope you catch that rat."

They moved swiftly out of the place and into the waiting limousine.

"I knew I'd remember it!" Dick boasted hysterically. "It's been right on the edge of my memory. You helped me, Ann. Only for you I never would have remembered."

Jim was leaning over to whisper in Nick's ear.

"When we get into the apartment, move so that you can guard the front entrance," he told him. "Stay there. Keep that door covered. I think that's where the break will come."

The big limousine slithered southward.

What Has Gone Before

Miles Barcland, Chicago financier and blackmailer, is killed after a whispered telephone death threat. Before his death he gives a friend, Paul Brand, documents concerning Tony Monoco, racketeer; Duke Herndon, bootlegger; Drake Royal, gambler, and a woman named "Elfreda." These papers would give any of the four a reason for killing Barcland. He also has been blackmailing Ann Marshall into breaking her engagement with Jim Hallard, oil executive and silent partner of Dan O'Malley, detective, and marrying Barcland's son Dick. Basis of the blackmail is letters written by Ann's married sister, Margaret Severn. Jim, attempting to get the letters, finds Barcland murdered and Dick in the room drunk. Dick faintly remembers several women being there and that he was struck by the murderer's gun. Eventually Lucille Day, Tony's girl and singer at his night club, admits she is "Elfreda." Brand hires O'Malley to handle the case, and he and Jim get the documents. Ann, a psychologist, is working on Dick to help him remember who struck him when she is kidnaped. Dick, trying desperately to remember, decides to go to his father's apartment.

"Stop thief!"

INSTALMENT XIII.

THE long, black limousine silently coursed after the gray taxicab like a black panther after a hare. They moved northward at speed thru the sleeping city and the quiet, starless night. Dick Barcland, the quarry, had no suspicion of the sinister shadow following so closely in his wake.

He was too busy considering the possibilities that lay before him. For he was sure now that his mere presence in his father's bedroom would focus in his mind the complete picture of his father disposing of Margaret Severn's letters. Better than that, it might even solidify the misty shape that had struck him down that night at the threshold of the room in which his father was at that moment dying. And then, he would know his father's murderer.

The driver turned his cab east, ran a block and then turned north again. A minute afterward, he swung it to the curb.

"Here you are, Chief," he announced thru the panel he had opened and holding up the meter reading. "No. 36. You know. This is the joint where they knocked off Miles Barcland, the famous financier."

"I know," Dick said and handed him two one-dollar bills. "Keep the change."

"Thanks, Mister," the hackie said reverently and watched Dick as he crossed the sidewalk and entered the building taking out his key ring as he opened the front door. "Hey!" he said to himself. "Maybe that guy's mixed up in the case some way. Why, say! I bet he's young Barcland. Sure! He looks just like his picture in the papers. Well, what do you know?"

He swung his car away from the curb and made a U-turn in the deserted street. He turned west on the first street and chuckled at the scare that big limousine had given him. As he turned south again, the big limousine was creeping slowly north on Rush street. It drew up to the curb and came to a stop about 20 feet south of No. 36. It stayed there, its engine purring.

Dick Barcland climbed the dark stairs and little icy needles of fear pricked his scalp. He hoped he wouldn't meet a policeman, assigned to guard the apartment. He didn't. The police guard had been removed. With his keys in his hand, he reached the top landing and looked down the long shadowy corridor lighted by one dim light. It was quiet with the eerie quiet that pervades a sleeping building and he paused a moment at the door of apartment 3A while fear battered at his will.

He didn't know what he might meet beyond that door. With the abnormally alert senses of a drunkard who has abruptly quit drinking, he leaned against it, "feeling" for any presence. Nothing but silence came out to him. A vacuum, empty of all living matter, established itself by a lack of all vibration. Resolutely, he thrust his key in the lock and opened the door and stepped inside, holding the door wide open behind him. After a moment, he switched on the lights.

"Want another, Boss?" Nick Serento asked and started to reach for the percolator.

"No," Jim refused shortly.

Jim wondered how Dick was making out in the living room now, trying for the hundredth time to dig him or her out of his memory.

It suddenly occurred to Jim that Dick was being pretty quiet about it. He walked out of the kitchen and into the dining room and glancd at the living room couch where he had last seen him a little while ago. The couch was empty. He searched the apartment swiftly, every nook and corner of it, except the kitchen.

Nick moved lithely into the front hall. One look at the table told him the story.

"Yeah," he corroborated. "He scrammed. He took his hat and coat with him."

Jim reached the table in four long strides. "Give me my hat and coat," he ordered.

"Sure!" Nick said, reaching for them. "Where are we going, Boss?"

Jim stared at him and waved the hat and coat away. He realized that if he left the apartment, he might never get the kidnap call. And if he missed it . . . He picked up the telephone and dialed the homicide bureau and asked for Dan O'Malley. When Dan came on, "Dick's gone," Jim told him. "We left him in the living room. He took his hat and coat and went."

"Yeah?" Dan seemed mildly interested. "Well, don't you go after him. You don't know where he's going and that snatcher might call up. I'll tell Ed. He'll get action. Take it easy."

The telephone clicked. Jim replaced it.

In the homicide bureau, Dan laid down the telephone.

"Young Barcland beat it out of Jim Hallard's apartment, Ed," he announced casually.

"What?" Mercer roared. "He'll be murdered as sure as there's a Sunday! He knows too much. Well, I ain't waiting on this one." He pressed a button and when the police clerk entered with pad and pencil, "General alarm for Richard Barcland," Capt. Mercer intoned. "Height about 5, 7. Weight 125 pounds. Dark complexion. Small mustache—" The clerk wrote it all down.

Dick stood and gazed around the living room, lighted by the overhead lights which he had just switched on from the hall, and trembled as he saw that in it nothing had been changed.

He moved across the room and sat down on the couch and buried his face in his hand. He was lying here, he told himself, when he heard the thuds, the shots. He concentrated and listened, reaching down deep in his memory. They came, "thud—thud," muffled but recognizable. He lifted his face and started toward the bedroom door, waiting for the killer to emerge. Nothing happened. The silence continued to press against him.

Vision of Killer Will Not Emerge for Dick

After a long moment, he knew that his coming here had been fruitless. The killer would not emerge. Maybe it never had reached his consciousness. Maybe it had never been any more than a misty shape, slashing him hard across the face to knock him senseless.

But his father had been no misty shape. He had been big and solid and standing in the bedroom with his back to the door, putting a sheaf of letters—someplace.

Dick moved toward the bedroom. He stopped at the threshold and peered into the darkness. Putting forth his hand, he groped for the wall switch. Found it. Pressed. The room was flooded with light.

The bed was tumbled. A thin brown stain stretched from midfloor to the desk. A brush, a comb, a collar, and a tie were on the dresser. He shut his eyes and tried to summon his father. He put all his strength into the task, forced all his senses to a point within him. And heard a faint sound.

It came from behind him and outside. It was of a key turning softly in a lock. There came a faint, ghostly breeze, as when the atmosphere of one room rushed in upon another. Dick knew the apartment door had been opened. And closed. Some one was in the place with him.

He was paralyzed with terror. He couldn't move. He stood with his back to the intruder, staring over his shoulder. The hall switch clicked and the living room was blotted out by darkness.

Silence in the apartment was ended by a shot. Instinctively, Dick cringed as a hot wind singed his scalp and his hat danced on his head. The groan of a Klaxon came out of the air. Two long blasts, two short ones. Another bullet riffled thru the left side of his coat. It broke his paralysis.

His hand swept light out of the bedroom. In the darkness, he bent low and ran, whimpering, thru the dining room into the kitchen. Even as he fumbled at the outside door, the front door closed softly.

Dick swung open the back door and dove for the steps down which he hurtled. He ran thru the backyard as windows went up and voices behind him. "Stop thief!" he heard, as he turned, running up the alley. In front of the building, the long, black limousine oozed away from the curb and moved northward, gathering speed.

Jim Hallard was pacing the floor of the living room while Nick Serento watched him, his hard eyes glittering. Jim began to curse softly, almost religiously.

Something banged against the door. Nick looked and moved immediately toward it. He switched off the light and spoke thru the door. "Who is it?" he demanded.

"Me. Dick Barcland. Let me in." Nick opened the door and Dick fell past him. He headed for the couch as the lights went up. "The killer!" he gasped. "He just shot at me in Dad's apartment. See?" He took off his hat. A thin trickle of blood ran down over his left eye.

A half hour later, Dick's story was told and his nerves had been calmed by two stiff drinks of whisky. He sat on the couch and watched Jim who, restless again, was pacing up and down.

The telephone rang and Nick moved toward it. But Jim raised his hand. "I'll take it in the bedroom, Nick," he said and went in there and lifted the receiver.

"Hallard?" a heavy, dead, expressionless voice inquired.

"Get down to the Krazy Kat," the voice told him. "Ask Tony Monoco what he knows about the Marshall snatch. And don't let him kid you. He knows plenty."

The instrument clicked and Jim laid the telephone down. "Nick!" he called.

Nick already was in the room. His face was impassive but his little black eyes were glowing. "I heard him, Boss," he said, "on the hall phone." The glow had reached his voice. He took Jim's automatic from a dresser drawer, removed the clip, saw that it was full and shoved it home again. "I'll be right with you," he said and faded out of the room, carrying the gun in his hand.

Jim took the smaller gun, the one he had loaned to Ann, from the drawer and checked the fact that it was loaded. He walked with it in his hand into the living room. Dick was standing in front of the couch, facing him.

"What is it?" he demanded and his eyes dropped to the gun in Jim's hand.

"I just got a tip," Jim told him. "I'm investigating it. I want you to wait here. Dan O'Malley will be along any minute. He'll have a key. Don't answer the door or the telephone. Here's a gun in case anybody bothers you. Will you promise to wait here for me?"

"Sure," Dick promised, "and I wish you luck."

Tony Monoco was affable but wary. He was as bright and shiny as ever in his tuxedo as he stood just inside the bar of his successful Krazy Kat. His cold eyes surveyed Jim and Nick over his smile. He said in his soft heavy voice:

"Why, certainly, Mr. Hallard. I'd be glad to talk to you. In my office? We'll go this way and avoid the club itself." He led them along a narrow hall which opened across from the door of his private office. The two body guards rose from their nearby table and came toward them.

"It's all right," Tony told them brusquely. With a quick thrust of the key on his chain, he unlocked the door and held it open for them to enter. He followed and the door closed softly behind them shutting out all sound. He walked to his desk and sat down in its chair and waved his hand toward other chairs. "Sit down," he said in a tone from which all affability had fled. "What's on your mind?"

"Ann Marshall," Jim told him bluntly as he slid out of his overcoat. "Where is she?"

"You're nuts," the gangster told him flatly. "Why should I know where she is?"

But Jim Hallard was playing poker for the highest stakes of his life.

"She was snatched," he bluffed. "You did it. You're telling me, if I have to beat it out of you. Get his gun, Nick. Move him away from that signal button on the floor."

Nick's gun was pressing against Monoco's side. With a quick deft motion, he lifted Tony's gun from its shoulder holster and slapped him briskly down along his body. With the pressure of his gun, he moved him toward the center of the room.

"I knew a chance like this would come some day, Hallard," he grinned, removing his tuxedo coat and draping it carefully over a chair. "The last time I tied with you, I didn't do so good and it's the only mark against me. You think you can keep your gorilla from shooting me when I knock you cold?"

"It's a promise," he said coldly, taking off his own coat. "You hear that, Nick. Cover the door. Blast anybody who tries to come thru it. Now, Monoco, where is Ann Marshall?"

"Where is she?" he repeated and took a left in the mouth.

Ten minutes later, they were still fighting. The fight had gone all over the room. Eight years of hate was behind every punch either threw. But the punches had lost much of their steam. Both men were dead tired. Both were cut about the face. Jim's lips were torn. His nose felt as if it was broken. Monoco's eyes and mouth were puffed. His vest and shirt were ripped. Jim suddenly drove his fist into his face. "Where is she?" he muttered. Monoco's uppercut caught him fair on the chin and he sat down. Hard. He swung drunkenly to his feet, punching with both hands. The punches landed. Monoco grunted and laughed.

"God, you're tough!" he admired. "All right. You say I'm as tough as you are and I'll tell you where she is."

Jim opened his battered eyes with difficulty. He couldn't believe his ears. Tony Monoco stood swaying in front of him. He was grinning thru his broken lips.

"You're tough," Jim granted. "Where is Miss Marshall?"

"Let's sit down before we fall down," Tony suggested and suited the action to the word.

Jim staggered to a chair and sat facing him. Nick moved, automatic in hand, so that he covered them and the door beyond them.

"You've got to get this straight and fast," Monoco said urgently. "Is your head clear?"

"Nick will get what I don't," Jim declared, watching him.

"All right," Monoco rubbed his jaw and moved it from side to side. "I framed this fight. It had to be. We both had to be marked up good because we're dealing with a smart agent."

Jim's swollen lips tightened. "You're a liar," he said wearily.

The racketeer shook his head. "Figure it out," he said patiently. "Who do you think phoned you an hour ago and told you to come here? One of my men. But I've got something better." He lifted a letter from his desk and handed it to Jim. Jim saw his name on the envelope in Ann's handwriting. He tore it open and took out a note.

"Jim," Ann had written, "Tony is all right. Do exactly as he says."

"Here's the setup," Tony talked fast. "At noon today when I came down here, I found a flat key pasted on a card. It was in an envelope addressed to me. Whoever sent it must have seen me come in because I was still looking at it, trying to dope out what the hell it was when the phone rang.

Whisperer Asks Tony to Kidnap Ann Marshall

"When I answered, some one whispered my name. I said it was me. Then, all in a whisper, they told me the key would open a box that had 10 grand in it. It was mine if I'd snatch Miss Marshall tonight. If I didn't, they'd see that the police found out about that little black book you got and a lot of other raps they had on me. So I thought I'd kidnap her."

"Why?" Jim snapped.

"If I didn't, somebody else would for 10 grand," Tony explained. "And she might get hurt or even bumped off. Anyway, I don't like kidnapers. A kidnaper is a rat. He makes it tough for everybody in the rackets. Why, after the Lindbergh case, it was hard for anybody to make a buck. Besides, I don't like to be pushed around. If I stood for this, they'd be putting pressure on me again.

"They said not to pull any fast stuff because they'd turn over what they had to the law. And they've got plenty. They said the best time to snatch her was right after dark. They'd know when I did it and then they'd tell me where this dough was.

"The kidnaping had to be on the up-and-up. It was. We walked right in tonight and grabbed the maid in the kitchen. Then I went into the studio and laid it on the line to Miss Marshall. She played along. We snatched her and took her to the classiest hideout in Chi. She's there, now, waiting. When you get your hands on her, keep them there. Don't let her out of your sight while that rat's loose."

"Is she all right?" Jim asked.

"Well, she ain't improving herself none socially," Tony grinned crookedly. "Twenty of my hoods are covering the apartment, the building, and all around it. Nobody but you and O'Malley and whoever you bring can get near her. We ain't taking any chances with whoever it was whispered to me.

"They whispered again here an hour ago. They whispered that they knew about the kidnaping and the key I had fitted parcel locker No. 9 in the Union station. They said the dough was in there. Ten grand. They said I was to pick it up at 2 o'clock. That's in half an hour. They said

Play About Women in Uniform Is Premature

Critic Has Slim Praise for 'Vickie'

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK, [Special].—After this brutal war is over, some gifted playwright is pretty sure to write a piece about women in uniform. It may be about the WAACs, or the WAVES, or the AWVs or any other professional or amateur organization designed to help with the war effort. And it is pretty sure to make sport of the phonies as well as to laud the work of the nobler sisters.

Uta Hagen.
[Vandamm Photo.]

This, however, would not seem to be the time for such a play, be it farce or drama. Certainly it is not the time for one called "Vickie," which was produced last week. No time would seem to be a good time for "Vickie." Yet the possibilities of the theme of women war workers, their noble aspirations in conflict with their feminine vanities, are plainly suggested.

• • •

Vickie is one who joined the AWCs [known as the AWKs] with the grudging consent of her young husband. Long before she got her uniform, she was practicing first aid on the poor fellow, and naturally neglecting most of her housewifely duties.

• • •

But it was when she became an emergency godmother to a couple of stray privates that her husband began to rebel. And when the chief of the AWCs wrapped sandwiches in the blueprints of his invention for a war machine that Washington was about to consider, he was fit to be tied.

You will be able to envision the rest when I tell you that the man who came from Washington to see the prints was mistaken by the AWCs for a spy.

• • •

Vickie turned Mata Hari in the hope of drugging the visitor's senses with her sex lure, preliminary to turning him over to the FBI before the worst could happen. This experiment proved a little more than Vickie could manage. The other AWCs came to her aid. They trussed up the Washington investigator, stuffed him in a closet to keep for the FBI.

In the end Vickie agreed not to tell the man's wife anything of his intentions if he would buy her husband's invention. That brought the curtain down. S. M. Herzig is the author.

José Ferrer, who had a season's success with a revival of "Charley's Aunt" a year ago, is playing the husband, and his wife, Uta Hagen, is the Vickie. They were the two who played Iago and Desdemona to Paul Robeson's Othello last summer.

The Stage Door canteen expected to face several problems when it opened its doors to service men on their evenings off in New York. There certainly would be a few who would try to "date" their hostesses. There might be some trouble with handsome hunks of men who insisted on cutting in on favorite dancing partners without any regard for the rules of the dancing floor. There might even be some danger that the race problem would rear an ugly head or two.

Now, after months of really phenomenal success, the canteen executives smile tolerantly when you ask them if these problems have been taken care of satisfactorily. They have.

• • •

If a service man who has been drinking too many cherry phosphates or something thinks he will ask the cutie with whom he is dancing when she will be thru at the canteen, and where she will be waiting for him, nobody can stop him. But what happens? First, the hostess laughs gayly and tells him about the hostess rules. If he persists she, too, advises the correction squad and the offender listens to the reading of a riot act, accompanied by suggestions of what will happen if he doesn't behave.

There are Negro hostesses to dance with the Negro soldiers and sailors, and there has been no trouble about this arrangement either.

Once or twice a service man full of fighting vitamins has had a notion that it would be amusing really to start something, but he has found himself out on the street before he had time to decide where he would start.

The canteen could, if it wanted to, paraphrase Earl Carroll and put up a sign reading: "Thru these portals have passed some of the toughest soldiers in this country's service. Boy, they're wonderful!"

Add to the unusual anniversaries of the period that of Olsen and Johnson. Last Monday night they began the fifth year of their virtually continuous service on Broadway. They did take a few weeks out to travel to California to make a picture, but otherwise they have been uninterruptedly active and noisy since the night of Sept. 28, 1938, when they made their first explosive entrance in the first "Hellzapoppin."

Ole Olsen.
[Seymour Photo.]

Their record is a little like that of "Abie's Irish Rose," in that it still stands as a complete surprise, even to its most confident promoters. Their first show was half good and half bad, and so were the reviews that greeted it. But there was a public waiting for their type of boisterous clowning, a public made up partly of young theatergoers trained, the last 15 years, on slapstick screen farce, and partly of experienced playgoers who had wearied of heavier drama. This would be the public that boasts of its defiant confession: "When we go to the theater, we want to laff."

• • •

"Hellzapoppin" played 1,404 performances in New York before it was withdrawn. With their profits, Olsen and Johnson produced a second zany revue, "The Streets of Paris," which started Abbott and Costello on their way and brought Carmen Miranda to notice, in addition to starring Bobby Clark and Luella Gear.

This season the rough house comedians treated themselves to a new Broadway explosion, "Sons o' Fun," which so far has been played for 350 performances, and doubtless will go thru the season.

• • •

And what have Olsen and Johnson done with their money? You'd be surprised. Johnson has bought an extensive stock farm in Westchester, on which he raises virtually everything, including a healthy crop of week-end parties. Olsen has acquired a variety of real estate investments, a restaurant, a skating rink, and a housing development.

To salve their consciences and do their bit, they have been constantly active in relief benefits. As far back as the winter of 1940, they took their troupe to Fort Dix for a Sunday show. The next summer they sold it to the marines at Quantico, Va., for three cheers and a tiger. A few weeks back they packed up again and went to Buffalo on a bond and morale raising show at the Buffalo stadium.

This last week they topped their contributions by eliminating their Wednesday night show entirely and turning the whole "Sons o' Fun" troupe over to the "We're All in It" army show at Madison Square Garden. Altogether a pretty good four years' work.

Producer to Enlist.

A new comedy entitled "The Great Big Doorstep" will be Herman Shumlin's last production for the duration of the war. After he gets the play onto the stage, he plans to volunteer for army service.

Ballet Groups to Offer Some Novelties Here

Between the two top ranking ballet companies, Ballet theater and the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, the forthcoming season will provide several interesting novelties in the field of dance composition. For the first time Leonide Massine has turned his choreographic gifts over to Ballet theater instead of to the Monte Carlo group. From his fecund brain two new works have taken shape. "Aleko," danced to Frederick A. Stock's orchestration of the Tschaikowsky A minor piano trio, is based upon the plot of Rachmaninoff's opera of the same name, and has decors by Marc Chagall.

Mexico provides new story material for Mr. Massine in "Don Domingo." The music is drawn from various piano pieces by Sylvestre Revueltas. Diego Rivera, the most famous of Mexican painters, has designed the scenery and costumes. The story has been adapted by Alfonso Reyes from a comedy by Alarcon.

• • •

For the last of its three scheduled novelties, Ballet theater will present the late Michel Fokine's final work, "Helen of Troy," which was completed in Mexico City shortly before the great choreographer's death on Aug. 22. Not a novelty, but nevertheless of major interest, will be a restaging of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" in a final authoritative by Fokine, the original creator of the ballet. Other revivals in the Ballet theater repertory will be "Coppelia," in a one act condensation of the Délibès classic by Simon Semenoff, with decors by Roberta Montenegro, and restoration of Eugene Loring's "Billy the Kid," which has a score by Aaron Copland.

• • •

The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo offers two brand new works. "Snow Maiden," staged by Bronislawa Nijinska, surprisingly enough has music by Glazounoff, instead of the expected Rimsky-Korsakoff score; the decors are by Boris Aronson. A new American ballet, "Rodeo," has been choreographed by Agnes De Mille to a new score by Aaron Copland.

Among the leading Ballet theater dancers this season are Alicia Markova, Irina Baronova, Anton Dolin, Karen Conrad, Nora Kaye, Lucia Chase, Annabelle Lyon, Yura Lazovsky, George Skibine, and Ian Gibson. Antal Dorati continues as conductor.

In the roster of the Monte Carlo ballet are included the names of Mr. Massine, Alexandra Danilova, Mia Slavanska, Nathalie Krassovska, Igor Youskevitch, Andre Eglevsky, Lubov Roudenko, Frederic Franklin, and Mlada Mladova. Franz Allers will be the conductor.

'Tobacco Road' Opens for Another Broadway Run

"Tobacco Road," which set up an all-time record in New York with an unbroken run of 3,180 performances, has reopened on Broadway after 16 months' absence. Returning to the Forrest theater, where most of the earlier engagement took place, the play features John Barton in the principal rôle of Jeeter Lester. Altho Barton has played the part on the road for five years, this is his first New York appearance in it. After the New York return engagement the play will go on tour, altho there is no reason to expect that Chicago authorities will lift the ban imposed upon it many years ago.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1942: By Ely Culbertson.]

Certain problems that arise at duplicate bridge do not even enter the picture at rubber bridge. In that sense the rubber bridge player is fortunate; he does not have to worry about "extra tricks" and therefore can hew to the sole objective of fulfilling or defeating the contract, as the case may be. Consider a hand like the one below. At duplicate, the proper defense would be questionable; at rubber bridge it was simplicity itself.

North, dealer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened his fourth highest diamond, the five spot. East won with the ace and returned the queen. West, whose imagination went only so far and no further, followed suit with the deuce, thereby showing his partner that he had started with a five and not a four card suit, and of course, strongly inviting a continuation of the suit. Unfortunately, neither the announcement nor the invitation did East any good, for the simple reason that he lacked the third diamond necessary for coöperation. Forced to shift, East made the best return of a low spade. Declarer did not tempt fate by taking the spade finesse to the jack; he promptly jumped up with the ace and knocked out the club ace. West cashed his diamond king but then it was all over, and the defenders had been held to three diamond tricks and one club.

It is obvious, of course, that the contract should have been defeated by the simple expedient of West's overtaking his partner's diamond queen and clearing the suit by continuing with the nine spot. Indeed, it is difficult to excuse West's failure to make this play. With the club ace and guarded spade queen in his own hand, it was the next thing to a certainty that declarer could not approach nine tricks without clearing the club suit. There was a chance, of course, that East had started with three diamonds, and therefore that it would not be necessary to overtake the queen and make South a present of the jack, but at rubber bridge this should not have been given even the faintest consideration. One way, West could be sure of defeating the contract; the other way was, to put it mildly, questionable.

Had this hand occurred at duplicate, the overtake of East's diamond queen would have offered some slight question, inasmuch as West might be able to defeat the contract an extra trick by failing to overtake [if East had a third diamond].. But even at duplicate, the advantage of surely defeating the contract one trick, over the possibility of defeating it two tricks, would make the safety play enormously to be preferred.

Hearts are trump and South leads. North and South are to win six tricks against any defense.

Solution.

South leads a spade. If West covers, North wins and leads two rounds of trumps, East discarding the club three and diamond deuce. South sheds the club. North now puts South in by returning the spade, and South leads the diamond queen. West plays the king, North discards the club, and the diamond jack falls, making South's ten good for a trick.

If West does not play spade king on the first trick, South shifts to the queen of diamonds; West covers, South trumps, and leads two rounds of trumps. East can discard the club three, and then must let go the diamond. South discards the club, West a diamond. When North leads the spade five, West is forced to lead the diamond to South.

Big Week Ahead in Chicago Night Life Sector

Chico Marx to Bring New Band to Blackhawk

By Will Davidson.

Night spots, like sun spots, seem to reach their periods of greatest activity all at once. And like Stephen Leacock's ubiquitous cowboy, we café reporters must mount our steeds and ride off in all directions.

Art Kassell gave us a warmup run Friday night when he returned to the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel, but this is the week that we really canter. Wednesday night it's the Blackhawk where an enticing show awaits. Chico Marx, of the zany brothers, has a band now and will be making his Chicago café debut. That is to say, his debut with this band, for Chico grew up in Chicago theaters and cafés, playing his odd piano for a few bucks a night. There'll be what looks like the strongest Blackhawk revue in a long time to back him up, too. Woody and Betty, a really sensational roller skating team, and the Albins, two amusing dancers, are featured. From Chico's band will come Elisse Cooper, vocalist, and a sundry supply of entertainers.

The next night, which adds up to Thursday, the Chez changes its show, due to the departure of Gracie Fields. Jack Cole and his superb dance unit return, Linda Ware, singing movie starlet, George Beatty, comedian, and Sue Ryan, dancer, are the newcomers. The Robinson twins most probably will still be on hand.

Friday is the night we gallop. Over at the Sherman Woody Herman comes back for some swing blowing; out at the Edgewater Beach hotel Henry King moves suavely in, and down at the Mayfair room of the Blackstone old King Leer himself, Dwight Fiske, returns for a round of smirk work, backed by the delightful music of Neil Bondshu's orchestra.

Who cares about sleep, anyway?

• • •

The Sherman keeps one busy reviewing its parade of swing bands. The current hit there is Sonny Dunham, whose two year old band is a humdinger. With a strong brass section, Dunham amazingly produces swing of a high order without the usual complement of shattered ear drums. That he has what it takes to win the jitter kids is shown by the way they watch him work. Looking at their faces I'm reminded of Lloyd Wendt's report on Ralph [Cookie] Cook spending hours with the Field museum mummies watching gtheir wrapt expressions.

Sonny Dunham.

The floor show in the Panther room is strong, for a change. The Makebelieves, of course, are it. These three youngsters, Johnnie Russell, Phil Ericson, and Marvin Himmel, are superb pantomimists, and the effect of their mimicry, backed by the recorded voices of the notables they impersonate, is enchanting. Top number is their version of the Andrews sisters' "Sonny Boy." It is fun of a very authentic sort.

There's been a Russian ballet number added to the show since I was last there. It features Ruth Pryor, Alfred Floyd, and the College Inn models.

Camellia House of the Drake experimented with a sight act last week and came off moderately well. Lucille and Eddie Roberts are the stars, and their mind reading act is rather unusual and quite effective. The legerdemain with which they open is pretty ordinary, but is dressed up in a good natured spirit of fun. The big news from the Drake is that Val Ernie and his orchestra are back for six weeks. Val plays a lively sort of music that neatly bridges that long gap between danceable tempos and the society rhythms favored by so many small eastern orchestras.

Resident Playwright.

Emmet Lavery, author of "The First Legion," has been appointed "resident playwright" at Smith college in Northampton, Mass. Part of his thoughts, however, are now devoted to the forthcoming production of his play, "Murder in a Nunnery."

IN "JUNIOR MISS"

Judy (Lenore Thomas) and Fuffy (Sandra Holman) plot and plan their own and others' lives on the basis of movies they've seen. Result — another comedy hit at the Harris theater. The junior mister is Glenn Vernon, waiting to take Judy to a dance.

Notes of the Theater

"Heaven Can Wait," a comedy by Harry Segall which was almost produced on Broadway by several producers in 1938 and 1939, will open the fall season of the Actors Company of Chicago on Wednesday evening at their theater on the fourth floor of the building at 218 South Wabash avenue. When New York production plans fell thru, Mr. Segall, in some discouragement, sold his script to the movies, whereupon it shortly won an Oscar as the highly successful "Here Comes Mr. Jordan." The Actors Company performance, which will be the first metropolitan stage presentation of the play, will be directed by Minnie Galatzer. Sam Siegel will appear in the part Robert Montgomery played in the picture. On Oct. 21 the same play will be given by the Memphis, Tenn., Civic theater.

George Abbott's loyalty to those who have worked for him is demonstrated anew in the personnel of "Best Foot Forward," the bright musical comedy at the Studebaker. Altho much of the cast is made up of youngsters without previous theater experience, there are some Abbott veterans even in this kindergarten company. Gil Stratton Jr. made his debut as a walk-on in "Brother Rat," and later had a speaking part in "What a Life." Leila Ernst got her start in "Too Many Girls," and continued it in "Pal Joey," in which she did not appear in Chicago. Roger Hewlett acted in "Boy Meets Girl" and "Brother Rat." Judson Laire played in "All That Glitters."

Buddy Ebsen, co-starred with Skeets Gallagher in "Good Night, Ladies," at the Blackstone, originally resisted strongly his father's insistence that he should pursue a dancing career. His father owned the largest dancing school in Florida. After bad days in New York endeavoring to earn a living as a soda jerker, however, Buddy decided that dancing wasn't as bad as he had thought. A succession of night club dates with his sister Vilma sent both brother and sister on an upward trail that led ultimately to featured opportunities in the musical comedy, "Flying Colors." Moving to Hollywood, the team made its film debut in "Broadway Melody of 1936." Buddy's last previous stage appearance was in "Yokel Boy," a musical comedy which never reached Chicago.

Miss Cassidy Is Hoping for Adult Plays

By Claudia Cassidy.

Lurking on the fringes of the theater these past few weeks has left me with cause for alarm: either the shows could bear improvement or there is a dent in my passion for playgoing. I should regard the first as bearable, because curable with a smashing success or two, but the second as unthinkable, like losing one's taste for ice cream or black coffee.

Is all our showgoing fare in wartime to be devoted to the purely adolescent or the impurely raucous, or both? I could do with an adult play or two, plus a sleek musical tinged with awareness and alive with impish implications. Say the Lunts in an "Amphitryon"—I haven't caught up with "The Pirate"—and toss a coin for 1942 versions of "As Thousands Cheer" or "The Band Wagon."

These grumpish reflections are not quite fair to shows I enjoyed moderately, but they are accurate notations on a so far frustrated desire to see something so irresistible I want immediately to see it again. I am content with one view of "Best Foot Forward," which is gay and young and featherweight, with one view of "Junior Miss," an engaging comedy which on opening night was poorly paced and directed with a sledge hammer. I am more than content with a second look at "Hellzapoppin," which guffaws at gullibles ensnared by that "new, 1943" tag. I am, alas, content with no view at all of "Maid in the Ozarks," described with pictorially frigid candor by my critical friends as the squirmiest exhibition of the decade.

Yet the theater is a place I find magical, and when it lets me down I get a bleak feeling inside, like a baffled wayfarer misled by a mirage. The first playgoing oasis that greets my famished sight will earn my eternal gratitude, and probably my recurring presence.

Perhaps "Spring Again" will be such an oasis. Almost certainly the return engagement of "Arsenic and Old Lace" will be, with Boris Karloff as the hobgoblin and Josephine Hull as the lustier of the lethal ladies. Unless "Lady in the Dark," gets lost in the Civic Opera house, it ought to be welcome—and if you can hear Irving Berlin's timorous tenor in "This Is the Army," you certainly should hear Gertrude Lawrence and the long since classic "Jenny."

• • •

The return of Grace George is bound to perk up playgoing, because the theater holds no more skilled comedienne. Not too many years ago she was acting with exquisite precision opposite such experts in the light touch as Wallace Eddinger and Bruce McRae. She came back in "The First Mrs. Fraser" with the astute A. E. Matthews, and then she vanished from our midst, not even returning in her horror hit, "Kind Lady."

But now that she is returning—Oct. 12 at the Selwyn—she has not lost her taste in leading men. This time it is C. Aubrey Smith, British veteran celebrating his golden jubilee as an actor. Altho Mr. Smith plays an American in "Spring Again," he is a one man portrait of the English aristocrat. Hollywood has not so much typed him as used him to typify a type.

Partly on account of Mr. Smith's age, a round 79 which he doesn't look because of that spare frame and great hook of a nose, "Spring Again" subsided during the summer to give him a rest after 200-odd performances. So he went to Hollywood and tucked two pictures under his belt, one of them "Mark Twain," in which he, a Cambridge man, played the Chancellor of Oxford.

Meanwhile, industrious casting gossip had placed Mr. Smith at the head of a play to be made from James Ronald's "Old Soldiers Never Die," a sentimental tale of a superannuated British general who tries to hide from the war because it will have none of him, only to be routed out by a swarm of evacuated children to whom he eventually gives all, including his heart of gold. It's a bit like "Little Lord Fauntleroy" with a Cockney Cedric, and could profitably be subsidized by a handkerchief concession. Mr. Smith looks exactly like the general sounds, but apparently he isn't going to play the part, after all. Maybe it will go to Monte Woolley, Jove without thunderbolts.

• • •

Plays are curious contraptions, at best. Remember when "Black Narcissus" was going to be dramatized with the hope that Sabu would play the Little General? Well, it has been dramatized by the author, Rumer Godden, and Cornelia Otis Skinner recently tried it out. Miss Skinner plays Sister Clodagh and Thelma Schnee, who got that cup of water in her face in "The Corn Is Green," plays frustrated Sister Ruth. The Little General, most fascinating character in the novel, is relegated to the "minor rôles are adequate" class. Who talked you into that, Miss Godden?

Cabaret Notes

Keeping up with the records Griff Williams sets in the Empire room of the Palmer House is difficult, to say the least. No sooner had he broken his own single night mark than he surpassed all existing records for a week, topping even Veloz and Yolanda. . . . Don the Beachcomber's has undergone a transformation upstairs. The bar is gone. . . . The France that was has a little counterpart in the L'Aiglon restaurant, where Spirose Stamois and his Gypsy orchestra, Gwendolyn Veausell, and Isobel De Marco offer informal entertainment. . . . Dean Murphy goes to Ireland, appropriately, to entertain soldiers, when he closes at the Rainbow Garden. . . . Oct. 30 is the day Dick Jurgens returns to the Aragon, where Freddy Nagel now plays. . . . The Pan-American café's victory dance hour, the old Arthur Murray come on in slightly new dress, starts again tomorrow night in the sprightly La Salle room. . . . Emile Petti is back in the Pump room, by a very popular demand. . . . The Riverview Roller rink will stage a benefit for the Service Men's center Oct. 12.

THE FIRST DAY

By Ethel Lina White

(Copyright: 1942: By Ethel Lina White.)

"What does this 'V' mean to you?" he said.

VIVIEN heard the clock strike seven, but she dreaded to open her eyes. Last night she had gone to bed, as usual, in her small room overlooking the courtyard, at the Hotel Monopol.

She knew that when she forced her lids apart, she would see the same familiar surroundings—the dark polished wood, the crimson patterned wall paper, the veneered walnut suite, the lemon-chrome curtains. . . . But she knew too that she would awake in another world.

During the hours of darkness, the old life of carefree security had passed away, leaving her stranded in a new dimension—where she would shrink from shadows and where no locked door could bar out the enemy.

It was her first day in the underground "V" army.

Until recently the war had not invaded her orbit and instinct warned her to remain aloof. She rarely listened to the radio or read newspapers. As the squeeze gradually tightened, she closed her ears to rumors, since it was wiser to live one day at a time and concentrate on her job of running the hotel.

In spite of Anglo-American birth, she was in a privileged position, for her maternal grandmother was the sister of old Fritz Steiner who owned the Monopol. Orphaned in babyhood, she had lived in Austria for most of her life. The only time she stayed in England with her father's brother, an Oxford don, the academic atmosphere had not proved congenial. Consequently, when war broke out, she chose to remain in Austria with her friends.

In appearance, she was a hundred per cent Aryan, with pale-gold hair, worn in a long page-boy bob, and flax-blue eyes. Always cheerful, with a smile for the most difficult patron, she was also briskly efficient and an ideal hotel worker. She made no secret of her nationality and only laughed good naturedly when either of her countries was attacked.

"O, we're not quite so bad as that," she would say. "Don't forget I'm half British and the other half is American."

They always shared her joke for, since the exact relationship was forgotten, to them she was old Steiner's granddaughter.

Altho she never mentioned it, she thought of the "V" army as a sort of superrace apart from ordinary life. It was not until she met a certain hotel guest, who called himself "John Vanderpant," that she realized that girls like herself were somehow finding the courage to chalk up "V" signs, listen in to verboten radios and even to commit acts of sabotage.

Vanderpant was presumably engaged in business and he often stayed for a night at the Monopol in the course of his travels. During their brief meetings, their relationship was that of hotel manageress and patron. But she was drawn instinctively to him and she was sure that he felt a similar attraction.

Thru thinking constantly of him and watching him unobstrusively, her intuition bridged the gulf between them, so that it was no surprise one evening when he took the fateful first step which could place him in the power of the Gestapo. They were sitting together in the deserted lounge, drinking coffee and smoking, when he touched the initial brooch pinned at the neck of her gown.

"What does this 'V' mean to you?" he asked.

"'V' for 'Vivien,'" she replied. Then she lowered her voice. "What does it mean to you? You can trust me. I'm English, too."

"Too?" he repeated with his acquired continental grimace. "Well, since you've guessed my dark secret, call up your Gestapo."

When they had finished laughing at the absurd suggestion, he began to tell her about the "V" organization.

"Think of it as a trunk with branches and twigs. The Gestapo is all out to discover the twigs because they might be 'persuaded' to reveal the identity of the branches. So the hang-out of a twig is a very hush-hush affair and is changed constantly. When we want to contact him, we use our intelligence—ordinary people of all grades—who pass on our messages. You see, it would be too risky for me to try the direct approach. I might be already under suspicion and my work is too important for me to be liquidated before I've had a run for my money."

"What is your work?" she asked.

"I rake in new recruits. Great sport. If I slip up in sizing up my man or woman, I can be handed over on a plate to the police. I get a terrific kick out of it."

"Don't" she shuddered. "That's not funny. . . . Have you come here to try and contact any one in this hotel?"

"Yes. You."

While she was still gasping with horror, he explained.

"You are ideally placed to receive messages and pass them on, with all the comings and going at the bureau. No one would suspect old Steiner's granddaughter."

"No, no. I couldn't. I'm afraid."

"Good." His voice sounded relieved. "I've tried to recruit you and I've failed. Perhaps I'm glad to fail."

"Do you despise me?"

"Definitely no," he assured her. "A timid recruit is a positive danger. You can't force these things. When it grips you, you won't be able to resist it. It'll be part of you."

"What do you get out of life?" she asked.

"Excitement."

"No happiness? Won't there ever be a woman?"

"No. Verboten."

"Not even a woman who worked with you and shared your danger?"

"No." Then suddenly he smiled. "Who knows? One day, perhaps, when all this is over, there may be a cottage in the country or a flat in town. Whichever she prefers. Some day. . . ."

Vivien Oppressed by Sense of Urgency

Some day. . . . After that, it was only a question of time before her first day. . . . She opened her eyes, jumped out of bed and began to dress.

"Perhaps it was those drinks," she thought. "I'm not used to so many. I must catch John before he goes and ask him for time. I'm not backing out. All I want is time; time to get steady and used to the idea."

She felt relieved by her decision altho she was oppressed by a sense of urgency. John was due to leave the hotel early, and she might have missed him. In her impatience the lift could not take her quickly enough down to the ground floor, and directly she reached the lounge she ran across to the bureau.

"Has 52 checked out yet?" she asked.

"No," replied the clerk, glancing at the clock. "He's cutting it fine. I know my lord made a night of it for I had the joy of letting him in. You must pardon my indiscretion if he is a friend of yours."

"Every patron is a friend of the hotel, Georg," she told him.

As she looked at the youth, she realized his secret hostility bred from a sense of grievance. He was rather like a kewpie, with very light curly hair, slanting eyes and a broad permanent smile. Unfortunately, he was not so good natured as he appeared, while he was too slack to be entrusted with authority.

Her other helper, Edda, was older then herself, but she, too, could not be allowed much contact with the guests, because of bad manners and a disagreeable personality. Altho she was pure Nazi, she was dark and pallid with mean pinched lips. Not only was she envious of Vivien's blonde coloring but she was also jealous of her position as old Steiner's official granddaughter.

Her insolence usually took the form of sardonic servility. That morning she carried Vivien's coffee and dry roll to the desk and laid it beside her with a stressed "service." As she did so, John entered the lounge. His hat was on and he carried his coat and suitcase.

Because she knew that both her assistants were watching her, Vivien felt her face flush.

"Give me 52's bill, Georg," she said sharply.

As she crossed the lounge, she noticed a change in John. His lips were stern and he looked at her indifferently as tho she were a stranger. Taking the account from her, he glanced at the total with a shrug—as tho to indicate he was stung—before he spoke in a peremptory whisper.

"Something broke, last night. I'm going hell-for-leather to contact some one. . . . This item is wrong, fraulein. . . . Listen. At noon today a man will tap by a showcase. Pass him and whisper, 'Tonight at eight, one hundred and three, Postgasse.' He's 6 foot, very fair, blue eyes, blond hair with shaven sides, well dressed, scar over his eye."

While he was murmuring the description, he opened his note-case, thrust some dirty notes into her hand—and dashed thru the revolving doors. . . . Her chance of reprieve was gone.

In her confusion, she took up her cup so carelessly that the coffee slopped into her saucer and her roll fell to the carpet. Georg scooped it up and returned it to her with a low bow.

"There's this consolation, it can't fall butter-down," he remarked.

"Soon, there will be butter for all," said Edda. "You are nervous this morning, fraulein. Didn't you sleep well? You should when your stomach is full and your conscience clear."

Vivien ignored the remark and hurried away, eager to escape Edda's malicious gaze. She always worked at high pressure, but that morning she was grateful for the shortcomings of a skeleton staff. While she was engaged with the floor-housekeeper and the chef, she forgot the ordeal ahead of her. But in her constant visits to the bureau—which was the nerve center of the hotel—she was conscious of Georg and Edda as potential spies.

As the morning wore on the tension of waiting grew almost unbearable. She longed for noon, even while she dreaded the passing of every minute.

She was aroused by the sound of a sharp tapping upon glass. Looking up, she noticed a tall heavily built man who was rapping impatiently upon a showcase to attract attention. She was glancing at him indifferently—since showcases were Edda's business—when, suddenly, her heart gave a leap as she recognized John's description of the anonymous agent.

This man had a fair skin which was florid and red-veined, ice-cold blue eyes and closely-shaven hair under his smart hat. She searched for the distinctive scar and found it when he turned his head—a smallish red angry criss-cross under his left eye.

"It has to be X," she thought.

Then she glanced at the clock for confirmation and discovered that the time was nine minutes to 12. She told herself that either the clock was slow or the agent was too early. But the discrepancy was a bad jolt and made her hesitate to contact him.

Now that the minute was upon her, she dared not leave the bureau. Guilt made her feel an object of general suspicion. Every one knew and every one was watching her. Every one was waiting for her to make that fatal move which would land her in the concentration camp.

The tapping grew so insistent that it goaded her from the safety of her base. Edda went on typing her menus and Georg continued to add up his columns, in proof that they were legitimately occupied. It was up to her to give a demonstration of the swift service which was the Monopol's policy.

"If I make a mistake," she thought desperately, "I'm in for it. He'll ask questions. Questions about the address and who gave it to me. All sorts of questions. How can I explain it away with Georg and Edda listening?"

Before she could solve her problem, she had reached the showcase. The man pointed to a cigar, grunted and flicked a coin down upon the glass. As she swept it up, she realized that lives might depend on the message and whispered rapidly.

"Tonight at 8, one hundred and three, Postgasse."

Then she waited. . . . Nothing blew up. Indeed the man's reaction was as unusual as to justify her soaring confidence. Instead of staring blankly and asking her to repeat the words, he eyed her keenly and then turned nonchalantly in the direction of the restaurant.

She returned to the bureau with a springing step. Now that her message was delivered, she felt that she had exaggerated the risk. John would not entrust a dangerous commission to an untried recruit. In short, there was nothing to this spy business. It was merely as a matter of pabulum that she asked Georg a question.

"Is that man staying at the hotel for the night?"

"Yes," replied Georg, "I booked him in while you were upstairs with the boss. He's got 88."

"Good. Did you get top price?"

"Unfortunately, no. I could tell he was Prussian and naturally he must have our best suite."

"Naturally."

As she was reflecting on the excellence of the agent's disguise, he strolled into the lounge, to get an aperitif. His hat was now removed, revealing a completely shaven scalp.

"Blond hair." The words slipped back into her memory, awakening a dormant suspicion. She watched the man throw back his drink and then—in an effort to allay her subconscious worry—she began to look thru a pile of spiked papers.

Presently she heard a faint drumming and glanced up to discover its cause. The carpet beside the showcase had worn so threadbare that it had been cut away to reveal the parquet flooring. Upon this strip of waxed board, a man was doing a sort of elementary tap dance, as tho to register impatience.

He was signalling with his feet.

As she grasped the fact, she realized that this was the agent she had been told to expect. He was tall and very fair, with bright blue eyes. Altho his head was partially shaven, the hair on top was flaxen while over one eye was a livid white scar.

She looked at the clock and saw that it was on the stroke of twelve.

It was the worst moment of her life. She had made a ghastly blunder, even if it were no fault of hers. The mistake was due to the fact that fate—in a freakish mood—had contrived the same description to cover two men. Staring at him with horrified eyes, as tho she had condemned him to death, she realized that not he alone, but other victims, would pay the penalty of her error.

The crisis sharpened her wits. She knew that it was impossible for her to slip away, in order to warn the agent at one hundred and three Postgasse. The entire management of the hotel depended upon herself so that such unprecedented action would focus on her the limelight she must avoid. Probably, too, she would be followed and so give the whole show away. As she knew no telephone number to ring, the only chance to save the "twig" was thru the blond stranger.

Vivien Assumes Her High Official Voice

After first glancing swiftly around, she caught his eye and—daring greatly—made the Victory sign with her fingers.

"Are you the gentleman who booked a room over the phone?" she asked in her high official voice. "I'm terribly sorry but there has been a blunder. I forgot to reserve it. . . . Georg, who has 88?"

"Herr Von Ringner," replied the clerk glibly.

As she stared at the agent, willing him to understand, she felt the flash of his response.

"Oh, bad luck," he said with a shrug. "I left it to a pal to ring you up about it. Did he leave any message for me?"

"No, fraulein," broke in Georg. "The calls have been only for our clients. There has been nothing for this gentleman."

"On the contrary," Vivien informed. "I took the message myself, when you were not in the lounge."

Her brain worked feverishly while her fingers rustled the pile of flimsies. She believed that the "V" agent understood that Von Ringner had received the information which was meant for him, but that was a minor point. The essential was to give it also to him and in such a manner as to awake no curiosity or suspicion in Georg or Edda.

Suddenly she took a bold step.

"I've found it," she said, removing a slip from the bottom of the papers and reading it aloud. "It says, 'Tonight at 8, one hundred and three, Postgasse.' Your friend wants you to ring him. . . . Here it is. You might forget the address."

The man glanced at the slip, on which was scrawled—"Ring Laundry"—folded it and placed it in his note-case.

"Won't you have another room?"

NEXT SUNDAY—"THE GOOD SPORT," A SHORT STORY BY THYRA SAMTER WINSLOW

Fall Hats Add Splash of Color to 1942 Fashions

Feathers Have Been Revived in New Modes

By Rea Seeger.

New hats and new shades of lipsticks are time honored, time tested pick-ups for any woman's sagging spirit, and used during wartime they have even greater and more soul-satisfying results. With the straight and restricted silhouettes frozen, hats mean more dramatics together with gloves and other accessoires like bags, belts and blouses. Hats this new season are triumphantly high, wide and handsome. There are models that flatter effortlessly, because of color or of soft feather trim. Other creations add the wanted snap and spirit to slim tailored suits and still others provide the sharp contrast for daytime dresses of bright wool or of such subtle shades as gray, putty, or beige.

Feathers have been revived; super-flattering ostrich, soft coq feather bands; pompons of ostrich or marabou; sky tickling quills and rooster feathers; sophisticated shiny quills lacquered to achieve the right shine and all the frankly domesticated trim of chicken feathers dyed in many beautiful shades to the last gasp of elegance, and lacy effects of fabulously beautiful gourah feathers in all colors.

There is a noticeable revival of fabrics, the kind used by our grandmothers, thick old fashioned plush, chenille braid, and rope thick bands of the same chenille, wool fringe or yarn, all cleverly worked to make eye catching hats for any costume. Veils are more popular and flattering than ever, from the tiny wisps lightly shadowing your eyelines to the misty drifts of fine mesh to hang down around the shoulders. Sequins, jet beads, pearl bead embroidery, handsome silk, intricately woven and patterned braid, and the softest of fabric like duvetyn, corduroy, velveteen and the synthetics plus a newcomer, brushed wool, make ravishing headgear to keep the shoppers in a whirl while they decide on the just right model.

• • •

There are definite distinctions in the hat collections; knockout felts for the career girls' wardrobes and for country and casual spectator sports clothes. There are the dozens upon dozens of amusing small hats made of every imaginable kind of yarn and trim for the debs and subdebs. And there are picture book hats for the face flattery of every woman who wears them. New this season are some of the most beautiful of colored hats, gems of color mixture made by artists. Flowers of velvet, flowers of feathers and ribbon, bows of veiling lace and net—all these make the hats of today.

Glove and hat sets, hat and muff sets, and hat and bag sets are still the best buys of the times, for with such a combine the background dress or coat becomes the costume of unique and dramatic distinction.

Much ingenuity and artistry has been worked with these sets, in color, in contrast and in fabric. Gloves to roll way up over the sleeves of your dresses or coats or suits are smoothly fitted and assure the right accent to repeat the contrast of the companion hat.

Sketched are six of the newest wartime millinery, featured in a super collection of others equally high fashion. They are now on display and ready for your fall and winter wardrobes. For information concerning them call Miss Seeger, Sup. 0200.

A. High hat of flattering color with a drift of multi-colored ostrich feathers (uncurled) at the back. A loop of contrasting colored velvet accents the front of the hat. B. Flattering small honey beige sailor hat of soft fine felt entirely surrounded by lacy gourah feathers dyed exactly the same shade as the hat. C. One of the most dramatic of bag and hat sets, made entirely of hundreds and hundreds of tiny bow knots of black felt (colors can be ordered). The small hat is high and sharp in outline. D. another hat and bag-muff set, this time of the old fashioned and now new fashioned plush in a silvery gray tone. The very small hat is ready to be pinned on with two matching bone hair pins. E. Undiluted whimsey worked in the black magic of fine felt is ashine with dozens of twinkling black jet beads. F. This very high hat of russet suede felt has a bird trim on the head band encircling the high crown. It is quilted and padded to add the new 1942 trim idea.

HOME OWNERS' QUERIES

Evansville, Ind.—[To the Home Owners' Editor].—How can a worn spot on a shellacked floor be patched, or does floor have to be refinished? —G. F.

Answer: You might try washing worn place to remove any wax or grease. If you find wood is stained and discolored, bleach with oxalic acid solution and rinse well and dry. Then make edges smooth, and taper them with sandpaper Thin shellack and apply two or three coats of it to worn spot.

⸻

Evanston—[To the Home Owners' Editor[— Is there any way of removing rust from a steam boiler? Will this rust impede heat circulation and distribution? —Marjorie M.

Answer: You can save fuel and improve working of steam plant by removing rust in boiler. Call in a good heating contractor or buy liquid chemicals at a dealer that sells heating and plumbing supplies.

⸻

Chicago—[To the Home Owners' Editor] — What is an inexpensive and efficient way of insulating an attic we do not intend to use? We are not expecting to use it but would like to save on fuel this winter. —Henry G.

Answer: You can cover attic floor with blanket rolls of insulation, with fill insulation or with mineral fill batts.

CLASSICAL RECORDINGS

Robust vitality trailing cobwebs of nostalgia—a reasonably accurate description of any great city rooted in history—is the keynote of Vaughan Williams' London symphony, recently given its first American recording by the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra under the direction of Eugene Goossens [Victor M-916, $5.50]. The performance is particularly good, firm in texture, buoyant in quality, with a sensitive feeling for such memorable interludes as the song of the viola selling "sweet lavender" and the descent of the thick blanket of tonal fog on the street noises by the River Thames. The symphony takes up nine full sides, well spaced. The tenth side features the British conductor with the London Symphony orchestra in the crisp farandole from Bizet's "L'Arlesienne" Suite, No. 2.

• • •

Tschaikowsky: Nutcracker Suite, played by the Philadelphia orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy [Victor M-915, $3.50]. If it isn't too early to think about Christmas presents, you might consider this gay album for your favorite child, particularly one with a hankering after ballet and a delightful memory for Disney. The performance is polished without bestowing urbanity upon innocence, giving the true make-believe quality to the celesta dance of the Sugar-Plum Fairy, the puffball gayety of the Chinese caper, and the lighthearted waltz of the flowers. If the Philadelphia orchestra is doomed to cancel its tour, this is one way to eat your musical cake and have priorities, too.

• • •

Chopin: Concerto No. 1, in E minor, for piano and orchestra, played by Edward Kilenyi and the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos [Columbia M-515, $4.73]. Not bad, but not good enough to get excited about. The young American pianist, long a protégé of Dohnanyi, has a good deal of brilliance and some incisiveness, but he is apt to blur bravura passages. His Chopin has neither the sensuous flair of Novaes' nor the almost boneless liquidity of Arrau's—not to mention the patrician distinction of Brailowsky's. Nor is the recording perfection. The piano sometimes sounds tinny in treble, and while all record sides are full to the brim [as they should be to conserve materials] there are extremely bad breaks at the ends of sides four and six.

• • •

Strauss: "Don Juan," played by the National Symphony orchestra under the direction of Hans Kindler [Victor M-914, $2.50]. Probably the most durable of the Straussian tone poems, this one leaps like a shining trout to the lure of good treatment. Mr. Kindler gives it a fine, full-throated recording full of Straussian exuberance, with the kind of instinctive timing that shows off a crack orchestration.

• • •

Notes: Single records worth investigating include the Heifetz-Primrose performance of the beautiful Handel Passacaglia arranged for violin and viola by Halvorsen [Victor 11-8151] and Piatigorsky's gleaming performance of his own transcription for cello by a Haydn Divertimento [Columbia 11830-D]. . . . Victor's November list probably will include Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto in the recording secently made by Artur Schnabel with Frederick Stock and the Chicago Symphony at Orchestra hall. They also recorded the "Emperor" at the same session.

Our Drama Critic Takes a Holiday on Broadway

Comes Home with News of Gotham Shows

By Cecil Smith.

Of course we hire the wise and witty Burns Mantle to take care of these things, but a local dramatic critic recently returned from a busman's holiday simply cannot resist the temptation to reflect publicly upon the state of the theater in New York. It requires no crystal ball to predict that most of Broadway's current successes will become Chicago's property sooner or later and to foresee the nature of our winter and spring seasons by observing the shape of events in New York in September.

As is also the case here, these are boom times in the New York theater. Nobody is particularly serious about his theatergoing, however, and the attractions rolling up the biggest grosses are generally the ones which offer the most effective escape from grim and omnipresent realities. Michael Todd's expensive burlesque show, "Star and Garter," has never had an empty seat in the house since it opened early in the summer. "By Jupiter," the newest Rodgers and Hart musical, transports its audiences back to the days of classical antiquity, with gratifying results at the box office. Even so unassuming and generally unbrilliant a little comedy as "Janie," a variant on the subject matter of "Junior Miss," has surprisingly become a hit.

• • •

The month of September brought only one new serious play to Broadway. This was Emlyn Williams' "The Morning Star," about which Mr. Mantle provided full details last week. Sensitively directed by Guthrie McClintic and acted with superb craft, especially by Gladys Cooper and Brenda Forbes, "The Morning Star" offers playgoers a valuable experience, even tho it tells, on the surface, an absurd and trumped up triangular story of an insultingly trite order. The importance of the play lies in the honest simplicity with which it captures—far more convincingly than "The Wookey"—the mood of quiet courage and strength to face the inevitable which the 1940 blitzkrieg uncovered in Britons generally. "The Morning Star" presents real people in an unreal story, which at least is better than the other way around.

Gladys Cooper.

So-called vaudeville, which any old Palace theater habitué will tell you is not the real McCoy, is still on the upswing. George Jessel, who did not appear to particularly good advantage last year in "High Kickers," has salvaged the best material from that show and added more to it, to ride to extraordinary favor with critics and public alike in "Show Time." His colleagues are likewise from the upper brackets—Jack Haley, the endearing Irish comic; Ella Logan, who has developed immeasurably as a singing entertainer since her engagement here in George White's "Scandals," and the sleek dance team of the De Marcos.

• • •

A second vaudeville show, "New Priorities of 1943," is less impressive, tho it gives Bert Wheeler an opportunity to show New Yorkers the act he offered here in "Headliners of 1942." With these entertainments established in the Broadway sector, the original "Priorities of 1942" has gone on tour and may be counted on to reach Chicago some time after "New 1943 Hellzapoppin" has run its course.

When Mayor La Guardia placed a ban upon burlesque in the cheap 42d street houses, Michael Todd determined to move that rarefied form of art three blocks north to the tradition filled Music Box theater, to add Gypsy Rose Lee and Bobby Clark to the kitty, and to demand a $4.40 top. Except for its handsome and expensive costumes and settings, "Star and Garter" offers very little that is new, but it is none the less continuously diverting, if your tastes are low enough. Mr. Clark has revived some of the good moments of "The Streets of Paris"—notably the immortal song about "Robert the Roué from Reading, P-a." and the celebrated scene in a lunatic asylum; Miss Lee has made her stripping number more lyric and classical than ever, and the gum chewing Professor Lamberti is on hand to contribute his great and unforgettable xylophone act, which is a truer revival of old time vaudeville than anything else on the current New York stage.

Opinions differ about "By Jupiter," which is based on the play, "The Warrior's Husband," in which the sexes are transposed, with the women serving as warriors and the men concerning themselves with affairs of domesticity and personal charm. Perhaps the humor of the basic gag does run thin before the evening is over. But Ray Bolger, with his inimitable gifts for dancing and pantomimic characterization, makes the evening more than worth while, and Rodgers and Hart have written skillfully functional, if not unusually hummable, musical pieces from start to finish.

The one incomparable experience of my fortnight in New York was provided by the soldier show, "This Is the Army," which has already begun a tour that will bring it to the Civic Opera house here on Jan. 4. The 300 military participants have been drilled and rehearsed to the last degree of zestful perfection. What is more important, they have been given good and varied material to work with, and Sergt. Ezra Stone's sensitive direction is on the same high level as Irving Berlin's vivacious score.

• • •

The Stage Door Canteen scene, with its soldier impersonators of such feminine celebrities as Jane Cowl, Lynn Fontanne, and Gypsy Rose Lee, has attained a deserved fame. But other more typically masculine aspects of the show are equally worthy of praise. In the last analysis, the most unique and often the most stirring massed scenes are those in which purely military formations and drills are turned into inspired and thrilling choreography. For sheer visual excitement, no other stage picture in the show can rival the new finale, added only three weeks ago, in which the entire stage is magnificently and triumphantly filled by uniformed men with upraised and crossed bayonets.

This Is the Army" is one of the great musical shows of this time, and its engagement at the Civic Opera house in January will mark the peak of the season.

RETURNING TO LOOP STAGE

When "Spring Again" opens at the Selwyn theater Oct. 12, Grace George, one of the distinguished actresses of the American stage, will appear in Chicago for the first time in a decade. Her last play in Chicago was "The First Mrs. Fraser."

Richard Himber Writing Musical Comedy Score

Richard Himber, the orchestra leader, is writing the score for a musical comedy tentatively entitled "Where There's Willie." He and Cy Enfield, a Hollywood director, intend to stage the show this fall. Elliott Grennard has written the book and also the lyrics for Himber's music. The locale is Hollywood, and the story is reported to be a satire on a popular orchestra leader, who may or may not be Himber himself. Himber won't say who it is.

Miss Anglin Works on New Version of 'Athalie'

Margaret Anglin, the celebrated actress, has been working on a new stage version of Racine's classic French tragedy, "Athalie." Sarah Bernhardt and other great tragediennes used to appear in this story of the villainous queen who set out to destroy the last remnant of the royal line of David. Miss Anglin expects to make use of Mendelssohn's incidental music to the play when her version is staged.

Even Makeup Is Streamlined to War Needs

A Powder Base That Will Last Is Important

By Antoinette Donnelly.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co. Inc.]

One of the first lessons this war has taught every one in America is to save and conserve.

We always have been a prodigal nation. Our wastefulness has been a never ending source of shock and amazement to the peoples of less fortunate lands. We changed our cars every year or two because we liked the new models, no matter that there still were thousands of miles left in the old buggy. We redecorated our homes because some authority decreed that modern or provincial or regency was "smart" that season. As to clothes, the fashion industry grew and flourished like a green bay tree because it sold us the creed of obsolescence.

• • •

Today, all that is changed.

With great humility we are returning to the ways of thrift of our forefathers. We have learned that our old aluminum pans, our tin cans and the fats from our kitchens can be used to forge the material of modern warfare. More than anything else, we've learned the value of time and we're fast acquiring a fine ability to make every moment count.

This last lesson, the importance of time, is being taught to our men in the skies over Europe, on the red sands of Africa, in the jungles of Pacific Isles and on the proud continent of Australia. It's being taught in the training camps where our peace loving American boys are being turned into the finest soldiers in the world, and in our shipyards and factories where ships, tanks, planes, and guns are measured by man hours of work.

• • •

Our women are learning it on the home front, many of them in their first time jobs in war plants, others in the more efficient management of their households that enables them to participate in volunteer war work.

This does not mean that women have ceased to be women, that they've eliminated the fundamental niceties from everyday living. It only means they've streamlined their lives and activities and are cutting out the nonessential frills in order to have more time and strength to devote to their part in winning the war.

Time was, when last year's suit was considered fit only for rainy days and off-nights at home. Now, an old garment is more than a badge of courage, it's proud proof that its wearer is spending her money on war bonds instead of personal finery, her hours in work for her country instead of in gallivanting thru the smart shops.

• • •

But it is, perhaps, in matters of makeup that women have learned first and fastest to save and simplify.

O, it was fun while it lasted, those habits of the not-so-long-ago, carefree past when we had a different lipstick for every hour of the day, a special powder for every season, and a new shade of eyeshadow for every costume.

So, women have eliminated the cosmetics that were strictly for fun and have kept only those that are necessary to their well-being and appearance.

They know that, as long as no critical materials are used in the creation of their cosmetics, and the government wisely sees to that, it won't make us win the war any faster if they look wan and tired. On the contrary, it might even slow us down, for it has been tried and proved that well groomed individuals are more efficient and capable.

And so, today, the emphasis is upon those essential cosmetics that can be applied with a minimum of effort in the shortest possible time, that will look natural and attractive, and that will maintain their freshness thru long hours of work.

That's why more and more women are using a good foundation for their makeup. A good powder base that's properly applied will last from morning until night, and assures its wearer that her face will look fresh and bright from when she leaves home until she returns, regardless of where her activities take her.

• • •

Powder carefully dusted on, a faint blush of rouge, and then the all important eye makeup are the next essentials of wartime makeup. And in wartime, eye makeup is especially needed, for when every one is working under strain and pressure, the eyes are the first features to look as tired as they feel, if left to their own devices.

Tired, dark shadows on the lids can't show thru the faint sheen of soft shadow, deftly applied. Pale brows can't contribute a haggard look if they're subtly darkened with black or brown pencil that stretches them just a bit at the ends to create a real frame for the eyes themselves.

Mascara tipped gently to the lashes will bring depth and sparkle to any eyes—even tired ones. And if you doubt it, just try it and see for yourself.

Since no essential materials are used in cosmetics don't hesitate to use yours to help you look perky and pretty. Tired eyes will only depress you and your public. Use a touch of shadow to conceal the smudges of weariness and pencil to make a more vivid frame for your eyes.

Cable Stitch Sweater

By Jean Macdonald.

Large needles and heavy rope wool create this hand knitted jacket done in cable stitch. It is easy to do and works up quickly. It may be knitted with either short or long sleeves. The instructions are available in 32, 34, 36, 38, and 40 inch bust measurements. The instructions for the "beanie" are included in the pattern.

For directions in knitting the cable stitch sweater, No. 1018, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover cost of mailing, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Sweet Sandwiches.

Sweet sandwiches may replace cake or cookies in a packed lunch; some nourishing combinations are honey and peanut butter, prune and nut paste, ground carrots, and raisins mixed with mayonnaise.

Lady of the House

Sky Trucks.

"If I could lop off forty years from my age," said Aunt Ella, "I'd be driving a sky truck."

"If you could lop off forty years there'd be no sky trucks, so why not calm yourself and stick to surgical dressings, knitting, cookies, and such? Or, has the glamor of the uniform got you, too?" I added slyly.

"Uniforms, hunh! I want action." Aunt Ella tramped round the kitchen floor to underscore that.

"Would you stir this apple butter for me, while I get the clothes off the line?

"You know, Aunt Ella," I continued as I brought in the first basket of dry things, "all the boys really want is for everything to be all right at home, so some of us have to stick to that job, don't we? And it isn't always the easiest part.

"You could maybe write a war song! to the tune of Men of Harlech. There's a forward surge to the old tune like the wave on wave of onrushing billows that sets your feet in a forward march—plenty of action. You could imagine waves of trucks and tanks, and you driving the one in the lead."

But there was just another "humph" from Aunt Ella as she made for the door. At that she'll wangle something a lot more exciting than clean clothes and apple butter.

Into the Light.

We drove along in fog so dense
It was impossible to see
A thing upon the road—
No buildings—not a tree.
It seemed as tho we were marooned
Somewhere upon a desert isle,
As slowly then we crept along
Each dark deserted mile.
When suddenly we came upon
A gaily lighted mart,
The fog was gone—we found the world
Of which we'd been a part.
And many times along thru life
A fog will turn the days to night—
But faith and patience bring us out
Again into the light.

Creed of a Home.

This is a home of love. Altho you enter it as an acquaintance, we sincerely hope you will leave it being our friend. Our garden, literature and music are but a few of the things in life we love. We, of this home, believe in God. Those who love peace and believe in freedom for mankind are welcome here. Old friends will find our family smaller — two have gone to war, thus far. The hungry, travel sore and weak will find comfort here. In this home there are no deaf ears to the sorrows and trials of others; but we dislike display of temperament. Hearing petty gossip about people known or unknown to us, or about their faults, displeases us. Individual hates are not known nor welcome here. If you have grievances toward some one, please do not expect us to share your feelings. Unavoidable arguments in this home are short-lived. This is a home of truth, so speak not falsely. It matters not when you call—you'll always be welcome. Everything we possess we will gladly share with you; and we will do our utmost to make you "feel at home."

New Winter Coats Both Chic and Comfortable

Silhouette Is Varied; Box Topper Leads

By Bettina Bedwell.

The belief that to be beautiful a woman must suffer, is not getting anywhere or influencing anybody much when it comes to new winter cloth coat fashions. Designers have found a new beauty in comfortable coats this year. I wouldn't be surprised if the coming revolution in our dressing habits turned out to be one for greater comfort, once we learn that we can be just as chic, as beautiful, and as dramatic without pain.

There are lots of variations in coat silhouettes, too. All are geared to being comfortable, and by comfortable the designers mean warm first, shapely second, and pleasingly different to look at, third. Plenty of fitted coats made of cloth and trimmed with fur are on hand. The fur trimming is laid on these coats where it will do the most good, and that is on the upper half. Dressy fitted coats are likely to be trimmed with fox or mink, the more practical ones with beaver and other short-haired furs. I notice that there are a lot of fitted coats that have a bigger look to the bodice part, which means room to move around in. Other coats have softly molded bodice sections and peg-top drapery on the skirts. These are dressy models and look soft and pretty, too.

The box coat, however, is the most numerous coat type, and it not only comes in practical editions but can be dressy, too. A black wool box coat with tuxedo revers of silver fox and a big collar of the same fur is a sample of this kind of thing. Simply wonderful for comfort and dashing chic are box overcoats that come in soft, pile woolens like fleeces and tweeds, and that are trimmed with generous fur collars and revers. They may have fur linings for the one who can afford the price. For others who want the very real comfort of a warm lining, rayon fleece linings in glorious rich colors may be found in box overcoats. A striking and stunning box overcoat imported from London is made of wide striped tweed in, say, brown and green, or other dark rich colors, and trimmed with velvet collars and cuffs.

It is only when you get into one of the new overcoats, that you realize how much your comfort has been considered, for they are built to slip on easily over your heavy suit, or dress, and to set with ease and not feel heavy or constricting. Some have deep armholes so you can wear them over your shoulders like capes, and they stay put.

RÉPUBLIQUE FRANÇAISE

Monsieur Fred Gerson

Chicago Illinois
U.S.A.
EXAMINED BY

This cover from Fred Gerson, of Chicago, shows three censor markings. It originated in French Guiana and was passed by the Post and Telegraph department. Next it was opened in Suriname and sealed at the left with a label reading "Geopend door censuur Suriname—70742," and still later it was censored and sealed at the right by the American censor.

Two instalments of the story of slogan postmarks have appeared in recent issues of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. In these mention was made of most of the various types used before 1921. At that time the postoffice department was making use of slogans to advise correspondents to address mail to street and number, and to mail early for Christmas; the interior department had numerous slogans concerning national parks, forests, and cautions against forest fires, and the war and navy departments continued the suggestions to join the army or the navy.

During 1921 very few new slogans appeared but all were used in sufficient quantities to make them readily available to collectors. One was used at Omaha for an aeronautical exposition, one at Plymouth, Mass., for the tercentenary of the landing of the pilgrims, one at Birmingham, Ala., for its 50th anniversary, four types in Ohio cities for the health exposition at Cincinnati and several types at Chicago stations for the annual Pageant of Progress.

Evidently whatever limitations had been imposed against the use of slogans for local events in previous years were removed in 1922 and they appeared in dozens of cities. The old governmental slogans of the postoffice and interior departments were continued while those of the war and navy departments went out of use. The year 1922 saw the inauguration of the anti-tuberculosis slogans without reference to the Red Cross, and the start of the slogans containing the words—"Red Cross—Roll Call—Join." The postal authorities began in 1922, to use a familiar slogan which suggests the registration or insurance of valuable mail.

Altogether the 1922 slogans advertise more than 60 events of the year consisting of county and state fairs, national and international shows featuring one product or another, fashion pageants, city centennials, irrigation projects, etc. Several of the events mark the start of slogans for such affairs. These are the dedication of the stadium at Ohio State university; the American Philatelic society convention at Springfield, Mass.; Near East Relief bundle day, at Richmond, Va., and national cancer week, a slogan which was used thruout the country.

The following year was almost a continuation of 1922. Approximately the same number of new slogans were placed in use and the standard slogans of the postoffice and national parks continued in service. The subjects advertised were a little more important, on the average, than those of 1922, for their are many more state fairs and national conventions and expositions and less of the street fair variety. In this year were started the important slogans calling attention to the community chest campaigns and to the citizens' training camps.

Apparently the postal authorities were of the opinion that many of the previous years' slogans advertised events not worthy of such a prominent position in the postmark, for in 1924 practically none were allowed, except the official types and these were greatly curtailed. The postoffice continued to use those regarding complete addressing of mail, the registration or insurance of valuable mail, the early mailing for Christmas, and started the use of "Air Mail Saves Time." The Red Cross was given space for a limited period in the fall but the Christmas seals slogans were discontinued. A dozen or more slogans were still in use for the national parks and to caution against forest fires and the "Let's Go! Citizens' Military Training Camps" slogan went into use in various cities. In all this year there seems to have been no new slogan for any event of local or limited scope.

The following years until 1930 were almost duplicates of 1925 so far as the use of slogans was concerned. The postal slogans and that of the Red Cross were continued thruout the period. In 1928 the postoffice introduced one which advised patrons to notify correspondents of change of address. The military training camps' slogans were used until 1929 and the few national parks' and forest fire slogans which started in 1925, all ceased in that year except one park slogan which continued until 1929 and one forest fire slogan which lasted until 1928.

The only new slogans of the period were one in 1926 for the Sesqui-centennial exposition at Philadelphia and another in 1928 for the international civil aeronautics conference in Washington. None of the slogans of the 1921 to 1930 period are rare but there are several in a medium scarce class. These were used for Chicago Boys' week, Cheyenne Frontier days, Cuero [Tex.] celebration, the 64th anniversary of the Lincoln-Douglas debate at Freeport, Ill., and the Tri-State roundup at Bellefourche, S. D., all in 1922, and the third national aero congress at St. Louis and Traer's 50th anniversary, Traer, Ia., both in 1923.

The remaining period of slogans will be the subject of a future article in the Stamp Collector.

M. G. Himmes, a shut-in, who writes the Chicago column in Stamplets, a monthly stamp story magazine, sends information concerning the first woman who collected stamps. At least he believes that the late Mrs. A. Jessop Sr., was the first woman stamp collector in America. Mrs. Jessop came from a seafaring family and had three brothers to supply her with stamps when they returned from voyages. Among her possessions were a shoebox full of Cape triangles, a number of Providence provisionals, and a quantity of Confederates taken from a captured blockade runner.

In 1875 her entire collection went to a son, Arthur S. Jessop, who resided in Cambridge, Mass. It was sold to a Boston dealer for $1,500 and a gun, when the young Mr. Jessop was about to enter Harvard. Mr. Jessop, who was born in 1856, still lives and collects stamps. In a letter to Mr. Himmes, he states that he is a plain stamp collector and does not hunt for cracks nor collect covers. His hair is brown, not gray, and he can probably credit that to his having forsworn monkeying with the flyspecks of philately.

Mousy Roles Win a Lion's Share of Coin

HOLLYWOOD [Wide World].—Edward Everett Horton may be the prize mouseman of moviedom—but he garners a lion's share of its coin!

For 21 years now, this tall, Brooklyn born bachelor, with his apologetic stoop and bumbling mannerisms, has been mousing his way thru pictures, and those timid, self-effacing services have paid him well.

"It pays to be a mouse," says the genial erudite actor, "or at least it pays me—and that is the chief problem in my case. And, as long as it pays, I'm going right on with my mousing—and I'll like it!"

Currently, Horton is busily mousing thru his 100th film, in which he plays a well educated valet who, in spare moments, is a toothpaste tycoon.

Edward Everett Horton.

This rôle, in fact, is a novelty in mousing for Horton, since in it he is wooed—and wooed successfully for the first time—by Carmen Miranda, the Brazilian singer and dancer. The picture is called "Springtime in the Rockies," and Horton claims to be something of an expert on springtime titles, since he boasts of having played 90 weeks in his favorite stage rôle, "Springtime for Henry."

A contemplative man with a literary background and a free lance actor who won't tie himself up with studio contracts, Horton offers some interesting statistics concerning his two decades of mousy film activities.

"Oddly enough," he muses, "I have played only six butlers in my 100 pictures. But I have been, on and off, 35 'best friends,' 22 'timid clerks,' and 37 'frustrated leading men.'

"I have often wondered what Dr. Sigmund Freud would have had to say about my case. It was his contention that frustration warped the soul and thereby caused certain disturbances in the psyche which were not good for their victims. Now, I make a living out of frustration.

"If I ever became brash in a film the audience wouldn't believe it. While others have piled up complexes, I have used this business of being a mouse to get what I want out of life. I am both comfortable and contented—and I have my place in the valley——"

• • •

The "place in the valley," however, is often called something else by certain of his critical friends. They call it "Belly-Acres" and "Horton's Folly," but he doesn't mind.

There are 21 of Horton's "belly-acres" at Encino, in nearby San Fernando valley. And on those acres are 14 houses, barns, and other buildings, 600 various fruit and ornamental trees, five prize Guernsey cows, 500 chickens, three dogs, and, to use Horton's own words, "an uncounted number of valuable pigs."

APPEAR IN 'HI, NEIGHBOR'

You're looking at Johnny Archer—a newcomer you'll like—and Jean Parker as they appear in "Hi, Neighbor." The cast includes many radio favorites. (Oriental.)

State Music Teachers Will Meet October 14

The Illinois State Music Teachers' association will meet at Lyon and Healy hall Wednesday, Oct. 14, at 10:30 a. m. The first meeting of the executive board will be held at the same place an hour earlier. Plans for the student contest auditions will be discussed.

Turnip Party.

Szell Engaged as Guest Conductor for Metropolitan

George Szell, Czech conductor who was a favorite when he conducted the Chicago Symhony orchestra at the Ravinia festivals of 1941 and 1942, has been engaged as guest conductor for the coming season of the Metropolitan Opera company, according to Edward Johnson, general manager.

Mr. Szell, who has been living in this country since 1939, is best known here as a symphonic conductor, having also appeared with the orchestra of the New Friends of Music and with the symphony orchestras of St. Louis, Los Angeles, and Philadelphia.

However, he has a wide background of operatic experience in Europe, including two years as assistant conductor under Richard Strauss in Berlin, intervening years at the Strasbourg Municipal theater, the Court theater in Darmstadt, and the Municipal theater in Dusseldorf, then five years as chief conductor at the Berlin state opera and eight years as general musical director of the opera house and Philharmonic concerts in Prague.

Mr. Johnson did not announce what operas will be taken over by Mr. Szell, but he did say that operas formerly conducted by Ettore Panizza will be redistributed among guest conductors and members of the company's permanent conducting staff. The management emphasized that Mr. Panizza's absence during the coming season is due to transportation difficulties.

Learn to Use New Cuts of Meats to Vary Meals

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

Backbone of the wardrobe: The jumper frock. This new version, softly tailored in the 1942 manner, has scalloping for an unusual finish on the bodice portion of the jumper skirt. Tucking fits the model beautifully to the midriff and the skirt has only moderate flare. Sleeves in the classically tailored blouse are long, gathered into snug wristbands. Studs or tiny buttons trim the shirt front.

The wonderful thing about a jumper frock, in the minds of careerists, co-eds, and clubwomen, is its versatility. It can go to after-hours dinner dates with the same assurance it fills a rôle in workaday life. And it allows for a wardrobe of crisp blouses to keep it eternally immaculate.

Style No. T-8791 is designed for sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material for long-sleeved blouse; 2¾ yards of 39 inch fabric or 2 yards of 54 inch material for jumper.

Cooking Editor Gives Tips on Thrift Dishes

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1942: By The Chicago Tribune.]

If meat rationing comes, we'll still have an almost normal quantity of meat, but it will be more evenly distributed over the population than heretofore. The current meat situation is affecting people in the higher income group more adversely than those in the lower groups. The heavy meat eaters of upper brackets are not getting the fancy roasts, steaks, and chops to which they've been accustomed. They're having to turn to the "thrift" cuts of meat, along with every one else.

There's more meat eaten these days in so-called lower income groups than ever before, because of the prevalence of remunerative defense jobs and meat.

There's no need for worry about a prospective dearth of meat in civilian life. Every one should know by now that livestock production is at an all time high. Heavy army and lend-lease buying does limit the civilian choice in meats. We're all learning to use new cuts and many of us are finding that our meals are more varied and interesting than ever before.

• • •

Don't get the idea that it's "unpatriotic" to eat a certain kind of meat which is well adapted for army or lease-lend use. If you find that meat in your market, it is there for you. Army and lend-lease supplies are withdrawn from the total meat supply before it goes to market.

When you go out to buy meat, don't think you have to buy a certain kind. You may not find it. Be prepared to substitute what the dealer has to take its place. And learn to make your meat supply go as far as possible.

Here are more meat-stretching dishes for economy minded homemakers, and cooks who are bent on making the best uses of their meat supplies.

Beef and Noodle Casserole.
[Serves six.]

¼ cup chopped onion
¼ cup bacon drippings or other fat
1 pound ground beef
1 No. 2 can whole kernel corn
3 cups cooked noodles
Salt, pepper
1 can tomato juice
1 cup grated cheese

Cook onion in drippings until tender, but not browned. Add meat and brown lightly. Put layers of noodles, meat and corn into a greased casserole, season and add tomato juice and cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for half an hour. Green pepper and diced celery may be added to the dish.

• • •

Pork Hocks and Cabbage.

Cook one hock for each person. Brown them in a skillet, then season with salt and pepper and add a small amount of water. Cover and cook gently about 2 hours, adding more water from time to time. Fifteen minutes before serving, add quarters of cabbage, and continue cooking until cabbage is just tender. Potatoes may be cooked with the hocks, also. They should be added half an hour or so before the meat finishes cooking.

Cabbage Rolls.
[Serves six.]

1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground pork
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup grated onion
½ cup raw rice
2 tablespoons catsup or chili sauce [optional].
1 loose head cabbage
3 cups water

Combine meat, seasonings and rice and shape into 12 rolls. Core cabbage and steam until leaves begin to wilt. Separate and choose one big leaf for each roll. Wrap meat rolls in cabbage leaves and tie with string or skewer with toothpicks. Place in baking dish, cover with water. Cover dish and bake at 350 degrees for 1½ hours.

• • •

Kidneys rank next to liver in nutritive value, but they're a much underrated meat. Kidney stew and braised kidneys are really delicacies, and it is unfortunate that so far they have been appreciated by a small group of gourmets. We'd do well to serve kidneys frequently to our families.

Pork, lamb, and veal kidneys are tender enough to broil, but beef kidney needs longer, moist cooking.

Creole Kidney Stew.
[Serves four.]

2 beef kidneys
Flour, salt, pepper
1 onion
1 green pepper
¼ cup bacon drippings
2 cups fresh or canned tomatoes
Curry powder, cayenne pepper
Toast

Wash kidneys, cut in halves and remove fat and white tubes. Soak in cold, salted water for an hour. Drain and marinate in well seasoned French dressing for an hour. Slice or cube and dredge with seasoned flour. Brown in drippings with chopped onion and green pepper. When well browned, add tomatoes, and season to your taste with curry powder. Go easy on the cayenne pepper, for it is very hot. Cover and simmer gently for 45 minutes. Serve on toast.

Art Institute Prepares for 53rd Annual Exhibition

THE Show of the Winter to Open Oct. 29

By Eleanor Jewett.

Last Sunday saw the close of the annual students' exhibition at the Art institute. There were many things [particularly in the handicrafts and poster divisions] of which the school of the Art institute might well be proud, so that the closing of the exhibit is a matter of regret. The east wing galleries will now be put in readiness for the exhibition of the winter, the 53d annual exhibition of American paintings and sculpture. This exhibition will open Oct. 29 and run thru Dec. 10. One of the attractive features of it will be a memorial exhibit of the paintings of Grant Wood. The "American Gothic" and "Daughters of the Revolution" [which at the time of its first showing practically made history] will be high lights in the exhibit.

• • •

October seems to be rather crowded with new shows at the Art institute. One, running over from Sept. 25, is the amusing work of Susanne Suba in gallery 13 on the first floor. There are drawings and illustrations on the walls. Miss Suba is a New Yorker and has had a consistently successful career in the east. She has done covers and book jackets, promotional cards and illustrations, as well as water colors and black and white drawings of New York life. She is fond of animals and these provide subject matter for many of her most likable pictures.

• • •

Six exhibits apparently are opening at the Art institute in October. Last Thursday saw the opening in gallery G3 of an exhibition of masterpieces of craftsmanship from medieval church treasuries; these are lent anonymously and consist of a famous collection of enamels and objects in gilded bronze made for the church in the 12th and 13th centuries. To put it in a nutshell, here is monumental art in a portable size.

• • •

Tomorrow sees the opening of two intriguing Art institute exhibits. In gallery H9 one may see a group of near eastern embroideries lent by Burton Y. Berry. The work comes from Turkey and the Greek islands and the pieces are beautiful examples of 17th and 18th century needlework. They are well worth seeing.

The second exhibit starting tomorrow [both continue to Jan. 3] is of Chinese rubbings of stone sculptures of the Han dynasty. The vigorous designs are carved on the tomb of Wu in Shantung province. The exhibit is installed in gallery H5 and is intriguing.

• • •

Paintings by Felix Ruvolo and Nicola Ziroli will be the next show in the room of Chicago art, the exhibit to open Oct. 8. It will hang to Nov. 1. Both men are good painters, noted for the imaginative and colorful quality of their work. Ziroli has a flair for a certain tender, succulent green that makes any exhibit of his work worth going to, if only to find in what corner of what canvas he has succeeded again in bringing the quintessence of beauty into being.

• • •

Woodcuts by Max Weber will be hung in gallery 16 and the exhibit will open Oct. 16, to run thru Jan. 1. This is the first exhibit in Chicago of Weber's woodcuts, which are mostly in color. The original blocks will be shown as well.

From Oct. 20 to April 20 American furniture of the 17th and 18th centuries from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Young of Boston will be on view in galleries L2 and L3 of the institute. The exhibit is lent by Mr. Young. The exhibition will be held under the auspices of the Antiquarian society and will afford an opportunity to study the products of the artistry and skill of the early American craftsman. It would be amusing if, rounding out this exhibit, the Art institute could show in adjoining galleries the furniture of the Victorian era and the furniture of the modern era.

• • •

The masterpiece of the month for October at the institute is Mary Cassatt's color print "The Toilet." It is hung in gallery 5, at the front entrance of the museum. The print is a stunning impression of one of the artist's superb drawings. It is the one which caused Degas to say that he would not admit "a woman could draw so well"; but as Mary Cassatt was a great draftsman and could 'draw well [and sometimes better] it is hard for us to see how Degas could help but eat his words in the face of the evidence this American painter piled up in the many years she lived and worked in Paris.

The print is from the Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Ryerson collection.

"GENERAL DOUGLAS MacARTHUR" Macena Barton, Chicago painter, gives us her interpretation of the famous American soldier, now in Australia, with this dignified, sturdy portrait that was first put on exhibit in June at the Woman's Salon, Findlay galleries. The artist is noted for her figure paintings, portraits and still life compositions; she is a well known member of the group of progressive painters who keep Chicago in the limelight when art is being discussed.

• • •

Frank H. Young, director of the American Academy of Art, announces the opening of a class in typography on Tuesday evening, Oct. 6. The class will be taught by Norman Forgue of the Norman Press and will include actual shop work and lectures by a group of guest speakers on related subjects.

• • •

An exhibition of small paintings by Eleanor de Laittre, in which the artist has borrowed generously from Klee, Picasso, Braque, and others of the surrealist clan and has fashioned out of her borrowings nothing but an expenditure of time and material that we cannot but think might have been put to better purpose, is hanging in the attractive little gallery of Paul Theobald, 5 North Wabash avenue. Mr. Theobald has books on display which will wash the taste of the exhibit from your mouth. Look particularly at the children's books; one called "Marshmallow" should be a Christmas must for every child from 5 to 10.

• • •

The Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue, are starting tomorrow to keep the same Monday hours as many loop stores. They will open at noon and stay open until 9 in the evening. Friends of the gallery and all those interested in good painting are invited to visit the "galleries" Monday evenings until Christmas, but you will not be disappointed if you drop in other weekdays as well. There is a unique rental service on paintings of $12 a year.

The first official exhibition of the new season at the Chicago galleries is that which opens next Saturday with a reception and a tea. Esther R. Richardson and Mahrea Cramer Lehman will be represented by water colors and William Kennedy will show paintings in oil. The exhibit will continue to Nov. 1.

One of the best pieces of news that has come our way in some time is the announcement that the Chicago Society of Etchers will hold its annual miniature etching exhibit in the club woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, during the month of November. James Swann is secretary of the society and will have charge of the exhibit. The society, unfortunately, has decided against holding its annual fall show of prints at the Roullier galleries, Fine Arts building, in October. It will, instead, concentrate its energies on making the miniature etching show the best in its history.

An exhibition of paintings by eight Chicago artists who, since 1940, have been working as a group to further the development of abstract art in the middle west, will open Tuesday, Oct. 6, in the Chicago Woman's Aid clubrooms, 185 North Wabash avenue. Among these eight are Willard G. Smythe, Anton J. Brunner, Otto Gerstl, Lucille G. Stotter, and Herbert O. Pinzke.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

Stout tweed suits and bright, cheerful colors apparently will predominate in the autumn fashion scene if the opening of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations is taken as a yardstick. Since some of the city's best dressed women were present, the forecast may be considered accurate, for the day was downright cold and new cold weather clothes were out in full force. Mrs. Walter S. Brewster came to the Palmer House in a stunning, gay, black and white checked two-piece wool suit. Upon her head was a gray-blue felt hat with brim turned down all around, and on her feet were red leather, platform sole sandals. She carried a small purse of red leather in a darker shade than that of the shoes and her blouse was a wild red and white print affair. About her neck was a narrow stole of sable skins. Mrs. William G. Hibbard, in from Winnetka, had on a handsome, reddish brown, tweed suit, the skirt of plain material and the jacket of bold plaid, with a brighter shade of orangy-red making the pattern. Her hat was a small, reddish-brown one. Mrs. Graham Aldis also chose a combination of plain skirt and brighter jacket. Her suit was in a soft brown color and the jacket was striped vertically in fine yellow and lighter brown lines. She, too, was wearing a small, brimmed hat and looked as young and pretty as her post-debutante daughter.

• • •

Mrs. Ernest S. Ballard, another Winnetkan, had on a warm looking suit of brown with a large overplaid in brown tones. Some color was added by her blue felt beret and for added warmth she had several furs about her shoulders. The young women who work so quickly and well to seat guests at council luncheons always look attractive. Two of them had on unusually pretty suits, Mrs. Thomas French, who was wearing a soft looking yellow and beige checked wool, and Mrs. Sidney Wanzer, who was in a beige herringbone tweed. Their work will indeed be cut out for them at future meetings, for Frederic C. Woodward, president, announced at the luncheon that future gatherings would have to be held at a variety of places, since the demand on the Palmer House's public rooms, and those of other hotels, had been greatly increased after the government took over some Chicago hostelries. At the next meeting, for instance, planned for tomorrow in the Red Lacquer room, luncheon reservations were limited to members of the council only and their families, due to lack of space. Mrs. French was wearing a draped turban of yellow and brown and enormous gold button earrings, and carried a good looking bag of brown alligator. Mrs. Wanzer's bag and hat were made of the same tweed as the suit and she had on a beige sweater. Miss Rosalind Wright, also looking up table numbers, was dressed in a frock of green and black plaid, made with modified dirndl skirt.

• • •

Mrs. Robert A. Carr was all in red and green. A great coat of vivid plaid in those colors topped a dress of green. Her high-crowned, brimmed felt hat was of the green and trimmed with a band of the plaid. Gold clips trimmed the dress. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Marshall G. Sampsell, was wearing a high sugar loaf crown of black felt and a suit of gray tweed. Across the table from them was Mrs. Edward D. Shumway in an enchanting little velvet hat in a lovely coral color. A necklace and matching bracelet of heavy gold links added life to her tailored black dress and her wrap was a fox cape. Her daughter, Miss Grace Shumway, a tall, pretty blonde, wore a gray flannel, tailored dress striped in white under a blue fox jacket and a giddy bunch of yellow, white, and green china flowers and leaves, held to her head with a bandeau. Mrs. Stanley Keith, patriotically carrying a bundle wrapped in the paper associated with a loop department store, came to the luncheon in a gold dress under a black coat with a cape top. Mrs. Freeman Hinckley's tailored tan wool suit revealed a ruffled blouse of white. The navy wives, most of them from the sunny south, were caught by surprise during last week's wintry weather when they went to tea at Mrs. Byron S. Harvey Jr.'s to hear about the work done at Emerson Settlement house, where some of them may do volunteer work this winter. Mrs. Hobby Law, a pretty young woman from Tennessee, turned up in a stunning gold wool coat and hat, both trimmed with mink. Mrs. Pinckney Pruitt, whose home is in Alabama, was wearing a brown tailored suit and a wide brimmed hat of brown straw to match. Mrs. Donald Cave, who comes from California [where cold rainy weather always is unusual, too], was snug in a tailored black top coat and a wide brimmed hat of black felt trimmed in Kelly green. The first fur coat seen this season was worn to the tea by debutante Audrey Anderson, whose bright blue turban was trimmed with matching fur. Her dress was bright red.

Mrs. Robert A. Carr.

Elizabeth Launspach Sets October Wedding Date

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Launspach of Morgan Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Gerald C. Primm, son of Mrs. Arthur F. Janes of Beverly Hills. Miss Launspach was graduated from Beloit college and received her master's degree from Mount Holyoke college. Mr. Primm was graduated from the University of Illinois. The wedding is set for October.

Miss Eleanor Anderson to Be Married Tuesday

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Turie Anderson, 716 North Leamington avenue, to Sergt. Victor DeBoer, son of Mrs. Henrietta DeBoer, 2519 North Sayre avenue, is to take place on Tuesday in St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church. Sergt. DeBoer is serving with the medical corps at Kelly field, Texas.

Tip for Blackout.

When preparing a room for blackout, remove from the walls all objects, such as mirrors and framed pictures, which might be shaken down upon the occupants; unframed maps or magazine pictures attached to the wall with scotch tape or thumb tacks may be used in their place to make the room cheerful.

Young Wives Need Not Be Embarrassed Concerning This Intimate Problem

Because of natural shyness or lack of confidence in the knowledge of friends the uninformed young wife often hesitates to seek the advice of others. Instead, she risks health and happiness by use of over-strong solutions of acids for feminine hygiene which can actually burn, scar and harm delicate tissue.

Today such risks are needless. Science has given womankind Zonite. So powerful, it kills instantly all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizes—by actually destroying odors. Protects personal daintiness. Yet! Zonite is non-caustic, non-poisonous, safe for delicate tissues. Over 20,000,000 bottles bought. Get Zonite at your druggist today.

Trade Union Representatives Go to School at Harvard

Nine Months Study Course Inaugurated

By the Rev. John Evans.

Need for a successful, postwar relationship between labor and management has been anticipated at Harvard university where 15 trade union representatives have begun nine months study course sponsored by the Harvard graduate school of business administration, the Littauer school of public administration, and the department of economics. Included in the first group of representatives, selected by the coöperating unions, are members of the railway clerks, ladies' garment workers, hatters, and electricians.

First thoughts of these trade union fellowships came in 1941 but materialized only after months of planning between the university and union representatives who will direct the course jointly. The unions will pay the expenses and half of the tuition of the men they have selected, the rest will be paid from a fund raised by friends of the university. Qualifications include proven ability in the labor movement, general intelligence, capacity for leadership, and devotion to the labor movement.

Three courses of study are part of the new plan. They include: economic analysis, an appraisal of the economic condition of business enterprises and of industries; trade union problems and policies, the analysis of actual problems which have confronted the national officers of different unions; and human problems of administration, a study of group psychology and problems which arise in handling groups of men, and examination of job evaluation plans.

Discussion meetings, led by national leaders, will be held for these students. Faculty members and students thruout the university are expected union executives and prominent labor to benefit from contact with men who have had practical experience in and first hand knowledge of the labor movement and its conditions. A free interchange of views and ideas, it is hoped, will provide better understanding of mutual problems in the future.

The University of Kentucky and the Mutual Broadcasting system will collaborate for their fourth winter in national weekly broadcasts to be heard on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays. The Tuesday series, "Americans to the South," will furnish a background of the geography, history, social, and political life, arts, music, and literature of the western hemispheric countries to the south, the Thursday series, "Within America's Gate," will study the home of a typical American family and the changed conditions of its members due to the present war, and the Saturday series, "Stories from the United Nations," will be dramatized stories of literature of the united nations, including folk lore, some classics, and modern tales of today's struggle.

POPULAR RECORDINGS

Victor has several items worth considerable attention. Xavier Cugat couples a bolero and a rhumba on one platter that should please the Latin fans. "Adversidad" is a suave and genuine boleron song with considerable finesse in its instrumentation. "En La Plantacion" is a lovely melody, sung superbly by Miguelito Valdes.

Teddy Powell gives "Why Don't You Fall in Love with Me?" a neat, solid send-off on a Bluebird disc, and Peggy Mann makes it a delightful vocal. Teddy's own "Helpless" gives a good indication of why this band is coming up fast. Another Bluebird special is "When the Clouds Roll By" and "The Four Clefs' Woogie," played by the unit named in the latter title. The Clefs are clever, and Theodore Roosevelt Marshall's boogie piano is grand on the second side.

N. Y. May See Robeson as "Othello" in January

Shakespeare's "Othello," with Paul Robeson in the name part, may be brought to Broadway in January if Mr. Robeson can shift a large number of concert bookings, which run thru to April. Tryout performances of the production, staged by Margaret Webster, were given at Cambridge, Mass., and Princeton, N. J., in August. Uta Hagen, the Desdemona, and José Ferrer, the Iago, will also remain in the cast if they are available at the proper time. The revival, once mentioned as a possible Theater guild production, will instead be presented under the auspices of Robert Rockmore.

Chicago Opera in Wartime—1917 Compared with 1942

IN SATURDAY CONCERT

Participating in Viennese invasion of Orchestra hall next Saturday night are Hermann Leopoldi, popular song writer, singer, and entertainer, and Helen Moeslein, coloratura soprano. The concert marks Mr. Leopoldi's Chicago debut.

Former Had Total of 76 Performances

By Claudia Cassidy.

What is opera like in wartime? If you never knew, or have forgotten, how about comparing prospects for the season starting Nov. 7 at the Civic Opera house with what happened at the Auditorium back in 1917-'18, when we had a World war instead of a global war, Campanini instead of Gallo, a resident company instead of itinerant troupers, and a bankroll sufficient to swing 76 performances instead of 26?

Rosa Raisa.

From the point of view of novelties, that bankroll bought little we could envy today. The season opened with a splendidly staged failure by Mascagni, a piece called "Isabeau" in which Rosa Raisa impersonated a heroine of Lady Godiva inclinations, riding an offstage horse while draped in a wig even more voluminous than Melisande's. Novelties in English — they always had a couple on tap — were Henry Hadley's "Azora," a kind of Aztec "Aïda," and "A Daughter of the Forest," by one Arthur Nevin, brother of Ethelbert Nevin. Mr. Nevin, who was in charge of music at Camp Grant in those days, conducted in uniform. No one seems to remember much else about the occasion.

• • •

That was the season when Mary Garden lingered in Paris and Genevieve Vix was brought over in vain attempt to replace her, the season when the idolized Galli-Curci sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" an octave high to avert a panic while brave men removed what turned out to be a dud bomb from the Auditorium. It was the season when Raisa sang her first "Jewels of the Madonna," when Baklanoff introduced his Scarpia to a Chicago which still holds it matchless. It was the season when the company invaded New York, garnering triumphs and chuckles — the latter over the New York critics' belated "discovery" of Galli-Curci.

It would be reassuring to reincarnate some of those vanished voices, and to present the 1942 management with one of those juicy bankrolls. But perhaps we are lucky not to have relinquished opera to priorities. Perhaps it is better to order from the price list side of the menu than not to order at all.

With which saccharine coating of possibly sour grapes, suppose we make a few actual comparisons? Our season will open with Delibes' bijou opera, "Lakme," starring Lily Pons with the French-Canadian tenor, Raoul Jobin, the distinguished Russian basso, Alexander Kipnis, and the Lithuanian contralto, Anna Kaskas. The same opera was sung in wartime 25 years ago by Galli-Curci in her prime, with Lucien Muratore and Georges Baklanoff. If you are going to mourn Muratore — and I don't blame you—be comforted by press reports of the period which insist the music lay too high for his purple-shadowed tenor.

What the 1917 ballet was like I have no idea, tho ballet is important to "Lakme." Francois Ambrosini was ballet master and Annetta Pelucchi was première danseuse, and for my money they are ghosts on tiptoe. Our own performance will mark the restoration of the Ruth Page ballet, absent during the reigns of Ballet Theater and the Littlefield Ballet. Miss Page, who will make one of her few personal appearances of the season in "Lakme" [she also will dance in "Carmen"] studied dancing in Bali and India while on tour, and is hoping to reproduce an impression of the spirit of the orient rather than a literal copy of native dances.

Miss Pons, who resembles an enchanting figurine in the exotic garb of the temple priestess, will have some balletic competition in the matter of decor. The dancers will wear authentic costumes garnered by Miss Page on oriental tour when the Siamese princesses Poon, Pilai and Chong Chitr, nieces of the king, traded their treasures for the American dancer's Peter Pan trappings. Bettina Rosay will adorn a Siamese princess dress, Walter Camryn will be disguised as an agile monkey god, and there is a costume for a giant, providing the ballet can produce one.

Miss Page is keeping for her own use a Cambodian headdress reproduced in Paris from a museum piece worn by a dancing priestess of Ankhor temple. Remember the Cambodian costume that startled the town when Gertrud Wettergren, the Swedish contralto, stepped out as Delilah? Chicago took it and smiled, but the Metropolitan turned thumbs down on its anachronistic splendor.

Speaking of anachronisms, it is rather too bad that "Lakme" doesn't call for a native feast, because one of Miss Page's cherished memories is the princely party in Bangkok where her performance was followed by the Royal Siamese ballet and a banquet, in that order. The food was magnificently exotic, with two exceptions. In honor of the visiting Americans, there were ice cream sodas and weenies.

Well, this is a far cry from opera in wartime. Suppose we get back to work. You will have noted that Miss Rosay is Miss Page's choice for première danseuse, and that Mr. Camryn will be premier danseur unless he follows his predecessor, Bentley Stone, into service. Mr. Camryn has enlisted in the medical corps and is awaiting call. Another leading dancer will be David Adhar, a young Egyptian with a picturesque flair. You may remember him as the original puppet king in Kurt Graff's dictator ballet.

What about opera in German? In 1917 it was dropped from the repertory, altho the preceding season had been rich in the "Ring," "Parsifal," "Tristan" and "Königskinder." In 1942 we may have one Wagnerian opera. Mr. Gallo is considering "Lohengrin," with Rose Bampton, Kerstin Thorborg, Lauritz Melchior and George Czaplicki.

This would be an ideal season for revival of Russian opera, but no plans have materialized. There will be, for the first time in Chicago opera history, a subscription performance of Polish opera, the beloved "Halka" of Moniuszko. Kiepura and Czaplicki will appear in it, and a Polish Opera guild has been formed to coöperate in supporting the production. Chairman of the guild is Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Barzynski, of the quartermaster corps, United States army.

Altho Mr. Gallo has the first week's repertory scaled to schedule, he is parsimonious about doling out information subject to change. However, he admits that the first subscription performance, Monday, Nov. 9, will be "Rigoletto," with Josephine Antoine, Anna Kaskas, Jan Kiepura, John Charles Thomas, and the young Greek basso, Nicola Moscona.

• • •

Other assorted operatic news notes include the engagement of the beautiful Czech soprano, Jarmila Novotna, who sang Violetta here in 1940, and the signing of Robert Lawrence, music and dance critic of the New York Herald-Tribune, to conduct an unidentified opera or operas. Laszlo Halasz has been added to the conducting staff, and John Brownlee to the list of baritones. Halevy's "La Juive," considered as a vehicle for Moishe Oysher, has been dropped because of the singer's indisposition.

Item by item, the opera season adds up to an entity, trying to hold its own as a determined little patch of civilization clinging to the slippery surface of life in wartime. To the best of its ability, considering transportation, cash and competition, it will continue to give us five weeks of life as usual for the duration.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Edgar Nelson, veteran Chicago conductor, is celebrating his 30th anniversary with the Chicago Sunday Evening Club tonight by featuring two of his oldest choruses at the Orchestra Hall opening of the club's 36th season. The club's own chorus will be augmented by the Marshall Field & Company Choral Society in patriotic concert. Dr. Nelson started his Sunday Evening Club activities in 1911 as an organist. Under his direction the chorus has grown from less than 50 to approximately 125 voices, and has sung to more than 3,000,000 listeners.

Dr. Edgar Nelson.

Hermann Leopoldi, a favorite minstrel in pre-war Vienna, will be making his Chicago debut at Orchestra Hall next Saturday night, when he appears in recital with his partner, the Viennese coloratura, Helen Moeslein. Song writer, singer and entertainer in general, Mr. Leopoldi bore a charmed life until Hitler marched into Austria. A friend of the doomed chancellor, Schlusnigg, Leopoldi was arrested and sent to concentration camps, first at Dachau and then at Buchenwald. He kept on singing and he kept on writing. The "Song of Buchenwald," a march for the prisoners, was one result. In 1939, Leopoldi escaped to America and set to work writing Americans songs in his own Viennese style. He will display some of them at his recital.

The Chicago Negro Opera guild will present two performances of "Aïda" at the Civic Opera House Saturday and Sunday nights, Oct. 10 and 11, starting at 8 o'clock. The leading singers are La Julia Rhea in the title-rôle, William Franklin as Amonasro, Napoleon Reed as Radames, Nellie Dobson Plant as Amneris, Reginald Burris as the King, and Jackson Smith as the High Priest. There will be a chorus of 75 voices and a ballet, plus the Chicago Opera orchestra.

Critic Calls Attention to William Byrd

By Cecil Smith.

Last year we celebrated the birth anniversaries of Mozart and Dvorak. In earlier years, still within recent memory, we have paid similar tribute to Bach, Handel, Brahms, Schubert, and Beethoven, among others. [No, you can't trip me up; I know it was the centennial of the death, and not the birth, of Schubert and Beethoven which gave rise to festivals of their music in 1928 and 1927.]

It would be both a pity and a profound injustice, therefore, to let the William Byrd quadricentennial slip past unnoticed this year, in the manner in which the bicentennial of Dietrich Buxtehude, the greatest immediate predecessor of Bach, passed without due recognition five years ago. A formal occasion of this kind gives an opportunity to bring into focus the achievements of a composer who often is too little appreciated by the general public.

To millions of Americans, and even to thousands of cultured and experienced concertgoers, the name of William Byrd is unknown, or at best unidentified by specific acquaintance with any of his works. Yet Byrd was one of the supreme composers of the 16th century, surpassed only by Palestrina and Victoria, if indeed by them. In the history of English music he stands as a towering genius, the full equal of Henry Purcell, and in many regards his superior. While his most numerous works were in the field of choral music, he was one of the first men ever to compose a string quartet, and his music for the virginal opened new horizons in keyboard style.

If any of Byrd's music can be called familiar, his motets for unaccompanied choir most nearly fall in this category. Thruout his life [he was born either late in 1542 or early in 1543, and died, after a full career, in 1623], Byrd remained loyal to the Roman Catholic faith. This fact did not prevent him, however, from devoting part of his talent to the composition of liturgical works for the newly established Church of England. It would be difficult, indeed, to choose between his Latin and his English motets in the matter of expressive beauty.

The style of Byrd's church music derives immediately from that of Palestrina and other 16th century Italian masters. But in spite of the elaborate interweavings of counterpoint which were the essence of his inherited style, Byrd invested his music with great originality and daring. Rhythmic figures are charged with such fire and energy as to become positively exciting. When the sense of the text seemed to call for unusual devices of word representation, he was able to conceive extraordinary dissonances and displacements of expected harmonic resolution, with the result that his music is filled with an exceptional sense of suspense and surprise.

A full acquaintance with the finest liturgical music of Byrd leaves no room for doubt that he is one of the great composers of the ages. I hope that Chicago choral groups will discover the ineffable "Justorum Animæ" ["The Souls of the Righteous"], whose mood of tender solace places it upon the pinnacle of religious expressiveness; the tender "Ave Verum Corpus" ["Hail, True Body"], with its subtle and meaningful uses of dissonance; the Anglican motet "I Will Not Leave You Comfortless," with its unearthly closing alleluias; or such sturdy and noble works as "Sacerdotes Domini" and the Easter motet "Haec Dies."

Byrd's ventures into the lighter field of madrigal writing were less numerous than those of such contemporaries as Thomas Morley and Thomas Weelkes, who gave most of their time and thought to secular choral music. But the Byrd repertory is dotted with delightful, gay settings of Elizabethan lyrics. Two of the best of these, both worthy of frequent performance, are "Though Amarillis Dance in Green" and "This Sweet and Merry Month of May."

Keyboard performers, and their audiences as well, should take pleasure in the naïve but brightly interesting piece which Byrd wrote for the virginal, a smaller predecessor of the harpsichord. Because of the newness of the keyboard medium, these works seem primitive by comparison with the assured and lofty church works.

• • •

In a manner popular in his day, Byrd was fond of arguing publicly in favor of widespread musical study. Both the quaintness and the enthusiasm of his attitude were summed up in the following famous quotation, found in the preface of "Psalms, Sonets, and Songs of Sadness and Pietie," published in 1588:

"Reasons briefly set downe by th'author, to perswade every one to learne to sing.

"First, It is a knowledge easely taught, and quickly learned, wher there is a good Master, and an apt Scoler.

"2. The exercise of singing is delightfull to Nature, & good to preserue the health of Man.

"3. It doth strengthen all parts of the brest, & doth open the pipes.

"4. It is a singular good remedie for a stutting & stamaring in the speech.

"5. It is the best meanes to procure a perfect pronunciation, & to make a good Orator.

"6. It is the onely way to know where Nature hath bestowed the benefit of a good voyce: which guift is so rare, as there is not one among a thousand, that hath it: and in many, that excellent guift is lost, because they want Art to expresse Nature.

"7. There is not any Musicke of Instruments whatsoever, comparable to that which is made of the voyces of Men, where the voyces are good, and the same well sorted and ordered.

"8. The better the voyce is, the meeter it is to honour and serue God there-with: and the voyce of Man is chiefly to be emploied to that ende.

"Since singing is so good a thing,
"I wish all men would learne to sing."

Modern Youth Is Pretty Wonderful, Says Adviser

Initiative in Time of War Is Inspiring

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

If you hear some one talking in critical terms about our younger generation, you'd better ask them, as a friend of ours does: "Do you know any of them? Have you any of them in your family?"

Oddly, response invariably is, this friend tells us, that the severest critics of the younger generation are persons who have no close kin or contact with youth. They're the kind who thrive on recitals of human misdoings and their criticisms have no more basis than that of persons who revel in other's misdoings as a sort of balm to their own self-appointed superiority.

• • •

All of which serves to introduce our terrific enthusiasm over our nation's younger people. Their stamina, their initiative, their realism, under ordinary circumstances, is glorious. In time of war it is inspiring.

Within our own personal scope, individual cases of meeting life head-on have thrilled us on a number of occasions. The way so many of the girls and boys have swung into employment, often doing the hardest kind of manual work in order to help out at home or to purchase stamps and bonds is truly heroic and should forever still those voices raised against youth. Our hat is off to them in a magnificent bow.

Then word reaches me, by one present at the first New York State Junior Fair, held at Cortland, N. Y., by the New York State 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers, of the rural younger generation working hand in hand, and shoulder to shoulder, with the older generation.

These are 'teen age boys and girls, armed with knowledge and skills gained thru their publicly supported educational agencies, who are helping their families and communities make the most of the human and material resources vitally needed for war. A soul-stirring job they're doing, too, indicating that as long as a country can produce young generation crops of this kind that country's future need hold no alarms.

The homemaking exhibits at the fair showed various ways girls from 10 to 21 can, and are, helping at home in the country's war effort. Emphasized were preservation of foods and food neutrients, and adequate nutrition; the conservation of household furnishings and conservation of clothing.

• • •

Girls from farms and small towns thruout New York state demonstrated different ways to preserve food and prepare strength-giving meals; to restore the life of old clothing and old furniture; how to prevent accidents resulting from carelessness and lack of housekeeping foresight. Judged by outstanding food specialists, the exhibits presented by this group were deemed excellent, keyed to the standards set by the specialists.

In the clothing exhibit, for example, were clothes remodeled in different ways and mended. Included was a girl's suit made of feed bags, with printing removed and material dyed.

Work clothes of good sturdy material and remodeled old materials were shown along with children's clothes, accessories such as mitten and cap sets made from old coats, and belts made from leftover felt hats. In other words, everything turned to account and in clever enough design to elicit high praise.

• • •

In the home improvement display, a dressing table and a desk made of old wash stands showed a clever turn of hand. Refinished and reupholstered chairs spoke well for the improved homes from which these young people come. Bureau drawers arranged in sections, to keep contents neatly and conveniently in place, showed a movement on young girls' part that must cause much motherly rejoicing.

Even the great American curse, the can opener, appears due for a dim-out in future household operations, for these girls from the backbone homes of the country know how to do their own canning of fruits and vegetables, the trick of drying apples, preparing green beans for freezing, etc., and one 15 year old showed how to make a tasty meal from her supply of preserved foods.

Let's take the case history of this 15 year old, Phyllis Uphill. She lives on a farm with her father, mother, and three sisters. She does most of the cooking for her family because that's where her interest lies. She is aiming for college next fall and has a hopeful eye on radio for a career. She feels that college will give her additional knowledge to use on her own farm or to pass on to other women on farms.

Or, take Kathryn Griffin, who has just emerged from her 16th year. Beside doing all the baking for her family [mother, father, and older brother] and taking full charge of the vegetable garden, she graduated last year from high school and is planning to take a post-graduate course this coming year, after which her plans are for a home economics course at Cornell university.

• • •

We could go on with names of other girls, Ada Mae Marshall, of a large family, a food freezing expert at 16, aiming to enter Cornell university next fall, meantime lending a helping hand on the farm as well as the home work.

Household Forum

[Have you some household help that lightens labor or conserves materials? Is there some convenience you could enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune.]

Mrs. L. H., Chicago.—There are several in our family and this is the way I launder our silk hose, three times a week. I put them in a fine mesh bag and douse in luke warm sudsy water for about three minutes. I follow this by rinsing in some five rinses of clear, luke warm water and then roll in turkish towel to remove excess moisture. After this I open bag, smooth out stockings and hang up to dry. This eliminates danger of snagging and catching. Any shoe soil or polish spots must be removed first.

* *

E. J. Brown, Springfield, Ill.—This is the month I give the family swimming suits a thoro washing, rinsing, and drying, and then when dry, wrap them tightly in several thicknesses of newspapers and store in a spot I'm sure is safe from all moths and insect pests.

* *

Mrs. T. H., Chicago.—If any dresser drawers in your house are sticking this fall, pick a dry day and rub paraffin on all parts of the drawers, even to their runners. This should work, but it it doesn't you may have to shave down sticking edeges, a bit.

Mrs. G. D. C., Pittsburgh, Pa.—I've already found some peace-time use for those new luminous paints. In addition to using them at strategic points around my house, I have coated our street house number with such a paint, and it is certainly a "help" after dark.

* *

Bessie Doyle, New York City.—I find it an easy way to mend a tear in a sweater or similar material, if I stretch material over a glass tumbler. I hold this firm with a rubber band and garment is not hard to repair. Of course if hole must be "knitted," that's a different matter.

* *

Mrs. E. Smith, Chicago.—Not wishing to throw away anything this fall, or use space to "store" it, my husband took our baby's outgrown folding play pen and made it into a gate at the head of our open stairway. Now I've no longer worry over that open stairway, even tho our small boy's room is right at the head of it.

* *

Gracie G., Escanaba, Mich.—Last winter my husband cut a notch in one side of my clothes pole so now it is easy, in freezing weather, to remove any ice from line.

Etiquet Editor Has Tips on Hair Grooming

Public Use of Comb Is Bad Manners

What does the dog-eared calling card signify? When should formal calls be made? Answers to these and a score of other questions relating to correct procedure are given in the new leaflet, "Etiquet for Army Wives," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. Get your copy today at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn St. and Tribune Tower. Price, 5 cents. Postpaid, 7 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

A woman's hair can be a most attractive feature, or it can be a most unhappy sight. Without a doubt the hair demands much more attention than any other single feature and more time has to be spent on it if good grooming is to be achieved. Methods of coming by that cleanliness and a smooth and becoming coiffure are problems more appropriately discussed by the beauty editor, which she does from time to time, but we mention them as essentials of grooming, and grooming does fit into the etiquet picture.

• • •

There are other things about hair and hair management for us to be more verbose about. First of all, it shouldn't be combed in public. Women sitting at a restaurant table, whisking a comb thru their hair, are a most unwholesome sight, with stray hairs floating off to settle on the shoulders or even on the table. Neither should women touch or pat their hair in place constantly, as some are accustomed to do. One's hair, except when just out from under the dryer, is not very sanitary and it is an unclean habit to be forever fondling it.

With most persons it is a nervous habit, but one that should be overcome, nevertheless. Besides being an unsanitary practice, to comb one's hair in public is not a becoming gesture. If the hair needs combing, or the coiffure rearranging, there are dressing rooms where it may be done privately.

• • •

And that brings up another complaint, the carelessness with which some women use these public dressing rooms. If one does stop to comb one's hair, don't you agree that care should be taken, extreme care, that stray hairs that have become separated from the fold should not be left to rest on the dressing table or the wash bowl? Exercise the same fastidiousness that you would at home.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

If you want to be excessively Pollyannaish and maintain stoutly that some good comes out of such a catastrophe as war you might point to the cream colognes.

Born of an anticipated wartime restriction on alcohol, cream colognes, which started out to be a substitute, may very likely displace the real thing in the affections of women, particularly as a fall and winter grooming aid for those whose skins are thin. It has the tremendous advantage of being nondrying.

• • •

One of our favorites among cream colognes was one of the first, if not the first, on the market. It contains no alcohol, it's smoothly creamy without being gooey and as a perfuming agent it is tops. Actually, its consistency is closer to that of good milk than of heavy cream; as a result it works into the skin suavely and quickly—and is as balm to the parched skin that ordinarily rebelled when alcohol products touched it!

The cream cologne is important to women in this dry-skin section. It fits in beautifully to the program of lubrication that they must follow if they'd have any comfort at all. It gives them one more beauty aid that helps the oiling process, lining up with the bland soaps and soothing lotions designed to contribute lubrication, even if infinitesimally, rather than to take it away.

• • •

In this thinnish white cream cologne that we like so well you have your choice of fragrances. If you want one that is superlatively lovely, and unique, you'll choose the newest, a little warm and lush but exquisitely dainty. It seems to us particularly suitable to a cream cologne that is used as a body lotion, since at one swoop it makes you feel both fresh and orchidaceous.

Born of the wartime restrictions on alcohol, cream cologne, intended to be a substitute, is very likely to supplant the old form in the affections of women whose skin is excessively dry. It's refreshing, fragrant, works in instantly, and is not drying!

"Claudia" Enjoying Big Success in Australia

The John Golden office has received reports about the various engagements of "Claudia" in Australia. After runs in Sydney and Melbourne the Rose Franken play took in £375 at its first performance in Brisbane. Because of war restrictions the royalties due Miss Franken cannot be sent out of Australia. Consequently Miss Franken has arranged for them to go to her son, Lieut. Paul Franken, now stationed there, who in turn has been donating the money to Australian charities.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" has been doing phenomenal business on its tour of the west coast. In Los Angeles the company, headed by Boris Karloff, grossed over $40,000 in a fortnight. BUY AND SAVE ★ Advice for the Careful Shopper

Fashions - - - - - - - By Angela

When less than $10 will buy such values as one of these new and clever fall daytime dresses, inflation worries look like the nebulous stuff that dreams are made of. My head isn't big enough to go into the inflation problem beyond such obvious observations as the above and it is a mistake for it to take these little flights of fancy into the mysteries of economics, but it can recognize a large $10 worth when it sees it hanging on the clothes rack.

One of the important fashion revivals this season and one that receives an enthusiastic welcome is the cowl neckline. The dress at the top of the column is an example; a black crêpe dress with red cowl and red trimming the sleeves. Also comes in brown with aqua. A braided belt ending in long fringe tassels ties at the waistline. Under $8.

The naval influence is evident in the second design. It is a two piece dress in rayon crêpe with the pockets and the square sailor collar of the double breasted jacket trimmed in rows of narrow satin. The dress comes in medium blue, black, or purple.

Next red and gray plaid wool worked on the straight and on the bias in an interesting manner. Flaring pockets in the skirt give it the peg top line. A black velvet bow and velvet buttons decorate the bodice. Under $8.

• • •

In No. 4 black sequins glitter on a crêpe afternoon dress. Beyond that it is utterly simple with a high round neckline slightly draped, bracelet length sleeves and front gored skirt.

Number 5 is a two piece dress. The skirt is plaited all 'round. The flaring peplum of the fitted bodice is edged with a lattice-like weave of ropes of the same material. This lattice also makes the little epaulettes jutting out over the shoulders.

Send Writing Equipment to Service Men

Men as a rule are not skilled or practiced or inclined in faithfully upholding a correspondence of a social nature. But the men who are in the services, especially those who are overseas on any of our far flung fronts, are great letter writers, it develops. The receipt of letters has suddenly become highly important, they have discovered, so they write letters in order to get letters. They also seem to realize something of the anxiety for their safety and comfort that family and friends feel for them, which they assuage with more letters.

One boy stationed somewhere in England kept a record of his correspondence for one month when it became evident to him that he was far exceeding any past efforts. He boasts of 24 letters that month, probably more than he wrote during an entire year before he joined up.

• • •

There's a useful present you can send a man like that. It is a box of writing paraphernalia.

First of all it comes packed in a heavy cardboard box all lined and ready for addressing and mailing.

Inside the wrapping is another box large enough and sturdy enough to be used as a firm writing surface when a table top is not available. The top of the box is covered with blotting paper.

• • •

The contents consist of a small manila folder for the safekeeping of unanswered mail, 75 plain oblong sheets of white writing paper with a small neat insignia of the branch of the service engraved in the upper left corner, 60 envelopes, 24 postcards, and three pencils, besides another small blotter. And underneath all this is a little well in the box in which to tuck away any other little items such as stamps, erasers, pencils, or whatever. Under $2.

Chicago Shops Open Monday Evenings to Aid War Workers

Chicago stores, one by one, are following an early example set some months ago of staggering their "open for business" hours on Monday of every week so that women employed during the daytime in defense or other industries not close to the downtown shopping district would have an opportunity to get the shops, compare values, find just the right item and make their purchases in a leisurely manner.

Remember, shoppers—you who cannot accomplish your errands on a busy, crowded lunch hour; and you, too, who had planned to come down early Monday morning—that on Monday many of the State street stores and Michigan boulevard shops open at 12 and close at 9.

Decorator Use of Wall Paper Easy on Purse

By Edith Weigle.

Beauty and economy go hand in hand in home decorating this fall. Women are discovering that it is not necessary to spend a lot of money to make their houses and apartments more comfortable and more attractive to live in.

One budget-wise way of decorating is with wall paper and wall paper borders. If you've seen some of the charming new model houses the stores are displaying now you know that often just one wall of a room is hung with paper, the others being painted. Because of this you can indulge in really distinguished wall paper, and some of the designs are so beautiful they look as if they were done by an artist rather than by a machine.

A bedroom, for example, may have an artistic floral paper on the walls against which the beds are placed, while the other three walls repeat the background tone of the paper, or pick up one of the colors in the design. A dining room may use this same idea, having the paper on the wall that takes the sideboard.

Still another of these economical tricks is to paper an alcove in the bedroom or living room, or the breakfast nook in the kitchen. The paper in this case should be gay and lively.

• • •

Have you an old card table you'd like to rejuvenate? It's a simple matter to give it a new lease on life by painting or staining the legs and by applying wall paper to the top of the table. Just put it on with regular wall paper paste, and after it is thoroly dry go over it with a thin coat or two of colorless shellac. This protects it.

You can make a stunning, big coffee table by buying an inexpensive, unpainted square table, cutting down the legs and papering the top. If you want a marbleized effect there are available large squares of a special paper that exactly imitates marble. These aren't cheap by any means, but you'll need only a few for your table top. They're very smart, too, for the tops of chests or of console tables for the hall.

If you want to transform the appearance of a room in your home, yet don't want to go to the expense or trouble of papering or painting you can achieve the effect by using one of the many colorful, well styled wallpaper borders. A number of these come already coated with a sticker gum and all you have to do is to moisten it and apply.

Run an ivy border around the windows and doors in your bedroom and see how lovely the effect is. Or, if you have a large mirror panel in any of your rooms you can frame it in a border. In a bathroom run the border just above the tiling or wainscoting and also, just below the ceiling, and around the window. Kitchen cupboards can be outlined with borders showing gayly colored fruits, and you can repeat the effect in the panels of the kitchen doors.

The nice feature about these new wall paper borders is that they may be applied directly to either a papered or painted wall surface, as well as to wood, glass, metal and other surfaces. They can enliven a clothes closet ensemble, serving as trims for hat boxes, shoe boxes, shelves, and cupboards. And as many of them are washable as well as sunfast, they are as practical as they are economical and pretty.

Wall paper borders, already coated with sticker, make gay, inexpensive decorations for your home. Here an ivy design is used to frame a bedroom door. There are special patterns, too, for kitchens and bathrooms.

Take Good Care of Household Appliances

By Louise Bargelt

Now is the time to shop carefully for household appliances that are still available for many of our best domestic "helpers" are made of critical materials that have been drafted for our war production.

Now is also the time to keep our household appliances in tiptop shape so that they will function and stay "on the job" for the duration; insurance against a day when we may be told that "there isn't any more."

Our family vacuum cleaner will work longer and give us better service if we keep it well lubricated, empty its bag after each cleaning, keep the nozzle and brush well adjusted, and avoid running over pins and metal objects.

Our electric fans, before storing away this fall, should be oiled and cleaned and wrapped in paper. And during seasons of use, they need occasional lubrication and oiling.

• • •

Our heating pads should be kept flat when not in use. When in use they should not be creased or immersed in water or have any pin thrust into them.

Our refrigerator should be checked occasionally by an expert to see that its mechanism is performing properly. It should be defrosted according to manufacturer's instructions and if one has lost the instructions on the general care of the refrigerator it would be well to get another copy. Keep the rubber door gasket well cleaned and dust with talcum to avoid sticking. Wipe up any vegetable juices or fruit juices immediately to keep the finish in good condition, and do not overload the shelves.

Take good care of the family vacuum cleaner to make it last for the duration.

Our electric irons should never be dropped as this can damage a vital part. If the iron is not automatic, don't let it get overheated and at any sign of overheating in the cord, have a competent serviceman check cord and iron.

• • •

Our washers should never be overloaded, dirty suds should never be left in them, and after using a washer it should be drained thoroly. Wringer rolls should be rinsed and wiped dry and connecting cord should be wiped dry.

Our ironers should be kept covered when not in use and if an ironer is kept in a cold room in winter it should be taken into warm room for at least an hour before using. If starch sticks on the ironer shoe a mild silver polish will remove it. A good bleach should remove stains if they are not too serious. An ironer should never overheat, as this can shorten the life of its heating elements.

Our ranges should be cared for according to the manufacturer's directions. Range surface and oven should be cleaned only when cool and no spilled food should be allowed to dry or harden on the range.

Our electric fuses protect any electrical equipment that we have and if they give evidence of too frequent burning out, a reliable electrician should be consulted. Every care should be taken not to overload a circuit or to use wiring and cords that have become defective.

Our toasters and grills, our mixers and coffee makers and waffle bakers deserve redoubled care these days since the service they will render depends on proper care and use.

Keep an electric toaster free of crumbs, oil according to manufacturer's direction when toast raising mechanism demands it, see that wiring and heating units are kept out of water.

Never let left-over coffee stand in a coffee maker and when cleaning the unit be sure that the heating element doesn't get wet. Wash filter cloth after each using and the bowls as you would glassware.

Author Finds New York Is Changed Town

By Cousin Eve.

Time was when New York had a certain elusive charm in the autumn. Like a beautiful woman somewhat faded, autumnal tints became her well—she had the air of having lived well and expensively. One could always pick a frock and a hat or two between jaunts to Long Island, or drives on the superways of the East river, the North river, and the wooded palisades of the Hudson. Over there were chestnuts a-bursting, the reek of wood smoke, and the purple veil of dusk over the Hudson bridge as day was done.

But best of all were one's friends, miraculously always there in the autumn, and one went dining, and one went night owling at the latest boite de nuit after an amusing show, or just lunching!

This autumn, however, everything was different. First, you couldn't plan anything on account of gas rations and 4,000 taxis were laid off. Then everybody seemed to have moved. Your favorite shops had vanished, you found your friends by accident. Hotels were crowded, shops were crowded, but alas! it was a new and strange world. You were like a week-end visitor from another planet. One thing in New York, however, unchanged in all its excellence, is the York club in East 62d street. A neighbor of the Knickerbocker club, it stands a monument to unchanging standards of comfortable living. The staff was there intact, the fine chef, the superhousekeeping, the cozy habits of the place. Afternoon tea was doing as usual, and little bridge games were going on in the small salon. Chintzes, polished wood, magazines, and flowers were worthy of a private house, and a charming terrace where one could sun one's self a while.

Living at the York club nowadays is the valiant Mme. Slavko Grouitch, American widow of a Serbian diplomat, who fights on for Jugo-Slavia. Such a handsome woman with a coronet of chestnut braids. And one morning, from her home up the Hudson, Elsie Winslow appeared, looking very debonaire and handsome. She had come to town to outfit herself for a trip by motor to Oklahoma. Her husband, Johnny Winslow, now a colonel, has, it seems, gone back to active duty in the army. After retiring four years ago at the end of his billet as military attaché in Poland, he did a spot of ambulance driving with the French army up to the epoch of the German invasion, with several very narrow escapes for his life.

The Winslows were stationed in Chicago for three years prior to Poland and have many friends there. They have built a beautiful early American house on a mountain top at Millbrook, N. Y., an estate called Robin Wood, and here Mrs. Winslow keeps home fires burning while her husband is in service.

I went forth to Marochka Chatfield-Taylor's dress designing studio in Madison avenue one day and found it closed for the duration, and Marochka's group of ultra smart young matron patrons are scattered to the four winds. She herself is living at Croton-on-the-Hudson, and Otis, most amusing and Bohemian of the Chatfield-Taylors, is doing ambulance field service in North Africa Charles Ingalls Pierce Jr. sailed away from New York a fortnight ago to join the same group. Mr. Pierce had a wonderful job in a Manhattan law office and could never have passed either the army or navy tests, so that his joining up with the African field service is purely voluntary. And a handsomer, better set up lad never played over the golf links at Hot Springs!

MARRIED TO ENSIGN

Mrs. William C. Childs is at home at the eastern base where Ensign Childs is stationed. The former Alice Graff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett D. Graff of Winnetka, was a July bride. Her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. George Childs of Highland Park.

Well, after all, they say that Cairo with its barricades of barbed wire is marvelous. The whole city is divided into many armed camps, and there isn't much mingling. That is, the numerous Poles hang together, the British keep their own counsel, and the Americans flock by themselves in their very extensive quarters. The followers of Gen. de Gaulle also are represented as well as those of various allied European countries.

For the moment, Cairo has certainly the center of the stage, and men on leave say it is interesting.

The Star-Lit Roof of the Waldorf sounds romantic and is nice, but is not quite so romantic as it sounds—the stars are merely make believe and studded over all the ceiling of the 24th floor roof. The Star-Lit Roof is one of those places where you can't read the menu because of the gloom. And nothing reaches your ears but the boom boom of Xavier Cugat's band, one of the biggest and brassiest in existence.

I went dining there with Col. and Mrs. Le Ray Berdeau of Palm Beach, who have a pied-a-terre at Hampshire House until the holidays, when they go south. The Berdeaus never have a dull moment. Their life is one round of autumn house parties, of dinners and the play, of exiled friends in New York from the world over. They chose the Star-Lit Roof as it is quite new, and the maitre d'hotel gave us a ringside table and we were all set. But Señor Cugat's band just plain blew us out of our seats, and with almost tears in our eyes we begged to have a table in some far more sheltered spot, back of beyond! From there we enjoyed the mass of strangers dancing like so many tugboats chugging around the dance floor.

There were tanned service men present, mostly British officers, darker than their khaki uniforms after service on Egyptian sands. They seemed to be jolly fellows enjoying themselves much.

• • •

The Berdeau apartment at Hampshire House is at the top, all gray and crimson with lots of mirrors, very pretty and last wordish—with wonderful views across Central park and the fantastic towers of the upper town.

Two other Chicagoans, Mrs. Frederick Haskell and Mrs. George B. Hull [the former Mrs. Edward Carry] also abide in the chic Hampshire House.

Another day I went lunching in high places—the 23d floor of the Savoy-Plaza, which has come into great vogue with Newporters. If fashion is anywhere in New York, lunching or dining, it is there. My host had been living in Paris for umpteen years and had suddenly fallen in love with greater New York. He was completely enslaved, black-outs and all.

We had that day at lunch French servants, French cooking, and the usual gusty conversation, and I felt sure that he would be a passenger on the first ship Paris bound after the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayden B. Harris have closed Fort Evans Farms at Leesburg, Va., for the duration and are in New York. They have in fact taken an apartment until the war's end, but where was like finding the needle in the haystack.

Hayden Harris' model farm, built on a Civil war battleground, hasn't been doing so well without any "help" whatever. Besides themselves to consider, the Harris family had its zoo with all the nice little beasties out of Africa to be fed. The wire cages for the zoo were out in front of the Dutch farmhouse in plain view, and I believe the animals have been loaned to the Richmond zoo for the duration.

Among the interesting foreigners seen in New York was Count Serge Fleury, whose efforts to return to France with the Quakers are unavailing. Countess Fleury is an American woman whose first husband was Giulio de Herrera, a vastly wealthy Guatemalan. The Fleurys have a house in Paris in Avenue Foch and a Spanish butler who takes care of the property in their absence. Count Fleury has just published a book, "Talleyrand," and a quite fascinating little sketch on the Empress Eugénie in a volume of short stories called "The Empress, My God-Mother." It sounds a little upstage at the present moment of leftist proceedings. But in reality Fleury's grandfather was foreign minister of Napoleon III., and as a young boy Fleury visited Empress Eugénie at Farnsworth, where she lived in exile in England, and was welcomed as long as she lived at her house in Paris facing the Tuileries.

RECENT BRIDE

Mrs. James M. Adams, who was Miss Helen Bohnsack, until her marriage last Tuesday to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel B. Adams of Evanston. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bohnsack of Park Ridge. The bride is a graduate of the University of Michigan, and Mr. Adams, who is attending officers' training school in Wyoming, is a graduate of Amherst.

[Carlos Photo.]

Fleury has been delivering courses of lectures on various interesting periods of French history at American and Canadian universities, and no Frenchman is better equipped than he in matters diplomatic, or French historical.

It was great fun seeing the Lanfear Norries in New York. They had lately flown up from 10 months in South America, largely in the interior of Brazil, and had just opened their house in a quiet section of Murray Hill. The last time I had dinner with them, the hostess was a very British bride who had just married the only son and heir of the Comtesse André de Jumilhac of Paris. The Norrie house at that time was a very rococo affair full of gift furniture, marble busts, and family portraits by Carolus Duran. Chrystabel positively shrieked as she looked about her domain, it made her so nervous.

The other night, what a change! In spite of being in Brazil she had done the salon over and it was white as snow, white hangings, walls, carved chimney piece, magnificent clock and candelabra, and a pale blue brocade loveseat for two. Otherwise the chairs were white, and also the only portrait in sight was one of Chrystabel herself done by some hotsy Brazilian, all in white like a ewe lamb. The portrait was in fact in the style of Boutet de Monvel, with only Chrystabel's black hair by way of contrast.

I paid her many compliments on the changes in her house. But after all she should have good taste, as she owns one of the finest Elizabethan mansions in England, with all the beautiful contents as they came down to the present day More-Molyneux family.

At dinner, talk turned on a mutual friend who died in the spring at Palm Beach, leaving a great fortune in jewels and securities. She had, it appears, willed a magnificent diamond necklace and pendant to Comtesse de Jumilhac. Oddly enough, it was the only piece in the great collection of jewels that had vanished into thin air without a trace.

The Comtesse remains in her Paris house and has no need of diamonds at the moment.

TO BE MARRIED

Miss Miriam Ethel Dempsey's engagement to Staff Sergt. Gerard W. Stark is announced by her parents, Mrs. Ethel H. Dempsey of Homewood and Caryl W. Dempsey of Oak Park. Miss Dempsey attended Knox college. Her fiance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stark of Wallace street, is stationed with the army air corps at Paine field, Everett, Wash.

Mrs. Edward Warren Everett has finally located in New York and bought a house in the sixties, east of Park avenue. Thus has Chicago's most intellectual woman decided the question of where to live in these times. During her husband's life the family had a charming English style house in Hinsdale, but the new dwelling is quite of the orient with a subdued background of gray carpets and hangings to show off the beauties of the bronzes, screens, and the manifold oriental works of art. Yet the effects are simple.

I went to Mrs. Everett's house of a hot September day, and on the lower floor there was a vista thru a garden, trees, and fresh green leaves. In the second floor library was a most workmanlike desk, in a very beautiful room. And here the hostess [just as pretty and chic as ever] said she spent hours each day translating from Chinese into English from the old oriental philosophers. She knows Sanskrit, Chinese and Japanese and can read, write and speak the latter two languages, which are not the least bit alike, but are both exceedingly complicated in their written forms.

We wondered that day if ever again we should browse in the antique shops of Peking, now becoming more and more Japanese, according to travelers. Mrs. Everett's only daughter, Eleanor, is married to a young British born man, Alan Watt, who is studying at Northwestern for the ministry. And when graduated, young Mr. Watt expects to see service with our troops, as he has become an American.

HERALDS
A NEW ERA
IN WOMEN'S FOOTWEAR

The government has recently issued an order which regulates the manufacturing, styling and design of footwear. Shoes are to be limited to monotones—high colors can no longer be tanned or dyed—extravagant frills are discouraged. This, in brief, is an inkling of the new era ahead.

We will strive, however as always, to offer the best in fit, quality, lasts, workmanship, materials . . . we, and our manufacturers, know how to turn out. That same concentration of ideals which has earned for us an outstanding reputation for fine footwear will always be the guiding principle of a shoe bearing our label.

NOTE:

Illustrated are some of the models affected by the new government regulations. Since these and many other styles of our current collection can no longer be duplicated, we suggest you come in at your earliest convenience for your fall and winter footwear selections.

Clubs Begin War Season on Grace Note

By Irene Steyskal.

Never in their history have the women's clubs of the city approached the fall and winter seasons better organized for service, or more fully aware of the serious responsibilities they must shoulder, because, at this crucial time, they have the machinery set up for united action. This war year finds them ready for hard work and serious study. But women being women, no club season, however serious its major theme, can open without a grace note. And that is provided, both figuratively and literally, this week at a score of opening receptions, luncheons, and programs.

• • •

At the Chicago Woman's club, the president's reception at 3 o'clock Wednesday will be held in a lounge bright with autumn flowers, brought in for the occasion from members' gardens. A string trio will play.

Mrs. Clayton D. Eulette.

Mrs. Clayton D. Eulette, as president, will head the receiving line, and supporting her will be her staff members, Mrs. Fred W. Waterman, Mrs. William H. Soutter, Mrs. Frank H. White, Mrs. Fred B. Frizell, and other members of the board of managers.

Four former presidents of the club will preside at the tea tables: Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley, Mrs. Andrew MacLeish, Mrs. Ozora S. Davis, and Mrs. Burnett Dewey Warner.

For her first offering as program chairman, Mrs. Frederick E. Hutchins will present Capt. Gordon Heriot, traveler, writer, and radio commentator, in a lecture entitled, "Pan-Americanism, Fact or Fiction?"

• • •

Mrs. C. R. Walgreen. [Koehne Photo.]

Tomorrow Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen is opening Hazelwood, her home at Dixon, beautiful now with October's golds and scarlets, to the Garden Club of Illinois for its semiannual conference. There will be a buffet luncheon, walks and rides over the estate, and an afternoon program. The meeting is open to two members of each of the garden groups holding membership in the state club.

Preliminary to the general gathering, Mrs. Raymond Knotts will call a meeting of the directors' board at 10:30 o'clock.

The fall luncheon opening the season for the Southern Woman's Club of Chicago, is posted for 12:30 o'clock Thursday at the Hotel Sherman, with Mrs. George Hanly Nippert presiding. Mrs. Burnett Dewey Warner, immediate past president of the Chicago Woman's club, and Mrs. Thomas Clyne, 1st district president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, are to be present as special guests. Mrs. Warner now is serving as chairman of the Grant Park recreation center for service men, and will tell the group about the work being done there.

Claire Love Dudley will give a program, "Intimate Chatter," and Belle Simmons, lyric soprano, appearing in a Colonial costume, will sing.

Mrs. Carlton Prouty.

Wednesday will find the Protestant Women's Service club and guests gathered at a 12:30 o'clock luncheon table in the Wedgewood room at Marshall Fields'. To lighten a business conference on the year's work, there will be a musical by the Bennett male quartet. Mrs. Carlton Prouty is president of the club, which serves in the field of child welfare.

• • •

The Daughters of the Renaissance are holding their opening fall luncheon at the same hour and in the same place on Tuesday. A program of music and readings is planned.

Mrs. Arthur I. Edison will conduct her first meeting as newly elected president, when the Woman's auxiliary of the Chicago Medical society resumes activities Wednesday. Mrs. Edison has invited the presidents of the auxiliary's 10 branches to attend as guests.

• • •

Four speakers will address the meeting: Dr. Oscar Hawkinson, president elect, and Dr. Fred H. Muller, secretary of the Chicago Medical society; Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, chairman of the woman's division of the Chicago and Cook county war savings staff, and Mrs. Bernice Vander Vries, co-chairman of the woman's division, Illinois State Council of Defense. The Medinah club at 505 North Michigan avenue will be the meeting place.

A program definitely in the war vein is that arranged by the Chicago Altrusa club for its dinner meeting tomorrow evening in the Chicago Woman's club. Ira Latimer, assistant director of the OCD morale committee, will be present to discuss "The Rôle of the Citizen in the War Effort," and Miss Elizabeth Whiteman, an Altrusa member, will review the current issue of International Altrusan, giving special attention to an article on "Incendiary Rumors." The club is headed by Miss Gertrude Gillette.

Miss Ella Daniels.

A membership tea is planned for 4 o'clock today by the Junior Business and Professional Women's club at the Cordon club, 410 South Michigan avenue. Miss Ella Daniels will preside. Arrangements for the afternoon are under the direction of Miss Blanche Von Drasek, vice president and program chairman.

The Women's Society of Christian Service, Rock River conference of the Methodist church, has chosen a religious theme, "Building a Bridge of Prayer," for a conference to be held at 1:30 o'clock Friday in the Chicago Methodist temple at Clark and Washington streets.

Opening its 34th season, the "I Will" club will gather at the Kungsholm at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday for a luncheon and program. J. Brandley-Griffin will give a dramatic recital based on the play, "The American Way." The club is headed by Mrs. Luther C. Snyder. Mrs. George Teague has charge of the year's programs.

Members will appear in "stunts" at a luncheon meeting of the Chicago Women's auxiliary to the Railway Mail association at noon Wednesday in Garrick hall. Mrs. Harry E. Teachout and Mrs. Neil Goin are directing the home talent review, and luncheon arrangements are managed by Mrs. Edward G. Gross, Mrs. Fred Goble, Mrs. J. P. Walker, Mrs. E. A. Curtin, Mrs. Richard Doss, Mrs. A. R. Thomas, and Mrs. Cecil Bernard. Mrs. Fred Billingham will preside.

A board meeting of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations is called by Mrs. Henry W. Hartough for 10:30 o'clock Friday in headquarters in the Republic building.

• • •

Posted at Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs headquarters are: A 1st district board meeting, with Mrs. Thomas Clyne presiding, at 1 o'clock tomorrow; public welfare department conference, under Mrs. S. F. Mirabella's chairmanship, at 10 o'clock, and a 4th division board meeting, with Mrs. Herbert Martin presiding, at 10:45 o'clock Friday; auditions at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday, with Mrs. Charles C. Wells, chairman of the federation's program bureau, in charge.

Mrs. John R. Harmon, president of the Lake City Woman's club, announced that a luncheon and card party are planned for the club's opening at noon Wednesday in the Walnut room of the Morrison hotel. The speaker will be Mrs. Franklin C. E. Lundquist, president of the women's auxiliary of the Svithiod Singing club.

League Will Tag Tomorrow for Children

Mrs. Walter C. Gielow.

A civilian war, as the present world conflict has been termed, strikes hardest at women and children, Britain's prime minister, Winston Churchill, has pointed out. But here, where the bombs have not yet fallen, the war has cast its shadow mostly on children.

Thruout the nation, and particularly in big industrial centers, such as Chicago, the hand that rocked the cradle now is busy on the assembly line, and hundreds of thousands of children are left to the overburdened care of welfare agencies, day nurseries, and settlement houses.

It is to relieve this acute problem and to help build "sturdy boys and girls for America's future," that one of Chicago's oldest tag days will take place tomorrow. It will be the 35th annual tag day of the Chicago Children's Benefit league.

• • •

The league, which has as its purpose the raising of funds for 50 social agencies that care for nearly 50,000 children, this year has raised its tag day goal from $60,000 to $85,000. The increase represents the need for expanded day nurseries, children's homes, clinics, and settlements to house and protect the children of women in the nation's vital war industries.

On every busy street corner in the city and suburbs, more than 7,000 volunteer women workers will offer for donations tomorrow, a little red, white, and blue star, the symbol of the league's patriotic project. In the center of the tag will be pictured the head of a boy, America's war responsibility, future citizen . . . and, possibly, soldier.

The workers will be friends, board members, and leaders of the 50 social, child caring agencies who will benefit by the tag day. Each agency has gathered a force of approximately 125 workers.

• • •

The children's tag day has been held every October since 1908 and is the oldest established tag day in this area. The league, however, which was founded by the late Mrs. W. Scott Thurber, obtained its charter in 1872 and has only one charter officer living, Mrs. William R. Tucker of Evanston, honorary president.

Mrs. Walter C. Gielow, also of Evanston, is president of the league today and is in charge of the 35th annual tag day. Other tag day committee chairmen include Mrs. Royal D. Dwight, Mrs. Henry R. Bafetti, Mrs. J. M. Coen, Mrs. Frank Wohlleber, Mrs. Henry W. Bernhardt, Mrs. Peter J. Doretti, Mrs. Edward J. Hayes, and Mrs. Sidney A. Goreham.

• • •

Aid to the rural children of the nation will be the object of a benefit bridge party to be given by the Southern Woman's Educational alliance, Friday afternoon in the Evanston Woman's club. The alliance, which is greatly responsible for the inception of the 4-H clubs thru its founder, Dr. O. L. Hatcher of Richmond, Va., assists not only individuals but rural school teachers, county superintendents, universities, colleges, and organizations in all parts of the country working with 25,000,000 rural boys and girls.

• • •

Mrs. Theodore Kuehl.

A benefit bazar for the German Old People's home at Forest Park will be held by the Frauenverein, Herrenverein, and the Junior Auxiliary of the Altenheim Tuesday in the home, 7824 Madison street, Forest Park. The bazar will be open from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. with luncheon, afternoon coffee, and supper being served. Mrs. Kathryn Swartz is general chairman and Mrs. Theodor Kuehl, president.

The bridge party will be the annual fall benefit of the Chicago branch of the alliance and will be in charge of Mrs. Michael H. Boley, ways and means chairman. Assisting will be Mrs. William Echols, Mrs. J. Lewis Rubel, Mrs. Lemuel Adams, Mrs. Tracy Bothwell, Mrs. Dan Brown, Mrs. Charles A. Quillen, Mrs. William Murdoch Riach, Mrs. William E. Mayher, Mrs. Samuel P. Whitesides, president, and Mrs. James B. Fitch, treasurer.

• • •

The Deborah Woman's club, whose chief interest is the Deborah Boys' club for underprivileged youngsters, will hold its regular meeting and dessert luncheon Thursday afternoon in the Standard club. The entire cast of the musical review, "Best Foot Forward," will be special guests. A foreign correspondent will be guest speaker. The program will be presented by Mrs. Helen Sontag, and Mrs. Lester L. Stern, president, will be hostess.

The Chicago Club for Crippled Children will open its membership drive at a meeting tomorrow afternoon in the Palmer House. Mrs. H. H. Kant, president, will be chairman of the meeting.

A musical and tea will be given by the Ruth League for Crippled Children this afternoon in the Woman's City club, 410 South Michigan avenue. It will be the first meeting of the year and Miss Lucille Nier, president, will be in charge.

Women in War Work . . .

By Kate Massee

Despite news pictures of men and boys hauling off park cannon and backyard débris as contributions to the salvage campaign, the big job of collecting still belongs to women. Perhaps we should be even more definite and say the big job belongs to housewives. It is they who must go thru the family treasures in the attic or the basement store room; it is they who must sort thru the family possessions in kitchen cupboard and clothes closet, in laundry room and on bric-a-brac shelves to discover every tiny item that can be contributed to victory.

Probably every housewife is already familiar with the items that can be used. But the need is so great that we repeat suggestions in the hope that they may bring out even a few more contributions. Housewives should scour attics for brass or iron beds, electric cords [they contain copper wire], electric toasters, irons, heaters, fans, waffle irons, or any other electrical equipment; all hardware such as door knobs, sash weights, bolts, keys, chains; kitchen utensils such as knives, pots, and pans; lamps and lighting fixtures made of brass, copper or iron; metal ornaments such as candlesticks and picture frames; metal porch and garden furniture.

Radios, screens, toys, coat hangers, old carpeting and blankets, garbage and ash cans—all can be used in the scrap heap.

• • •

The cellar should be a source for worn out stoves and stove pipes, fireplace equipment, steel wool, fire extinguishers, and furnace parts. Metal piping, gutters, metal roofing, and window stripping may be in basement workshops. Also needed are old plumbing fixtures, radiators, metal plates, curtain rods, tanks, incinerators, metal paint brushes, and casters. The garage is a good source for old automobile parts, and old bicycles and tricycles may be parked there, too, along with old garden tools. Housewives shouldn't mix rubber, paper, metal, and rags in their salvage. Each should be kept separate.

Suburban Winnetka, Glencoe, Wilmette, and Kenilworth have worked out a sporting incentive for tin can salvage. Each town tries to collect a high enough per cent of house to house contributions each month to win the loving cup—a No. 12 tin can.

Winnetka has been the winner for the two months of the competition so far. There was a 94 per cent collection the first month, and the second month's record was a collection of .98 pounds per capita—a lot of tin cans!

Boy Scouts have been dispatched to enroll each household in the can salvage, and the four suburbs report that 89 per cent of their residents are saving cans. The combined shipment of cans for the first month was 25,000 pounds and for the second, 35,000 pounds.

The wartime emergency assignment to provide all civilian personnel for government and military offices is the tremendous task of the United States civil service. The need for workers in the various government and military agencies and wartime reduction of operations of many peacetime plants will introduce many women to government jobs. Letters to this department indicate that many wonder, quite naturally, whether they might like civil service appointments. In answer, a young woman recently described her experiences in changing from a clerk in a small office—a job she'd had for 10 years—to working at Great Lakes Naval Training station.

She said: "I liked my old job, and I was a little doubtful of the change. But now that I am actually in this civil service job, I have a feeling of marching along in the war effort that I like.

"In the average small office one person does a multitude of small jobs, some of them seemingly not at all related to the task for which she was hired. This adds variety, of course, but it can mean confusion, too.

"On my new job, I know exactly what I am to do. I know exactly what my salary is going to be. I know that my raises will come thru if I am kept on the job. And I know further that as long as I turn in satisfactory work I'll be kept on the job. It is unlikely that I'll be fired because some one just doesn't like my face. And in any case, I shan't be dismissed without a specified procedure which gives me a fair chance to tell my side of the story.

"If I am ill, I know exactly what my sick leave privileges are. And I know how much vacation I can expect. Needless to say, I miss much of the close association and friendliness of a small office. After this emergency, perhaps I shall be only too glad to try to go back to the old job or one like it. But meantime, I find being busy for the government interesting and different from any other employment I have ever had."

Fabrics Prevented from Shrinking by Chemical Process

Textile manufacturers have long been aware of the fact that certain fabrics did not hold up satisfactorily under even normal wearing conditions and were prone to sag or stretch, or perhaps shrink unmercifully in cleaning. And discriminating women who tried to wear garments made of these fabrics were more than aware of their shortcomings. Synthetic fabrics were among the greatest offenders.

Now, after years of research, chemists have hit upon a process which when applied to these wayward fibers, checks their unruly tendencies and definitely improves the fabrics into which they are woven. Grueling tests substantiate these claims. The metamorphosis is accomplished in such a way that the fabric is not altered, or its texture or pebble changed.

We have a full right to expect now, when we buy material or a dress made of a material so treated, that it will stand up with the best to the wear demanded by duty filled days, that it will clean and retain its original dimensions, that it will not stretch and sag and bulge in the back, and that it will press easily and not "grab" onto the pressing iron.

It's a new process and not all fabrics have been so treated.

D. A. R. Committee to Hear Gadshill Center Resident

The Fourth division committees on Americanism and national defense of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Illinois will have Miss Ruth Austin, head resident of Gadshill center, as guest speaker at luncheon Friday in the Carson, Pirie, Scott afternoon tearoom. "A Neighborhood Is National Defense" will be Miss Austin's theme.

In the morning the two committees will confer separately, the Americanism group assembling at 10:30 o'clock to plan the division's fall and winter work, assign days in the naturalization courts to the individual chapters, and provide for settlement service, and the national defense committee at 11:15 to discuss plans for the dissemination of war and defense information to the chapters.

Hunter Trials Will Be Held Next Sunday

By Judith Cass.

This busy week, filled with first-of-the-season business meetings and teas, will be climaxed by an outdoor event of interest to all horse followers in this area, the Longmeadow Hunter Trials, to be held next Sunday. The day-long events will get under way at 10:30 o'clock in the morning at the Longmeadow kennels in Lee road, west of Winnetka.

The popular ex-M. F. H. of the Longmeadow, Lieut. Col. Clark Lawrence, who was for many years the prop and mainstay of the hunt, and Mrs. Lawrence are returning from his army post for the trials. They and the exhibitors and members of the hunt will be guests at tea late Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hill Blackett, whose daughter, Miss Patricia Blackett, is hunt secretary and honorary whip.

• • •

The British War Relief society is to receive all the proceeds of the trials. One of the most interesting features of the day will be an exhibition of the Longmeadow hounds at 2:30 o'clock, soon after the luncheon recess. The Winnetka branch of the British War Relief society is discouraging any luncheon parties on that day, for its members are serving a picnic luncheon from which the proceeds will go to the Winnetka branch. Mrs. Kenneth Boyd and Mrs. Ernest S. Ballard are in charge of the luncheon.

Members of other hunts in this area, whether they still are meeting or not, have been invited to enter a hunter teams class. The Wayne-Du Page, the Mill Creek, the Fox River Valley, and the Lake Forest hunts will participate. Members of the armed forces and of other hunts have been invited to exhibit in an open class for hunters.

• • •

Another horse-y event is the Forest View Stables Victory horseshow, which was postponed from last Sunday to today. It will be held at the Polo field at Harms road and route 58 in Morton Grove, beginning at 12:30 o'clock. The proceeds will go to the Chicago Service Men's center.

Fifteen classes, including children's classes and a class for horsedrawn vehicles, called the 1943 transportation class, are included in the program. Some of the exhibitors are Commander and Mrs. Hinton G. Clabagh, H. Leslie Atlass, the John McGuires, and Peter Easter.

Another outdoor event today that calls for pleasant weather is an exhibition of tennis at the Town and Tennis Country club for the benefit of the Red Cross. Dorothy Round, Mary Hardwick, Bobby Riggs, and other internationally known players will take part. Members of the club's Red Cross unit, in their uniforms, will serve tea afterwards.

• • •

The St. Luke's fashion show committee hasn't an idle moment until the date of its big show, Oct. 28, at the Civic Opera house. In order to fit meetings into the busy schedules of its members, all of whom apparently head innumerable other organizations, Mrs. John W. Gary, chairman, schedules meetings for an exact number of minutes. Therefore the committee's next meeting, tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, will occupy the two hours between 2 and 4 o'clock, and no more.

The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations is meeting tomorrow too. It will be a luncheon in the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer House at which Miss Helen Kirkpatrick will speak on "Ireland and the War." On Tuesday the North Shore Vassar club and the Wells College club of Chicago and the north shore will have their first meetings. Vassar alumnæ will assemble in the Lake Forest home of Mrs. Bertram J. Cahn, where they will hear the function of the League of Women Voters in wartime explained by Mrs. Jasper King of Winnetka.

Miss Alice Barler will open her home for the Wells meeting, at which luncheon will be served. Miss Julia Martin is the new president of the Wells club.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 4, 1894.

Dear Julia: Your all-too-short visit is a sweet memory. Your telegram came, saying you had reached New York safely and found all well at your Fifth avenue home.

I feel I must write you of the death of David Swing, beloved minister of Central church, because you have met him and his family here. I knew he had not been quite well lately, but did not suppose the end was near. His two daughters, Mrs. Mason B. Starring and Mrs. Jewett E. Ricker, were with him in his Lake Shore drive home. He had spent the summer at Lake Geneva, Wis., and on his return had been interviewed by newspaper men. I was impressed with what he said to them: "I have no fishing or hunting stories to tell, because I neither hunt nor fish. Ten years ago I did fish, but now life seems to me too sacred for me to rob the meanest creature of it."

So many of his words come back with force, now that he is gone. The last sentence of his last sermon, which was on the labor troubles of last July, was quoted in one of our papers this morning. He seemed much burdened by the condition of the world and said very solemnly: "O that God, by His Almighty power, may hold back our nation from destruction for a few more perilous years, that it may learn where lie the paths in which, as brothers just and loving, all may walk, to the most of excellence and the most of happiness!"

Prof. Swing was easily, I suppose, the most influential minister in Chicago during the last 20 years. He was born in Cincinnati, his father having been a steamboat captain on the Ohio river. His mother was a devoted Presbyterian, who left the imprint of her character on him. The father died early from cholera, that dreadful disease.

David Swing obtained his higher education at Miami university, Oxford, O. He studied for the ministry, but had not completed his course when his alma mater persuaded him to return as professor of Latin and Greek. To his dying day he liked to be called "Professor" Swing, rather than Reverend Doctor, for he loved the profession of teaching. Called to Chicago in 1866 as minister of the Westminster Presbyterian church, he became very popular, his influence leading to a union of the North and Westminster Presbyterian churches under the name Fourth Presbyterian church.

The great fire of 1871 destroyed his church building, his home, and his valuable library—he and his family spending the night of Oct. 9, with many others, shelterless on the prairie.

After the fire his congregation for a time leased McVickers theater until the church was rebuilt. Throngs had followed him to the downtown services and they came with him to the north side, Rush and Superior streets, the present Fourth church location. His popularity excited some envy, I think, in the breasts of those with smaller congregations and they demanded that he be disciplined by presbytery for what they called heresy.

The Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, then editor of "The Interior," the church paper, but now president of Princeton college, preferred charges against him to the effect that he was guilty of holding and preaching heresy. This famous trial came in 1874. Prof. Swing was defended by Dr. George C. Noyes and by the great hearted Dr. Robert W. Patterson of Second Presbyterian church, both men of large influence in the northwest. Prof. Swing himself explained his utterances and he was acquitted by presbytery, the local organization of Presbyterian churches. But those who had started the action weren't satisfied and announced their intention of carrying the case to a meeting of synod, the state organization. So Prof. Swing, unwilling to be a source of discord in the church, withdrew from presbytery and from the pastorate of Fourth church. But he had so many devoted followers that a group of 50 men guaranteed a thousand dollars a year each for the work of an independent church and thus Central church was born, meeting first in McVivkers theater. Later, a stock company was formed, and the building known as Central Music hall was erected with a fine auditorium, which you have seen, and stores and business offices whose rental brings a fair return, Will says, on an estimated value of half a million dollars. Prof. Swing was a wonderful man. No one can take his place in Chicago. His funeral will, of course, be held in Central Music hall. Ever with love.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Hoosier Avenue.

Jim Denvir, 6 north Hamlin avenue, writes: "Do any of your readers remember when Blue Island avenue on the west side had as its official name Hoosier avenue?" Our correspondent tells us that the last time Blue Island avenue appeared on the map as Hoosier avenue was in 1849-'50, and the last time it appeared in the city directory under that name was in 1868. The name was probably given it in early days, says Frederick Rex, city librarian, because farmers coming into Chicago with grain from Indiana took this road.

Definition of a Gentleman.

Many readers have sent in definitions of the word, and some are exceedingly good. There is still time to try for the prize, a copy of the "Victorian Keepsake." In a note accompanying her entry a correspondent writes: "Memory brings to mind an army officer in the gas mask factory where I worked during the first World war. As we became busier he excused himself for not rising, because it would be impossible for him to rise each time one of the factory women employés entered, and he wished to treat all women with equal deference."

Grad's Duties in War Are Clubs' Topic

Mrs. Marme Logsdon.

Has the university graduate a special responsibility in the war effort? This question will be the principal topic of two of the city's prominent university clubs this week. It will be given close study in a panel discussion by six members of the Chicago branch of the American Association of University Women, at the opening fall meeting of the association, Tuesday evening in the Alliance Française room, 410 South Michigan avenue.

The discussion will center in the association's two-fold theme for the coming year: The contribution of the American Association of University Women to the war effort, and the rôle of women of the united nations working for victory.

• • •

Participants on the panel will be Mrs. Mayme I. Logsdon, associate professor of mathematics at the University of Chicago and former president of the Chicago branch of the association; Miss Ethel Kawin, noted psychologist and lecturer in education; Miss Mima Maxey, instructor in humanities and adviser in the four year college at the University of Chicago; Miss Bernice Munson, who is in charge of the association's guide service at the Chicago Service Men's center; Miss Marion Stein, chairman of fellowship; and Miss Meredith Ward, office manager of the International Council of Religious Education.

Interested Chicagoans have been invited by Mrs. Edmond H. Hoben, president of the Chicago branch, to attend the discussion.

• • •

A new war effort activity on the part of the Chicago Catholic University club will be announced by Harker Stanton, president, at the opening autumn meeting of the club this afternoon from 3 to 7 in the Roosevelt room of the Morrison hotel. The club is, at the present time, sponsoring a unit of volunteer workers for making surgical dressings for the Red Cross.

Miss Georgette Thoss will be hostess to the members of the club, their friends, and the service men from Abbott hall and Unit No. 1 of the army air corps at the former Stevens hotel, who have been invited as special guests. Dancing and refreshments will conclude the afternoon.

• • •

The first fall meeting of the Chicago Wells College club will be held jointly with that of the Evanston-North Shore Wells club at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday in the home of Miss Alice Barler, 436 Arlington place. Mrs. Carl Johnson of Winnetka will review "The Year of the Wild Boar," by Helen Mears. Co-chairmen of the meeting will be Mrs. Julia Martin of the South Shore Country club, president of the Chicago Wells College club, and Mrs. Arthur W. Walsh of Winnetka, president of the Evanston-North Shore branch.

• • •

"Chemical Warfare" will be discussed by Dr. Otto Eisenschiml, noted author and chemist, at the first of the Ferry Hall Alumnae luncheons of the fall series Wednesday in the home of Mrs. Ira Jay Ingraham, 1015 Noyes street, Evanston.

Dr. Eisenschiml will analyze the use of chemistry in three wars, revealing what chemists did in previous sieges and what American chemists are doing, and not doing, to help win the present war. Prominent as a creative scientist, the speaker also is known for his work, "Why Was Lincoln Murdered?" and soon will publish another book entitled, "Without Fame."

Mrs. A. H. Bryan of Chicago and Mrs. George Smith of Glenview will be co-hostesses at the luncheon.

• • •

A. C. Wang, attaché to the Chinese consulate here, will be presented by the Menorah society of Northwestern university as its first forum speaker of the season this afternoon in the Morrison hotel. He will speak on "The Crucial Phase of the War." Henry F. Levin, president, will conduct the meeting.

Guest night, with a surprise program, will be held by the Beta Alpha chapter of Pi Omicron national sorority, Thursday evening in the Medical and Dental Arts building, 185 North Wabash avenue. Dinner at 6 will precede the meeting. Reservations should be made with Sylvia Bender, president.

Dorothy Wilbur Wed to Edward Stuart in West

Mrs. J. Ralph Wilbur of Evanston announces the marriage of her daughter, Dorothy, to Edward John Stuart, 2d class petty officer in the United States navy. The wedding took place on Sept. 17 in the First Congregational church at San Diego, Cal., where Mr. Stuart and his bride will live. He is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Whitman of Evanston, with whom he made his home before entering the service.

String Quartet to Open Season of Woman's Aid

A musical by the Fine Arts String quartet will open the 60th season of the Chicago Woman's Aid at 3 o'clock Tuesday in the fifth floor auditorium of the Medical and Dental Arts building, 185 North Wabash avenue. After the program, Mrs. Magnus B. Rosenberg, president, and her staff will receive at tea in the clubrooms. Artists comprising the quartet are Leonard Sorkin, first violin; Ben Senescu, second violin; Sheppard Lehnhoff, viola; and Karl Fruh, cellist.

With the experience of 59 years of community service to draw upon, the Aid is organizing a three-front program to meet the challenge of the most critical period in its history. To further the war effort and sustain morale, the welfare department will carry forward its full assignment of philanthropic services; the public affairs department will concentrate its attention upon the city government, particularly in those functions which would be most likely to deteriorate under the war stress; program and other committees will work in the field of morale-building thru education, keeping the membership informed on problems in government, world events and community needs as they develop.

Charities Are Offering Fall Film Service

All women's organizations that have had contact with social problems and welfare work in Chicago in the days of peace realize how immeasurably greater is the challenge presented to their philanthropic programs under war conditions. No agency has more intimate knowledge of the new problems and what they portend in relation to morale than does the United Charities' family welfare service.

Current data on the social problems affecting Chicago's home front will be made available, thru lectures and moving pictures, to clubs and civic organizations by the United Charities' speakers' bureau, Joel D. Hunter, general superintendent of the agency, announced last week. The bureau will furnish, without charge, to clubs, schools, and civic groups the following lectures:

• • •

"Welfare Work in Wartime," a report of new social problems found by family welfare workers in their daily contact with the blighted sections of the city.

"Unwanted Babies," a report on the wartime aspects of illegitimacy.

"Door-Key Children," explaining the plight of the children of women workers who, carrying the key to home on a string around their necks, are left unsupervised and uncared for while their mothers work.

"Volunteer Service to Boys," a story of how business men, by devoting as little as one hour a week to fatherless boys, are helping to curb juvenile delinquency.

"Legal Aid and Home Morale," on work of the United Charities legal aid bureau in procuring justice for the needy.

"Can Human Nature Be Changed?" family service work of the United Charities thru psychiatric social workers to help persons failing in work, marriage, or parenthood.

• • •

Also available are leaders for panel discussion on these and other welfare topics, and a 20 minute technicolor film of Camp Algonquin, summer camp for underprivileged mothers and children on the Fox river.

The club service has been organized, Mr. Hunter explains, "because increased public understanding of Chicago's social problems helps the United Charities to deal with them more effectively."

Plant to Cure Chinese Grows in Wisconsin

By Chester Holway.

SPIRIT FALLS, WIS.

I have come up from the Superior plain into the hills. On the first rise I have stopped to look back at the enchanted Apostle Islands and the fingering green of the Bayfield peninsula. There is a curious illusion: If you will put your pencil to a highway map of this region you will note that highway 112, were it extended across the southern end of Chequamegon bay, would very nearly be coincidental with highway 13 from Barksdale to Washburn. The illusion from where I stand is that the bay is only a blue puddle in one continuing road.

The peninsula beyond the puddle is crosshatched with tan stripes — the little roads that visitors never travel.

Again my way dips and rises. Fields of sweet clover assail me with gusts of perfume. The leaves of trees, washed of haying dust by a morning shower, flicker in the sun. Streams are hurrying Chattahoochees, Superior bent. Roadside inns hang out such names as Hillside Happy Hour Tavern, and Planked Trout. With the pitching of the road, the horizon behind me [I cannot resist looking backward] rises and sinks—as tho I were on a ship at sea.

• • •

Just before I come into Mellen I roll over the crest of the range and take a final backward look: north and westward the ever-rolling hills are lavender, and off to the east bright green; straight to the north Superior's water is a narrow silver band across the plain.

Now past outcropped brownstone rock, thru a cut in a hill, a new red wound, and then Mellen, a bright, clean little city, pleasant with flowers and trees. Beyond, the road begins to throw itself up against the hills, like a skier, fishtailing. Ripe clover runs along the highway shoulders, parallel bands of red. Cayuga village goes by, and a school children's forest, and Butternut, where huge trucks piled high with logs recall an era. Once these logs ran down to market in the rivers; now, like common cheese and potatoes, they ride the highways on rubber tires. From calk-booted riverman to truck driver is a long way.

At Park Falls I ride beside a baby forest, young pines standing proudly up to 20 inches and saying, every one of them: "Watch me grow!" I pass a barn whose side proclaims: "John 8:19."

• • •

At Prentice, a weary little flat place without a single visible tree higher than a house [but it has that ever-present I. O. O. F. hall], I quit the main highway for a little road, named C, that curls away to the southeast. I have the feeling that it will lead to something interesting, and it does. This road once was corduroy. Here and there in worn patches the old logs lying underneath the black topping show themselves.

Charred stumps remind me that this land was run with fire after it was cut. Today, in place of the old pines, a new forest is in the making, lifting its darker green little by little thru the rank of popple. In lower spots, the tamarack, never much esteemed by lumbermen, goes on soaking its feet and languidly hanging out its feathers in the breeze. Cows are grazing along the way. The rolling crunch of my tires, scarcely noticed by the cows, sends a startled trio of lambs clipping up a hillside and out of sight.

• • •

The "something interesting" is a ginseng plantation. A strange agricultural pursuit, this growing of the ginseng plant, for the market is not the nearby town, or even the more distant city. It is nothing nearer than China. Ginseng, a corruption of a Pekinese Chinese word, jen-shen, is an herb with a root possessing—say the Chinese—occult curative powers. The Chinese were apparently never able to grow enough of it to satisfy their needs, and when the plant was discovered growing wild in the United States some time in the early 1700s the root became a profitable export.

Now, to be very scholarly about it, I must point out that the American plant, Panax quinquefolium [Linnaeus] is not the Chinese plant, Panax schinseng [Meyer]. But apparently that makes little difference — if she knows the difference—to the Chinese housewife. Indeed, skeptical western medicos say the root's curative powers rest largely upon the faith of the taker.

• • •

Here is a ginseng plantation. It is more interesting from a distance than it is close up. To shade the plants from too much direct sun, they are cultivated under slat tents. From a distance you can easily imagine that an army has flung itself across the hillside and gone into silent camp. And when you see that you have seen the plantation.

I speculate idly to myself on the efficacy of the root. I am afraid that the Chinese now suffer an illness that the ginseng cannot cure.

This innocent little road C, which has pleased me for the moment by skirting a ginseng harem, jumps maliciously into highway 86, a cross-woods way that links Ogema and Tomahawk. For 10 miles it whips and wiggles as tho it were delighted that I had fallen into its clutches, a traveler in spite of myself. It sidles by a little lake where farm youngsters are skippering toy ships. It plunges into the midst of an old forest, lifting and dropping in gentle rolls. To both sides the woods are dark and dense—hemlock and birch, cedar and oak and pine.

• • •

At a widened turnaround I stop to poke around a pile of new-cut logs. The smallest stick has a butt of 16 inches; the largest, 23. The "age" rings on the new cut are clear, and I count them: one hundred and thirty-five. I forget that scientists now say a tree may grow more than one "ring" in a year, and try to remember what was taking place when this red pine was a new-born seedling. That, I calculate, would be 1804, when Wisconsin was Indian Territory, governed by Gen. William Henry Harrison.

Only four years previously a Spanish gunboat patroled the Mississippi as far north as Prairie du Chien because the Spanish in St. Louis feared a British-inspired Indian attack. Then the Spanish transferred the Louisiana territory back to France, and Thomas Jefferson paid Napoleon 15 million dollars for it. People were still talking about that and about how Vice President Aaron Burr had killed Alexander Hamilton in a duel in early July when, as the first snow fell on this forest, President Jefferson was thumpingly reëlected.

At the widening in the road that has stolen the name of Spirit Falls from the falls itself, where the Spirit river throws its waters in a burst of exuberance over a tumble of boulders and cracked ledges, I surprise three farm boys, wearing only overall pants and dousing themselves in the pools below the falls. City boys would have stripped, or ducked around in their underpants; but not these farm boys. Their overalls they seem wholly unable to lay aside. Their bodies are pink and white, except where necks and wrists are red and brown.

Once a timber railway bridge, probably a spur on a logging road, crossed the river here at Spirit Falls. But the rails have since been lifted, high water and spring ice have had their way, and the bridge has been ripped and splintered and thrust aside. Nature, in her own way, has a modest blitzkrieg once in a while, too.

This beaten bridge is a ruin typical of the country. In a plain sort of way it takes the place of aqueducts and Roman walls and ivied castles. And if you have any sort of imagination you can conjure up romance and adventure here beside the Spirit river just as surely as you can beside a castle moat.

A FORGOTTEN PROJECT.

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 23.—To the Travel Editor: In reply to R. O. Park's request in last Sunday's "Voice of the Traveler," for information concerning Chambers Island in Green Bay, Wis., I think I can safely say that his estimate of $50,000 value of buildings is away low, and I am quite sure the late Sam Insull had no part in any project connected with the place.

Up to about 15 years ago the island and buildings had been used as a girls' camp out of Milwaukee. It was then taken over by a syndicate of Chicago business men, with the intention of developing it into a high class summer resort, and I believe the younger Insull was a member of the group.

In September of 1927 I was sent to the island and, with a crew of men recruited from Fish Creek and surrounding areas, put in about seven months' preliminary work. We tore down and burned several old buildings, repaired others, built a warehouse at the pier, loaded the pier with hundreds of tons of boulders, cleaned up the shoreline of thousands of fence posts washed up from a wreck, built and filled a large ice house—took about 65 tons of ice—and during the extremely cold weather the men were in the woods cutting up many cords of wood for the future.

As I recall it, the project called for a tremendous amount of development—polo fields, airplane landing fields, miles of bridle paths, new piers, and a breakwater. It was also hoped that a channel could be cut thru from the bay to the inland lake, but a rough survey proved the lake level to be about six feet higher than the bay.

At that time the island held considerable deer—somewhat undersized, due to lack of new blood—and it was suggested that the entire herd be driven over to Peninsula State park or that new bucks be imported. Several of these deer were quite tame, and one young one, which had been trained by the caretaker's son, would walk right into the house and on several occasions went right upstairs.

I could write pages about happenings up there—experiences I shall never forget—the highlight probably being the trip the caretaker took with me to return to the island after walking over the ice to the mainland. The next morning we woke up to find the wind had changed, the ice was running out, and there was about two miles of open water. We had left the caretaker's wife and boy alone, with not too much food, and how we took a boat from a closed summer home, found an outboard motor, pushed over the ice, and eventually arrived at the island is quite a story.

But from what I hear, the place has been completely neglected and somewhat vandalized. The value of the buildings at that time I am quite sure of, as I made the first fairly accurate inventory.

I should imagine the Door County Advocate is still published in Sturgeon Bay, and I am sure Mr. Park could obtain more information from that source.

JOHN H. PATERSON.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—To the Travel Editor: Referring to an inquiry by R. O. Park in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Sept. 20:

I can inform him that about 2,300 acres was subdivided and owned, in 1926 to 1929, by the Chambers' Island Home association. The principal owners and promoters were prominent Chicagoans. I do not think that Mr. Insull's name appeared among them.

The intention of the association, no doubt, was to establish a large and exclusive summer colony, of which the buildings mentioned were the nucleus. This is one of those things the 1929 depression left in its wake.

If Mr. Park should want further information, he will be able to find it in the recorder's office of Door county, Wisconsin, at Sturgeon Bay.

MEXICO'S RAINY SEASON.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—To the Travel Editor: My favorite section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE is the one devoted to travel. Whenever you have printed anything about Mexico, it has been to the point and nearly always accurate. However, last Sunday you said, in answer to a reader's query: "The rainy season in that country generally lets up about mid-November." That is not entirely correct.

The rainy season in Mexico is largely limited to the summer months. The rains generally begin early in June and continue intermittently to the end of September, with occasional showers in both May and October. Records show that the average rainfall in Mexico City is 4 inches or more in each of June, July, August, and September, but that it is only 1.3 inches in October, and .5 inches in November.

It's really a wonderful climate!

G. HAWLEY,

FOR THE DURATION.

Bartlett, Ill., Sept. 22.—To the Travel Editor:

We see no more on the highways
Jalopies with banners gay,
Telling of trips to seashores,
And the mountains far away.

For the lads are traveling on troop trains
To foreign lands afar.
And jacked up in the family garage
Is the little old shaky car.

And the banner they carry is Old Glory,
With its stripes of red and white,
Which they will defend and safeguard,
If need be with all their might.

But when the war is over,
Once more on the highways we'll see
The lads in their old jalopies,
Sporting banners of Victory.

A Wayside Park Every 30 Miles

TORONTO, Ont. — More than 50 public wayside parks in a distance of 1,200 miles is the figure on Ontario's section of the new Trans-Canada highway, nearing completion in northern Ontario.

This means an average of one park every 30 miles where motorists in postwar travel years may pull out of the stream of traffic to cook a meal, eat a picnic lunch, pitch a tent for a few days' stay, or simply rest and enjoy the view.

There were more than 200 such areas in Ontario before the war.

Iguassu Falls Nearly Twice as Big as Niagara

[This is the 55th article in a series on South America. The next will appear in an early issue.]

By Mason Warner.

IGUASSU FALLS, ARGENTINA.

While we were motoring thru the wilderness toward Iguassu falls, then five miles distant, we became conscious of the sound of falling water. It did not sound like the rolling of far away thunder; it was more like the sustained beating of myriads of African jungle drums, rather pleasant to hear. As we approached, the rapid rhythmic cadence grew louder—so loud that when our car entered the grounds of the hotel we had to raise our voices to be heard.

It is trite to say that our first view of Iguassu falls was awe-inspiring. But it is true. All that ultra-enthusiastic travelers have said and written about the beauty and grandeur of Iguassu is factual.

• • •

The huge semicircle of the descending flood is so vast that it seems to occupy the middle half of the horizon. Cold comparative statistics will convey a better picture of the scene than will rapturous adjectives. So here they are:

The total width of Niagara, including American and Horseshoe falls, is 4,670 feet. Victoria falls, in Africa, measures 7,600 feet from edge to edge. Iguassu is 8,860 feet, nearly twice as wide as Niagara.

At Niagara the height of Horseshoe falls is 158 feet, of the American falls, 167 feet. At Victoria, the Main falls are 353 feet deep; the Rainbow, 354; the Eastern Cataract, 350. The highest fall at Iguassu is 327 feet [military measure]; the lowest, 215.

I have not the figure relating to the volume of water going over the different falls, but it seems on viewing them that Iguassu has the largest, with Niagara second, and Victoria third. Approximately 210,000 cubic feet of water per second—equal to about 4,950,000 horse power—flows over Niagara falls.

• • •

I know well the entangling controversies a travel writer encounters when he compares the attractions of the scenic wonders of the world. I am aware of the fact that outstanding phenomena of geologic convulsions of the earth have little in common. The Himalayas, the Andes, the Rockies, the Alps, all are high, snow-capped mountain ranges, but each has individual characteristics that set any one apart from the others. It is downright silly to say that one is more beautiful, prodigious, or amazing than another. "Comparisons are odious."

However, I find it impossible to write a word picture of Iguassu without referring to Niagara and Victoria. I do not intend to choose any one of the world's three great water falls as the most wonderful. Altho decidedly different, to me they are equally dazzling spectacles.

Iguassu resembles Niagara in one particular. The Iguassu river is the boundary line between Brazil and Argentina, just as the Niagara separates Canada and the United States. Part of Iguassu falls are in Argentina and part in Brazil. If you look to the west, down the Iguassu, you can see the high bluffs of Paraguay, a third country, on the west bank of the Parana river.

There are no signs of civilization nearby. The falls are situated in a wilder spot in the savage wilderness than are Victoria falls in Africa, and fewer signs of mankind's presence are to be seen. Rocky gorges, rugged landscapes, and uninviting jungle surround the hotel built for the accommodation of sightseers. No railroad is within several hundred miles. The only travelers thereabouts are river tourists in limited numbers. The hotel is first class, but few facilities for viewing the falls are provided, as at Niagara, Victoria, and Seta Quedas.

• • •

The longer we lingered at Iguassu, the greater grew our appreciation of the wonders of the falls. Their vastness and volume seemed to grow day by day. Every night the roaring of the falling waters increased in its booming melodic power to lull one to sleep.

For four days we clambered up and down slippery rocks, on one occasion down 300 feet from the crest of the cliffs—to the get to the foot of the falls and gaze up wonder stricken at the tumbling water.

We walked miles thru the encircling jungle to get to vantage points to view the falls from different angles, always a tiring and trying march, but changing views kept us going cheerfully on and on.

One afternoon we engaged three Indians and their canoe to paddle us over to the Brazilian side. The Iguassu river gathers its waters into a lake nearly three miles wide above the falls. Projecting rock ledges split the falling stream at Iguassu, just as Goat Island, Three Sisters and Terrapin Rock divide Niagara.

• • •

The Indians beached the canoe on islands twice on the crossing, and young Mason and I had to get out and walk, while the natives carried the canoe over small rapids between the rocks.

We gazed down the "Devil's Throat." That was where two great streams flowing over a V-shape in the precipice met, clashed, tore into each other, tangled and struggled like two troups of fighting, clawing, biting wildcats.

While resting on the lee side of one of the rocks, a 16 inch alligator swam near the canoe and tried to climb up a paddle held still by one of the guides. It could not make it, and fell back into the water.

On Mason's account I pretended to enjoy the trip more than I really did. I flew over Victoria falls in a 12 year old plane, kept in repair [almost rebuilt] by native black boys, and did not experience as many doubts and misgivings as I did when canoeing above Iguassu—particularly when the fast flowing current seemed to take hold of our little craft and pull it toward the falls, and the Indians had to paddle all too energetically to keep it pointed for the river shore.

Watch Hill Is Ready for Sub Victims

WATCH HILL, R. I.

If a ship is torpedoed this winter off the New England coast between Long Island and Cape Cod, and survivors struggle ashore on the desolate beaches of Rhode Island, they would hardly expect to find help and care at a deserted summer resort.

Yet they would be most fortunate if they landed at Watch Hill, famous old seashore vacation haunt where many Chicagoans and other midwesterners have spent many summer holidays.

Watch Hill is normally a three or four month community, but it has made provision for emergency relief during the winter months when all the cottages and hotels are boarded up. Victims of disaster would be taken by the coast guard to the Watch Hill Casualty station, which the summer colonists established and have left fully equipped for service. A corps of volunteer Red Cross first aid workers recruited from the few all-year residents have been left in charge and will swing into action with the coast guard at a minute's call.

• • •

This casualty station is a substantial unit in the setup of coastal defense and has received high praise from military and civilian defense officials. Located a short distance from the beach, it occupies the ground floor of the Watch Hill Union chapel. Twenty beds, ready for immediate use, with more that could be set up if needed, are placed in the large high-ceilinged rooms, which have air and sunshine from many windows. First aid and Red Cross supplies, medical equipment, and a canteen stocked with food have been provided. Big heaters with a well filled fuel box of coal and wood will keep the station warm no matter how harsh the winter.

It took many hours out of the usual round of golf and social events to get Watch Hill's Casualty station started and equipped, and if any justification were needed for the opening of a seashore resort on the New England coast last June, it is amply supplied by what the summer colonists have done at Watch Hill. Their achievement is a splendid example of community coöperation, especially meritorious because theirs was only a transient community.

It came about largely because a few of Watch Hill's summer residents were present on one of the beaches in Florida last winter and saw the helplessness of the crowd which gathered when survivors came ashore from a torpedoed tanker. Half drowned, oil covered, burned, and hysterical sailors were met by curious sightseers who had no organization or skill to give aid, and precious time was lost before help arrived. To avoid such a lack of emergency preparation on the shores of Rhode Island, the Watch Hill people determined to take immediate steps when they arrived early in the summer to organize the resort for disaster relief.

• • •

It was indeed a different Watch Hill from previous seasons. The dim-out of the street lights and the altering of the brilliant flashes of the Watch Hill lighthouse to a small, dull beam were the most conspicuous changes, but people soon got used to these. Everybody took the dim-out of house lights facing the sea as a matter of course. In addition to vacant cottages, there were many shops, altho those that did open did a fairly satisfactory business. But Watch Hill by day was as beautiful as ever, and there was no change in the buoyant tonic of the sea air and the bathing, the principal attractions.

• • •

It might be said that the summer colonists of Watch Hill "converted" a plant which normally produces nothing but recreation into a well equipped and disciplined organization.

Following the selection of an executive committee, on which Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr. of Chicago, was appointed as chairman of the canteen service, plans were carried out for setting up a sector post, making Watch Hill a unit in the Rhode Island system of civilian defense. Soon a volunteer force of women manned the information desk in the centrally located building which was turned over by the Improvement society for the purpose, and telephone communication was established to handle air raid warnings. A census of all the people then at Watch Hill was taken, with data of their experience and availability as workers.

Courses of instruction were given for Red Cross first aid, staff assistants, and air raid wardens. There were demonstrations of putting out incendiary bombs. A motor corps was organized, with beach wagons converted into ambulances equipped with stretchers, blankets and first aid kits. The younger boys and girls also went into action with a messenger service and collected hundreds of pounds of rubber and over six tons of scrap metal, an amount that showed Watch Hill was more than doing its part, compared to other communities.

All of the organizations and training for the civilian defense program were entered into with enthusiasm by the summer colonists and became the chief interests, with parties and sports becoming side shows. There were few men, except at week-ends when husbands and guests, many of them in uniform, would come up from their acceleration courses at Harvard, Dartmouth, M. I. T., and Yale. Two students, John Groton of Harvard and Bill Graham of Yale, came week-ends to sail the only two Herreshoff yachts in commission, and they were given a special citation by the commodore for making it possible to maintain the club's schedule. Five Aldens were raced three times a week by the younger-than-college age boys and girls, for whom it was the grandest of all seasons. They were busy all the time, either with their duties at the sector post or with their parties and competitions.

With so much civilian defense activity going on every day, it was feared that people might be frightened away from the resort, but the reverse was true. The reports sent out now told of the splendid patriotic job Watch Hill was doing, and many came to satisfy their curiosity. The Beach club had such a good season that it paid off all of its debt and had a balance in the bank. This club was the popular rendezvous Saturday mornings, and no matter how many guests the steward prepared for at his buffet luncheons there were often twice as many to be fed, due to the large number of week-end guests.

Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps, of Chicago, who enjoyed the distinction of winning the women's golf championship ten times in 15 years, has been the leading spirit at the Misquamicut Golf club in organizing its match program. She arrived at the Hill early in August and at once started the annual women's tournament. Mrs. Phelps lost her title this year after a closely fought match to Princess Anita Lobkowicz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Bai Lihme, formerly of Chicago.

One of the highlights of the season was the open air concert given by the 181st regimental band of the the Yankee division, which was a tribute to Watch Hill from the men and officers of nearby Camp Burlingame who had been invited to play the Misquamicut Golf club course at their pleasure. Everybody turned out for the concert and tea, and a substantial sum was raised for the Red Cross.

Watch Hill's season, in fact, was typical of the American as well as the British tenacity of "carrying on" so far as possible the normal way of living. The summer colonists came for vacation recreation especially for the children, and the patriotic activities made the season more fully appreciated than ever before.

The organization of the casualty station was the major job of the summer. Dr. Edmund LeRoy Dow, of New York and Palm Beach, was appointed medical director, and gave the largest part of his time to getting the accommodations and equipment ready. A. Clifford Shinkle of Cincinnati, president of the Watch Hill Chapel society, offered the use of the ground floor of the Chapel building, and the rooms were prepared for the purpose. Oren E. Taft, of Chicago, and Mr. Shinkle assisted Dr. Dow in the project. As soon as Dr. Dow made known a list of things he needed there was a flood of donations of all kinds. Some gave beds, others blankets, mattress covers and what not down the list until the station had every item of equipment that a well set up hospital ward has to offer. Gifts of money also came to take care of necessary repairs.

Unearth Warlike Construction of Another Period

TORONTO, Ont.—In the shadow of the world's largest inland shipyards, at Midland, Ont., now engaged in turning out ships for the united nations, archaeologists from the Royal Ontario museum at Toronto are excavating the ruins of the first major fortifications on the American continent west of Quebec City—the ruins of old Fort Ste. Marie, built in 1639 by the French Jesuits as a stronghold to protect the Christianized Hurons against the warlike Iroquois Indians.

Besides laying the foundation for a religious shrine of importance, this excavation work on the shores of Georgian bay is bringing to light many hitherto unknown details of the lives of the first white men in this part of the country. It has revealed evidence of the first manufacture of metal tools, earthen ware and mortar. The mortar used in building the stone bastions of the fort is still visible.

One of the discoveries was that of a 300 year old petrified egg—evidence that the Jesuits brought the domestic hen to Ontario as early as 1639. Fort Ste. Marie was also the site of the first hospital, the first social service work, and the first experimental farm in North America.
